Condominims on Harris Lake possible

A multi-family complex on Harris Lake might not be dead in the water after all.

At the Aug. 16 Town Board meeting, developer Bill Nellis convinced commissioners that the four, four-plex buildings and one single-family home on 4.4 acres on Harris Lake and its "Picnic Park" deeded to the town was the lesser of two evils. But more importantly, he said it was a wise use of the property.

"Four units in four buildings leaves more open space, more undisturbed forested areas and a public park on a waterfront," said Nellis. "You won't have the lake lined with massive houses. And if you think that scenario's not going to happen, you have your heads buried in the sand."

He said economics won't

Just in time for the first day of school, Friday, Aug. 25, the last few vacancies at Highlands School have been filled.

At Monday night's Macon County School Board meeting,

Weekend Weather:

members took care of a lot of personnel business and filled several positions.

With board approval, Terry Bradley joins the administration as Assistant Principal at Highlands School. He takes over for Mark Thomas who went to Louisiana.

Bradley is married with two children, an eight-month old and an 11-year-old. He has a bachelors in art degree in physical education from the University of South Carolina and a masters in education administration and supervision. He was a teacher and coach in South Carolina from 1985-1999; assistant principal at Newberry Middle School in Newberry, S.C. from 2001-2004 and a biology teacher at Newberry High School from 2004-2006. He also taught at Walhalla, S.C.

"You come to a point when you start looking for a good place to raise your kids and this is it," he said Tuesday, at the "Meet the Principal" affair at Highlands School.

Restaurants get 'parking' reprieve

The parking issue for four restaurants outside the B1 zoning district may be nearing a resolution.

At the Aug. 16 Town Board meeting, commissioners heard from the owner of Don Leon's restaurant concerning parking restraints that could affect his ability to do business in the years to come.

"We are living with an axe over our heads," said Leon. "This is a frustrating way to do business."

Don Leon's is one of four restaurants in town which fall under the old ordinance allowing remote parking at another establishment if within a 400-foot radius

Riverwalk, revisited

Dear Editor,

Readings from recent newspaper stories regarding the Riverwalk development, concerns over a project of this magnitude voiced at the original Planning Board meetings, are, unfortunately, proving to be well founded.

In finance, there is a procedure called "Due Diligence." and, it refers to the process of research and analysis that takes place in advance of an investment. In lay terms, due diligence is the responsibility one has to investigate and identify issues, and due care is doing something about the findings from due diligence. From the issues raised in newspaper coverage of recent meetings of the Planning Commission and the Town Board concerning Riverwalk, it is becoming increasingly apparent that there was not a whole lot of due diligence involved in the genesis and subsequent approval of this development. I realize the advantage that exists in using hindsight to identify problems associated with Riverwalk, but on the rare occasion for Highlands of developing a subdivision with 68 homes carrying a potential resale value of $50,000,000 plus warrants a project retrospective.

Ecological concerns of silt runoff into Cullasaja River and ultimately to an already endangered Mirror Lake are now a reality. Despite remedying erosion control, the original silt genie cannot be put back in the bottle. The change in management responsibility at this time is also disturbing, in that the new principal managing partner, Don Chandler, is quoted as saying "This is the biggest project either Bill (Turrentine, brother of the original managing partner, Tom Turrentine) or I have ever been involved in and we think it's the most important project to the town and will have the biggest impact."

In addition to improved analysis of new constructions permits, the problems associated with this project require the Town Board revisit previous recommendations for a full time compliance officer, and adopt penalties for non-compliance that have significant financial impact. Currently, Zoning Administrator, Larry Gatenbein, has a duty full plate and can't be expected to be fully responsible for compliance matters.

The Highlands Plateau has a finite

O'Neil confused about the issues

Dear Editor,

I have little respect for someone who not only misquotes me in the newspaper but also has little respect himself for a community which is trying to protect itself against poor development planning.

He is putting his individual needs (i.e., perceived excessive noise) above the greater good of the community.

Our Board of Commissioners has bent over backwards to appease Bob O'Neil by changing the noise ordinance.

The Town will interpret this ordinance in appropriate ways for the good of the storm watershed area, the protection of our streams and lakes and for the entire community regardless of the unreasonable musings of one unhappy individual who never seems satisfied.

A heart-felt farewell

Dear Editor,

Let me be the first to publicly express my gratitude and appreciation to outgoing school board chairman Kevin Corbin for his 23 years of service to the children of Macon County.

For the past eight years, it has been my pleasure to work with Chairman Corbin and the school board so that the county and the school board together could build two new schools and renovate numerous others, such as East Franklin Elementary. Chairman Corbin's ability to bring our school district to 7th out of 115 school districts in computer connectivity is evidence of his skill in working together with the commissioners and other stakeholders to provide top quality education for Macon County students.

I wish the best to Kevin, Beth, and their family in their new business venture. I know that the children of Macon County will be foremost in the heart of Kevin Corbin. A heartfelt thank-you.

The Cox brothers

By Susanna Forrester
Reporter

Growing up in Highlands doesn't always prepare you for the rest of your life, but it doesn't limit the places you can go in life, either. Just ask the Cox brothers.

"It was a unique way to grow up—small school, everyone knows each other, everybody who wants to can play varsity sports, etc.," said Dr. Christopher Cox, a 1988 graduate of Highlands School. "Plus you were forced to deal with, learn from, and relate to others who had different backgrounds than your own."

Dr. Cox's experience in high school didn't prepare him for college life, but this didn't stop him from working hard to succeed. "I went to the University of North Carolina for college, the Medical University of South Carolina for med school, New York University for residency, University of North Carolina for a Master of Public Health degree, and Duke for my fellowship," said Dr. Cox, who now works as a pulmonary & critical care medicine clinician and researcher at Duke University.

Dr. Cox's brother, Reuben, took a more artistic path and gathered much of his inspiration from his childhood in Highlands. He can name off a number of Highlands personalities that continue to inspire him to this day.

"When home from college, I would make regular visits to the home of the photographer, W. Burton Talbot, who lived in the old Talley homestead in Buck Creek, one of the oldest houses in Highlands," said Cox, a professional photographer who divides his time between Scaly Mt., NC and New York City. "One of Talbot's cameras, a 1968 Leica M4, given to me by his daughter, Kandi, continues to be one of my main cameras to this day."

Reuben Cox attended Highlands School from kindergarten until 10th grade. Then in September 1988 he enrolled at The North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics in Durham, N.C. where he graduated in the spring of 1990. He studied photography from 1990 to 1994 at The Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and Art in New York City.

Both Cox brothers have distinct memories about their childhood experience in Highlands. "I grew up in a 1950s log cabin in Buck Creek that was built by the local logging company for dances. My mother painted, and drove an Austin Healey; my father was an architect with an affinity for the futurist Archigram group," said Cox. "I didn't know what decade it was. I was a happy child."

"Highlands is clearly a singular place. It's beautiful and fun, as well as incredibly safe for kids," said Dr. Cox. "One time a fellow physician asked me if I grew up in a small town. He told me that he meant this as a distinct compliment."

Toilet humor

I am calling you to tell you that you are my favorite writer. I never miss reading your column and I think you are the cleverest person I know." I could feel my head swelling beyond belief. She went on and on about how great I am. Who is this lady who loves my prose so much she has called to shower me with continuous compliments?

Just when I thought I couldn't feel more pompous, she said, "But I have a problem with some of the stuff you write about. Why do you sometimes use toilet humor in your stories? I don't like toilet humor and it is the only thing that turns me off about you. It is degrading and you are worthy of better."

I sat in silence, my grin having turned to shock. My mind raced for a clever answer that would let me off the hook and, at the same time, please her. In less than two minutes, she had managed to inflate my ego to the top of the scales and then trash it. Women, in general, are very good at that.

Even now I am not sure what my answer was but I think it had the word "duh" in it someplace. Then, to further freak me out, she told me who she was, a lady of elegance and some prominence in our community who shall remain anonymous. Well, maybe I'll tell you who she is if you pay me.

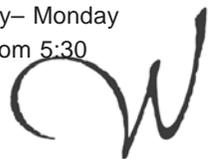

After the phone call, I sat and pondered my plight. I so much wanted to please her but to give up toilet humor and displease all my toilet humor fans may be more than I can give. Such is the plight of a satire writer.

During the three years of writing for Highlands' Newspaper, I have managed to insult, embarrass, degrade and make fun of every occupation, politician and religion in our community. Nothing is sacred. While it's all done in fun, not everyone agrees. I once had so many people mad at me I formed the "Mad at Fred" club so they could gather together and stick needles in a small Fred doll. Realtors and construction companies come to mind. It helped.

I wanted to call my fan back and tell

Another ruthless clash

There is no justification for Israel's retributive atrocities in Lebanon. As a Jew, I am ashamed. As a human being, I am appalled.

It demonstrates that, when threatened with obliteration, any nation-state is capable of unfettered violence.

But as a fellow-Jew, although not a religious one, I expect more respect for human life from my co-religionists. Just as I always expect more from my adopted country, the United States.

There may come a time when Israel's Prime Minister Ehud Olmert and his cabinet will be tried as war criminals by the International Criminal Court at The Hague.

It's true that Hezbollah provoked the Israeli response by kidnapping two of its soldiers and killing eight others. There is even reason to believe that Hezbollah wanted a war with Israel.

It would have been in its interest to engage Israel in hostilities, hoping that Iran and some of the Arab countries would join in a jihad against the Jews. Instead we just have many innocent civilians dying on both sides of the Israel-Lebanon border.

What is stunning to me is that Olmert actually believed he could annihilate

Hezbollah by a military campaign.

Even if Israel were able to kill every single member, new recruits would spring up in a matter of weeks.

Syria or Iran would replace destroyed armaments almost as fast.

So I ask myself, what were they—the Israeli leaders—thinking? Were they thinking at all?

Meanwhile, the United States colluded with Israel, its "war on terror" blinding it to the deep-seated hatred it was stoking on the Arab street.

As I write this, the 48-hour bombing cessation is being widely ignored by the Israeli Air Force.

Innocents continue to die.

The only hope I can muster is that some sort of comprehensive accord can be worked out, with a robust international force on the southern Lebanese border, Hezbollah disarmed, and the democratically-elected government in Beirut bolstered by aid from Europe and the U.S.

But Hezbollah willingly disarming seems like a pipe dream to me.

And I doubt Israel would agree to any terms while Hezbollah remains armed to the teeth.

The worst-case scenario is a much wider war, with Iran allied with Hezbollah and the United States drawn in by its alliance with Israel.

It would make the Iraq war look like an overnight skirmish.

One of the things that this latest deadly conflict emphasizes is the brutality and futility of most wars.

No matter how finely-tuned and accurate the missiles may be, countless civilians will be killed.

Glad I'm not running for sheriff. Who would want that job! Well, at least two people do. It's a big job, let's vote for them both!

I'm DonLeon and that's MY opinion.

The more sophisticated the weapon, the more civilians will die. This would be especially true, of course, for nuclear weapons. And an

Ex-users discuss 'life-after' drugs

By Susanna Forrester
 Reporter

The League of Women Voters of Franklin held a forum on Thursday, Aug. 10 to discuss drug problems and their solutions, such as the newly opened Oxford House, a shelter for women recovering from addiction.

Guest speakers included Lt. Brian Ledford of the Macon County Sheriff's Department, and Jim Bottomlee, Hospital and Institutions Representative for Narcotics Anonymous.

"As long as drugs are here the problems associated with them are going to be present," said Ledford. "Meth is the drug of choice for this area. 90 to 95 percent of drug cases in this area are meth related."

NC laws have recently been enacted that keep pills containing ephedrine behind the counter, so that buying them requires a person to be at least 18-years-old and to provide a signature. Ledford said that once other states enact similar laws "it's not going to be economical" for meth users to make the drug. "They'll have to travel so far to get the ingredients," said Ledford.

Creating awareness has become a major part of Macon County's drug enforcement program. Store owners have been schooled about suspicious buying habits, and community members are encouraged to call in if they suspect something is going on around their neighborhood.

"People calling in about customers buying certain things in stores, strange smells in neighborhoods — we welcome those calls," said Ledford.

Ledford also provided the number to CrimeStoppers. "Anything called into CrimeStoppers is investigated. You don't have to leave your name. You don't have to do anything," he said. "It doesn't matter if you live in the county or in Highlands or outside Franklin city limits."

"Every law enforcement officer we have is out here doing what they can to make a difference and get it off the streets," said Ledford.

The next step in battling drugs within a community is treating and rehabilitating addicts, and helping them to stay clean. Franklin has taken that step with their newly opened Oxford House.

Oxford House is not meant to be a rehabilitation facility or a treatment center, but a drug-free environment that is democratically self-run and self-supported that keeps former drug users off the street and gives them the ability to become apart of the community again.

"When I first moved here I was appalled that there was a lack of treatment facilities here," said Bottomlee, who once found himself homeless, broke, and living in a car because of his drug addiction. "I think this is a beautiful well-run program. It puts responsibility on the individual."

Franklin's Oxford House is strictly for women, and many of the women coming into the home have nothing but the clothes on their backs. Each woman is required to do certain chores, and those who don't do their share of the work are heavily fined. Most of the time residents are users who have already had a couple of weeks of clean time, after having gone through a detox program in a correctional facility or a hospital.

"They can stay however long they need to," said Bottomlee. "But if you use you get an eight-minute warning. You've got eight-minutes to pack your bags and get out the door."

"It's hard to get back on your feet after a life of addiction," said Kayla Compton who has been treated at both the Black Mountain Center and Balsam Center for her drug addiction. "I was ready to give up and die. Thank God the community has services for people like me."

Compton and Bottomlee appealed to the community to continue to assist with this life-changing effort by donating needed items to the house such as blankets, sheets, kitchen wares, and even a lawnmower.

"Since it is in our community it needs our support," said Bottomlee. "And it's a rough trip for them. They need help to get back on their feet."

"It's the little things you get back. Those things mean a lot," said Compton. "I was one of those people you didn't want in your community. Today I don't feel that way."

Big oil and big medicine are one and the same

American health care, like a BMW 760Li, a damned fine ride, but one that not many can afford. The problem is that our system doesn't provide bus service for the rest of the population. I am an American doctor who is fed up with the cost, waste, and inequity of U.S. health care and I've finally decided to say so. We are fond of boasting that we enjoy the finest health care in the world. Really? Ask the nearly 50,000,000 Americans who are uninsured. There is no doubt that ours is the most technologically advanced medical care in the world, nor is there any doubt that it is the most expensive.

Do all these bells and whistles make for better care and does the enormous cost result in better overall care for Americans? If you are the proud owner of the most advanced total knee replacement and have a good insurance policy, you may well answer, "Yes." If you can't afford the insulin needed to treat your diabetes, can't find a doctor willing to accept Medicaid patients, or can't pay the staggering costs of treatment for catastrophic or not so catastrophic illness, you will certainly disagree.

America has been sold a bill of goods. Insurance companies, giant pharmaceutical manufacturers, makers of medical equipment, corporate HMOs and hospitals, and yes, sadly, doctors, have played on the American fear of "big government," or maybe it's "big brother" to discourage the adoption of a saner, safer, leaner, and more equitable health care system.

In the current medical environment, manufacturers representatives hawk each new product in much the same manner as snake oil salesmen of earlier generations. The typical presentation includes a dozen Krispy Creme donuts and reassurance that the cost can be passed along to the insurance company. Doctors flock to purchase the new product, which, after all, costs them nothing and which might provide a competitive advantage over the guy down the street who is vainly trying to control costs by using up the old stuff. Patients watch the TV ads, and they often shop for a doctor who uses the newest, most expensive gimmick.

Many new products really are better than those of their predecessors. MRIs provide far more information than X-rays, but unfortunately we order MRIs at $1,000 or $1,500 per study when a $50 x-ray would do the job. Doctors complain that malpractice lawyers force such excesses, and I am sure that the litigious nature of society contributes to the problem, but I believe that intellectual laziness and insecurity contribute at least as much to the explosive growth of "defensive medicine."

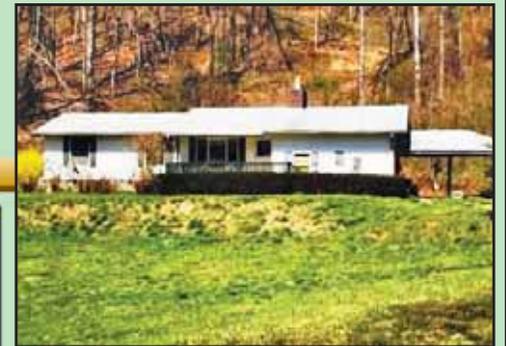

A few years ago, a colleague told me that his daughter, a recent college graduate, had taken a job selling medical equipment. He added with a mix of disbelief, disgust, and parental pride that her first-year income exceeded that of most of the family physicians in our town. She was bright, pretty, and knew the way to the donut shop, but come on. Where is the value? The answer is that the emphasis is on profit rather than care. A few years ago, the president of Blue Cross of South Carolina spent $3,000,000 for a vacant lot on Kiawah Island, South Carolina. Corporate profits, share holder dividends, and executive bonuses are more important than affordable premiums or fair reimbursement for health care providers. We see through the lies of Big Oil, when we realize that Big Medicine is no different?

We were on a bus in Vancouver, British Columbia several years ago, about the time laser eye surgery for vision correction was becoming popular. American ophthalmologists were charging $3,500 for the procedure. A sign on the bus advertised the same procedure for $599 CD, which at the time was less than $500 USD. When we returned home, I told a friend of the disparity. He answered that he wouldn't want a $500 operation on his eye. And that's the problem. We believe that cost equates with quality, while in the world of medical care, there is absolutely no correlation.

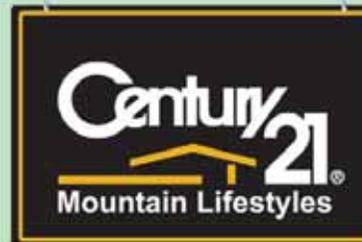

I began this column by questioning the widely held belief that American health is the finest in the world. Let's examine that claim. The United States spends more than twice as much, on a per capita basis, as any other industrialized nation. We spend nearly twice as of their business and if the allotted parking is extra – not needed by that remote establishment to satisfy its parking requirements.

In Highlands, the number of seats allowed a restaurant in the B2 and B3 commercial districts in town is determined by the number of parking spaces the restaurateur can provide on the property. Town ordinance demands one parking space per three seats.

Don Leon and Fressers in Helen's Barn both have remote parking arrangements with Furniture South. Both restaurateurs say no one actually uses the parking across N.C. 106, but it's on the books to satisfy the town's parking requirements.

Don Leon's and Fressers' parking arrangement with Furniture South is good until 2011, but both owners wonder what will happen to their businesses after 2011 or if they sell their businesses.

"Would you reduce my seating which would basically force me out of business," asked Don Leon. He said the issue has been fueled recently by another restaurateur in town who is maliciously trying to damage other restaurants' businesses.

"The parking ordinance needs to be reviewed," said Debbie Grossman of Fressers. "Why should a few restaurants off Main Street be penalized?" Restaurants on Main Street are zoned B1, which means they don't have to supply parking.

Grossman also said on one hand the parking spaces must be large enough to accommodate an SUV which can carry six or more people, but the space counts for only three seats, not six.

She said the Fire Marshal tells businesses how many people they can accommodate and what is considered safe.

Don Leon also reminded the board that about two years ago, the zoning for the Main Street Inn was changed to B1 when the owners opened the restaurant to the public. The zoning change eliminated the need to correlate seats in the restaurant with available parking spaces.

"This is a discriminatory situation," he said. "You could do one of three things — abolish the ordinance, increase the seats per parking space or rezone to B1."

Reverend Thomas Allen, said instead of penalizing businesses, the town should foster the business climate.

"The town needs more seats in this town, especially at lunch time," he said.

Seasonal resident Ann Trinkle, who said she was speaking for lots of women who don't want to cook and who like to go out to eat at lunchtime, said the parking lot next to Helen's Barn is rarely filled and even though it's not Fressers' or Don Leon's parking, she should be able to park wherever she wants regardless of the restaurant she chooses to eat in.

"You're punishing the business owners and jeopardizing their livelihood, but you're punishing us as citizen's, too," she said.

Mayor Don Mullen said he's had many calls from concerned citizens about the parking arrangements levied against certain restaurants in town. Affected are Don Leon's, Fressers, Wild Thyme and Lakeside Restaurant.

On Commissioner Hank Ross's recommendation, the board agreed to take the issue under advisement and to look at the situation carefully over the next few months.

"I think we should review the parking ordinance as a whole," said Commissioner Ross. "Things change over time and the ordinance is about 30 years old. We should review it but not just the restraints on restaurants, but the whole parking ordinance."

Dowden pavilion dedicated at Zachary-Tolbert House in Cashiers

More than 100 Cashiers area residents assembled Friday, Aug. 11, to picnic on the grounds, tour the historic Zachary-Tolbert House, view exhibitions, listen to mountain music, and participate in the unveiling of the new Dowden Pavilion.

The Pavilion is named for Tom and Wendy Dowden in honor of their many contributions to the Cashiers Historical Society, chief of which was the donation of the Zachary-Tolbert House and its contents. Rep. Phil Haire (N.C. House District 119) was on hand for the unveiling of the commemorative plaque.

Eleanor Welling, chair of the Cashiers Historical Society Board, spoke of the evening as the fulfillment of a dream. Welling said the dream began with house owner, Robert Red "Bubba" Tolbert, who wished to sell the home and property to someone who would restore and preserve it. Ann McKee Austin perceived the potential benefit to the community of Cashiers and marshaled the resources that culminated in the preservation of this historic site. Welling thanked all those who participated in the project; the Dowdens; Tolberts; Austin; Gillis MacKinnon, who oversaw the Pavilion project; Mike Lica, Pavilion General Contractor; Ellen Harris, Preservation Architect; Alice Stanly, event organizer and others. Welling thanked John Warren for providing the evening's music, Myra Hunt for her spinning demonstration, Melba Rilott for the quilting exhibition, and Martha Black for initiating the archaeological dig. Viewers of the artifacts display were delighted to find that the dig had turned up many interesting items including pre-Cherokee projectiles dated approximately 3000 B.C. and a two-cent piece from the 1864 period.

Tom Dowden accepted the naming honor for himself and his wife, Wendy, and spoke of his amazement at seeing what he considered their small gesture evolve into this significant benefit to the community. Dowden expressed his gratitude to the many who, over the past few years, had worked hard to acquire, maintain, and expand the site. He termed it truly inspirational.

The Dowden Pavilion may be rented for private functions. For information, call the Cashiers Historical Society, 743-7710.

and Alan Marsh voted against changing the start-up time.

This time the board's decision was fueled by complaints from people who earn their living in the building and service industry, not by seasonal residents as before. In July the board changed the ordinance when residents in the vicinity of the Riverwalk subdivision complained of early morning construction noise.

Commissioner Hank Ross said he rushed into the decision to change the start-up time from 7 a.m. to 8 a.m.

"I think 7:30 a.m. is a more reasonable time," he said. "I work with folks in this sort of business and I think we imposed a penalty to local contractors."

Sam Woodley, a contractor with the Riverwalk subdivision said imposing a time limit of any kind is unreasonable and short-sighted of the board. "We have to get the hours in when the weather is good," he said. "This just prolongs the development process. You're depriving a working man from his right to make a living. Maybe you already made your money, but a lot of us haven't. This is just common sense and there doesn't seem to be much of that around here."

Mike Bryson reminded the board that in the winter it gets dark early which cuts the work day substantially.

Commissioner Patterson said keeping the hours 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. was not unreasonable. "That's still a 10-hour work-day," she said. "They can work, they just can't make noise. We live in a community where a lot of folks don't go to work everyday. We have to consider that side of the equation, too."

The town's noise ordinance now reads: "Loud, Raucous, and Disturbing Noise Prohibited. It shall be unlawful for any person or group of persons, regardless of number, to willfully make, continue, or cause to be made or continue any loud, raucous, and disturbing noise, which term shall mean any sound which, because of its volume level, duration, and character annoys, disturbs, injures, or endangers the comfort,

Highlands-Cashiers Hospital honors its volunteers at dinner

As has been the custom for the last several years, Highlands-Cashiers Hospital said thank you to its many volunteers with a special dinner party this week at Highlands Falls Country Club.

More than 100 volunteers, spouses and hospital managers attended the thank you party, held Thursday evening. Addressing the group briefly, Hospital CEO and President Ken Shull told volunteers they had contributed nearly 17,900 hours of service during the past year, the equivalent of eight and a half full-time employees.

"You are the icing on the cake. You provide the things that go beyond what we as a hospital could normally provide. You make an important difference," he said.

The party drew volunteers from across the many facets of hospital operations: from the Eckerd Living Center, HealthTracks, Highlands-Cashiers Hospice, the gift shop, hospital auxiliary, and a host of various ancillary departments. In all, the hospital has nearly 150 active volunteers.

Following the brief reception and official remarks, volunteers and other guests enjoyed a buffet of prime rib, chicken, salmon and stuffed flounder.

"Our volunteers are an integral part of our hospital family," Shull observed later. "They are a big part of what we do for our patients, residents, and customers, and we are happy to be able to pay tribute to them in this small way."

work for little cottages on the property. "The more expensive the lot, the bigger the house; that's the economics of it."

Even though the Planning Board voted 4-3 against rezoning the R2 tract conditional use multi-family, the Town Board agreed to the concept, but would only consider it if new plans included a decrease in density.

During the meeting, Nellis said he could build three buildings rather than four which would translate to 14 condominiums and one single-family home rather than 16 condominiums and one single family home.

Commissioner Dennis DeWolf kicked off the compromise. "I did see positive aspects in the project and thought it was worthwhile to send it to the Planning Board. Though it's not a cluster development, it has the sense of a cluster development with the distances between the buildings. The physical appearance has a lot of amenities and it's worth talking about."

Commissioner Amy Patterson said she had a bias against increasing density in the town not a prejudice as Nellis suggested in his opening remarks. She said just because Nellis did good work and the project looked good, doesn't mean it's what the board wants for Highlands. Plus, she said she hated making decisions based on "what nasty is around the corner."

Nellis told the board that an out-of-town developer was on his heels ready to build nine, huge, single-family homes on the property some of which would ring the lake.

Commissioner Herb James said he liked the multi-family scenario better than a single-family development.

Commissioner DeWolf suggested allowing Nellis to return to the board on the premise that he redesign the project not to exceed three units and potentially less. Commissioner Hank Ross added that he must meet the 24% built-upon. To do that, Nellis will have to purchase .8 acres from either the Land Trust or another neighbor.

"Before you bring the plan back, we want concrete evidence you have secured the property necessary to meet the built-upon," said Ross. "Around here, that could take you another three years."

The Town Board wants the new plans to go to the Planning Board first. Nellis said he could have them ready by the next Planning Board meeting.

'To Kill A Mockingbird' opens tonight at Highlands Playhouse

"To Kill A Mockingbird," based on Harper Lee's Pulitzer Prize winning novel, opens tonight, Aug. 17 at the Highlands Playhouse and runs through Aug. 27.

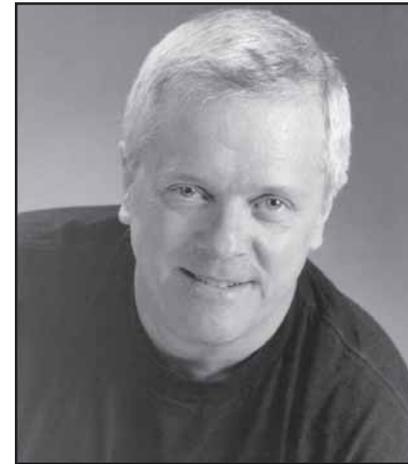

The fictional story of the trial of Tom Robinson, a black man accused of attacking a white woman in a small Alabama town in the 1930s, has riveted audiences since it first saw print in 1960. In 1962, the novel was turned into an Oscar-winning feature film starring Gregory Peck. The play, adapted by Christopher Sergel from the novel, is one of the most performed shows in the nation.

The story is narrated by the adult Jean Louise "Scout" Finch, the daughter of defense attorney Atticus Finch. She relates in adulthood how, as a child, she saw her father bravely stand up not only to Tom's accusers Bob and Mayella Ewell, but also to an entire town.

"I love and admire the quiet strength and integrity of Atticus; that's why I'm so delighted to play him," says actor Ron Growden, himself a father of four daughters. "Like Atticus, I have children about whom I constantly worry, and have had to face the evil of a Bob Ewell. I'd like to think

I have done half as well as did Atticus."

Growden is a Maryland-based performer who earlier this year had featured roles on Maryland stages in Cabaret, The Apollo of Bellac and the musical Cats. A longtime fan of Harper Lee's novel, he has approached his role carefully.

Ron Growden is playing Atticus Finch in the Playhouse "To Kill A Mockingbird," that opens tonight.

"I fear being compared with Gregory Peck and have not consciously chosen anything from his wonderful film portrayal. For calmness and fairness, I think about my late father-in-law - a Christian minister with the occasional devil in his eye."

Scout as a child is played by 13-year-old Cashiers resident Jessica Bryant, who was in the Playhouse presentation of "Fiddler on the Roof" earlier this summer.

Other local actors include Jim Gordon, Michelle Hott and Wyatt Stinson. Fans of the Oscar-winning 1962 movie will also note another local connection - Highlands' native Collin Wilcox Paxton performed in the film as Mayella Ewell, a role played in this production by actress Clara Smith.

"To Kill A Mockingbird" runs at the Highlands Playhouse Aug. 17-27. For tickets or more information, call the Playhouse at 828-526-2695.

- Room Tax, Part 2 -

Database of room tax contributors nearing completion

Soon the county will have a complete database of every entity responsible for filing, collecting and turning in room occupancy tax to the county.

Gary Nicholson was hired by the county to verify the homeowners, hotels and motels, bed and breakfasts, condominium and townhouse owners and businesses registered with the county and to discover those who aren't. After about seven months of work, he's almost finished.

"Once I'm on top of this, and I'm getting there, the database will be complete and the software interface installed," said Nicholson. "The database will have each business name, owner, how it's organized, local address, out-of-town address, federal ID or social security number, and it will indicate whether the property is rented out seasonally May through October or all year so the county doesn't expect tax during off months."

People who rent their homes up to 90 days at a time are responsible for collecting three percent room occupancy tax which is sent to the county. If a home is rented for more than 90 days, occupancy tax is not levied. The county sends the money to the state and the state returns the county its portion. The county then takes 15% as an administration fee and returns the rest proportionately to the chambers of commerce in Highlands and Franklin.

Over the last seven months, Nicholson has been sending out letters to those suspected of renting their homes as vacation rentals. About 300 letters were sent out to homeowners — only about 100 haven't responded and he's concentrating on that last group now.

Nicholson said he won't concentrate on the money angle until the database and software to interface is complete at which point the county can keep track of owners and collections.

"I expect to add a substantial number of new filers to the rolls," he said. "Don't know how much money will be added, that will be determined later."

He said he's not referring to commercial hotels and motels, but he's shocked at the number of people who had no idea they were responsible for the tax. "There are a lot of people not registered with the county," he said. "There are scenarios where two families buy a home, use it a few times a year and rent it out the rest of the time," said Nicholson.

He said part of the problem is there is very little mechanism in place to let people know they are responsible for the tax when they rent their home as a vacation rental property. "We need a single-point, even if just as a courtesy, to let them know about their responsibilities," he said.

Using realtors and attorneys to get the word out is top on his list of ideas because they have personal contact with the buyers but he said a note could also be put on the property tax bills.

Nicholson is also working on a new monthly form and if people traditionally owe less than $25 a month, a quarterly form.

He said once the database is complete, he will turn his sights on how other communities and municipalities in North Carolina disburse and spend the room occupancy tax.

"I will see what successful communities are spending the money on and will likely make some serious recommendations to the Macon County Board of Commissioners that may suggest changes as to the way the money is spent," he said.

He said Nantahala has no applicant to receive the room occupancy proceeds so funds aren't sent directly to Nantahala. "There is a lot of building going on up there and it's likely that the second homes being built will be used as vacation rental homes so basically Nantahala will be pumping a lot of room tax into the system and getting nothing in return."

Chambers in Buncombe County, Boone, and Beech Mountain give one-third of the room occupancy tax to their municipalities which have used the money to build a soccer field, bonsai garden, visitor center, renovations to an arcade, sidewalk upgrades and parks.

However, in the case of Blowing Rock, the county sent all the room tax money to the municipality and none to the chamber on the grounds that the chamber of commerce is a member-based institution. Blowing Rock used the money to build a visitor bureau and to enhance the quality of life of summer people, visitors and locals by upgrading sidewalks, parks and renovations to a community building.

MC Commission Chair Allan Bryson said he wants to re-look at the state statute and the county's policy concerning the use of room tax proceeds.

More musings from an 'unhappy' individual

Dear Editor,

If I misquoted Mayor Mullen in my article I am deeply sorry, but I don't think so. I will stick by what I have said. It appears that the Mayor wants to apply the town ordinances as he sees fit and how he interprets them and to whom he wants them applied. Ordinances are written to be applied equally, fairly and fully. Maybe we should only apply the "driving while impaired" law when and where we like. Maybe this week at the Highlands Country Club, then next week it will be the Highlands Falls Country Club's turn. My statement is as absurd as the mayor's.

By the way, he makes an excellent point in his letter about "community trying to protect itself against poor development planning. "Let's think about that statement, who let Riverwalk start construction? Who gave permission for the project? So therefore, who is to blame for the "perceived excess noise" and the silt in our river and in Mirror Lake.

Remember, this project was started on Mayor Mullen's watch and he and the Town Board will have to bear the blame for not stopping it and making things right before it is allowed to continue. I'm not blaming Riverwalk, they are developers, the Town Board gave them the green light for the project so why not full speed ahead? They are businessmen running a business with the Town Board's blessings.

Let's go back to the "perceived excess noise" that the mayor implied I was wrong about. I believe the residents of Mirror Lake and surrounding areas would differ with him on that point. We have the three cats that enjoy the Highlands summers with us. Every morning they were out on the porch enjoying the peacefulness until the "perceived excess noise" started. Now, no more porch. It's under the bed with their little ears down until 6 p.m. when the "perceived excess noise" stops.

I am not "unhappy" except with the mayor and Town Board's lack of action and enforcement and lack of using the fine Highlands Police force to enforce ordinances the mayor thinks are good for the entire community. All the Town Board needs to do is enforce what is on the books and put some teeth into development planning for the good of all the good people of Highlands. Do that and I promise I will go back to riding my "hog," smoking B-B-Q and enjoying my time in paradise.

People, it takes intestinal fortitude to make the hard, right decisions for Highlands and to get off the fence and do what's right for our future and not worry about who might get offended. It takes people who will stand up for the good of all.

Let's see if the mayor and Town

Board have the "right stuff" for Highlands. If not, when elections are held again vote some new shooters in and give someone else a shot at getting it right. The mayor and Town Board must answer to the people. I hope they remember that fact. It may come in handy someday.

Bomengen principal in Atlanta

Highlands resident Monica Bomengen has been named principal of the School of Integrated Academics and Technology (SIA Tech), a charter high school in the Atlanta Public Schools system. She leaves the position of Director of Alternative Strategies with Macon County Schools.

A native of Hayesville, N.C., Bomengen attended Western Carolina University on a full academic scholarship as the first Palmer Scholar, graduating Summa Cum Laude in 1984 with a Bachelor of Arts degree in English.

The appointment of the principalship of SIA Tech Georgia completes a professional circle of sorts for Bomengen. She cites her first love as working in urban schools with students at risk of not graduating from high school.

She professes eagerness to return to the inner city and to the academic experimentation and innovation encouraged in charter schools.

SIA Tech Georgia is part of a nationwide network of charter high schools with its main office in San Diego, CA.

Bomengen will maintain her primary residence in Highlands so her daughter, Vicky, can complete her studies at Highlands School, where Bomengen was principal in 2004.

Stop I-3 group hits the highways

The Stop I-3 Coalition and its grassroots members hit the highways today in north Georgia and Western North Carolina with a catchy roadside campaign aimed at increasing membership and keeping the heat on the officials who are pushing this ruinous route.

The proposed interstate would run from Savannah to Augusta and thereafter to Knoxville – inevitably affecting the mountain communities and economies of Southern Appalachia. Those traveling the regions' scenic byways this week and for the next month are likely to see the fruits of the coalition's latest venture.

Modeled after the Burma Shave campaigns of yesterday, grassroots supporters have erected a series of five signs on their property, each with a catchy ditty punctuated with an entreaty to "Stop I-3." One such ditty goes like this:

This freeway is a thing to stop,
Proclaim it from the mountaintop,
Stop I-3

Other ditties and can be found in the May newsletter archived at www.StopI-3.org. Those wishing to put up a series of signs should contact Sandy Lyndon at bandit@bbinc.org. The Stop I-3 Coalition represents a growing confederation of community organizations and conservation groups located in the four-state Appalachian region. It is dedicated to stopping an unneeded interstate or any similar highway that it believes would do irreparable harm to mountain economies, forests, farms, and streams, and to rural qualities of life rooted in a strong sense of place.

much as a percentage of GDP (gross domestic product) as any comparable nation and all of those countries provide universal coverage in some form. In each, the rate of infant mortality is lower and the life expectancy greater than ours. We currently spend over $,6000 annually for every man, woman and child in the U.S. while leaving millions unprotected. American auto manufacturers spend more for medical care than for steel. The cost of providing medical care is crippling us in our efforts to compete internationally. In the near future, health care costs will account for 20% of GDR and still we will have millions without health care coverage. We will still suffer the embarrassment and injustice of enormous discrepancies in infant death and life expectancy based on socioeconomic factors. Much maligned Cuba, which spends at most a few hundred dollars per year per citizen on health care, has a lower infant mortality, higher immunization rate, nearly identical life expectancy, and is able to export doctors and nurses to serve the needs of other Caribbean basin nations. So do you still believe that cost equates to quality or that we are getting our money's worth?

Between 20% and 30% of insurance premiums are eaten up in administrative costs by commercial insurance companies. That's a lot of lots on Kiawah, a lot of fat dividend checks for share holders, a gigantic drain on the American economy. The administrative cost of Medicare is a paltry 2%. In America, health care is a business and the business of business is making a profit.

There is no doubt that this environment has spawned many advances. Ours is the most advanced care in the world. But we simply can't afford to wreck our economy and deny affordable care to millions for the sake of a slimmer pacemaker, a better knee replacement, or another blood pressure medicine. Medicine as a business has produced much that is good, but has failed to provide the essential of universal care at a reasonable cost. I think it is time to choose, and I believe that the choice is an easy one.

her I cannot please all the people all the time and all that ya de ya de but decided she was much too smart to buy into that excuse.

Then the little missus came to my rescue as she has so many times before. "Why didn't you tell her the truth?" Not having a clue what she meant, I asked, "And what might that be?" She smiled, "You can't help it; it's in your genes. You are a tacky, toilet person."

POW, it hit like a brick. She is right. I can't help it. Whenever two or more Wooldridges gather together, sooner or later, toilet humor stories will surface and the laughing begins. My kids have the same sickness. Christmas, Easter, Thanksgiving, birthdays, it's always the same. We are all toilet people. By the time the conversation ends, I am mopping tears from my eyes and my stomach is hurting from laughter, all in the name of toilet humor. It is a Wooldridge illness.

People can be asked to change and they can change, but not when it's in the genes. I am toilet driven and it is beyond my control. It is my fate. Please, I am begging for understanding.

I know there are probably others out there that feel the same as my caller, so to make matters better, I am creating the "Betty Poop" doll. Those who are displeased with my toilet humor can gather together and stick needles in her. My new poop doll is an improvement over the old Fred doll. When you stick a needle in my new version, she sings, "Poop Poop a Doop."

I hope this helps.

Israel threatened with extinction would not hesitate to use one or five of its stock of about a hundred nuclear bombs.

The time is long past for all nations to renounce the use of such devices.

The time is even long past for all nations to renounce war as a way of settling disputes.

But this seems unlikely to happen anytime soon.

We may even have to suffer a nuclear exchange, for example, between Iran and Israel, before the world reawakens to the horrors of war.

Then there will be conferences, meetings, amendments to the U.N. charter, and sincere pledges of renunciation.

Until the next time.

Are we doomed to this endless cycle of brutality, terror, and stupidity?

I don't know. I hope not.

People sometimes describe what's happening in Lebanon as inhuman.

Unfortunately, it is very human indeed.

We seem to be a species with our very DNA committed to warfare.

We are very much like the chimps we resemble.

The major difference is that we have developed a technology so deadly we can bring about our own extinction.

As Kurt Vonnegut has succinctly stated, So Be It.

"This is a great achievement for the whole Madison's team," said CEO Mario Gomes. "This award reaffirms all of the hard work we have put into making the Madison's experience one to treasure. More than just dining, a meal at Madison's is a chance to embrace the joy that is food and wine pairing."

The dinner featured Tung's famous steamed pork rolling cakes, shrimp paté on sugar cane, spiced calamari salad, Carolina grouper with fresh mango and green peppercorns, curried chicken and sweet potato, Tung's ginger flan and Vietnamese coffee.

All the courses were paired with wines from the Verandah's Wine Spectator and Wine Enthusiast award-winning cellar. "We've been enjoying Hy Vong's wonderful cuisine since 1980. My parent's were driving down "Calle Ocho" in Miami during Hy Vong's opening week and fell in love with the food and with Tung and Kathy's easy style. They wrote a letter to the "Miami Herald," Hy Vong won rave reviews and the rest is history," said Marlene Alvarez, GM/co-owner of ...on the Verandah.

A true success story, Tung Nguyen left Vietnam in 1975 and along with her refugee sponsor, Kathy Manning opened Hy Vong Restaurant in 1980. Tung's daughter, Lyn, born just after Tung's arrival in America, attended Harvard and received her MBA from Cornell University. After spending time in Manhattan as an investment banker, Lyn returned to Miami to launch a new venture with her mother and Kathy selling "heat and eat" delicacies at gourmet markets throughout South Florida. Hy Vong restaurant is located at 3458 SW Eighth Street in Miami, 305-446-3674.

Upcoming guest chef dinners include a French Creole dinner on Thursday, Sept. 14 with Aziz Mehram and Billy Glendenning of McKinnon's Louisiana of Atlanta.

This year, ...on the Verandah celebrates its 25th anniversary. From Sept. 10-16, the nightly menu will reflect classic dishes from the last 26 seasons. The week culminates in a "birthday" party on Sept. 17 from noon to 6 p.m. Marta, Alan, Andrew and Marlene invite everyone to stop by and enjoy the celebration. There will be live music and great food throughout the day.

On the Verandah is open seasonally, from mid-March through New Year's Eve. Reservations for the dinner or Sunday brunch at ...on the Verandah can be made at 828 526 2338 www.ontheverandah.com

MC County's 3 ESL teachers work with 251 Hispanic students

By Susanna Forrester
Reporter

This fall Highlands School will have a new teacher—an ESL teacher who will work with the growing number of Hispanic and foreign language students entering Macon County Schools.

Two ESL teachers already cover Franklin High School, Macon Middle School, and Franklin's elementary schools. The ESL teachers travel between their assigned schools administering tests, providing one-on-one instruction, and evaluating students' basic communication skills.

One of the main jobs of an ESL teacher is to administer a placement test that determines the level of English proficiency a student has. The student, if identified as Limited English Proficient (LEP), is ranked according to these categories: Novice Low, Novice High, Intermediate Low, Intermediate High, Advanced and Superior.

"In NC you have to get them a placement test after the first 30 days of enrollment," said Terry Bell, Director of Auxiliary Services at Macon County Schools. The students are assessed on their speaking, listening, reading, and writing skills.

LEP students' grade levels are still determined by their age, but even a student ranked as Intermediate or Advanced in their English language skills may be required to take ESL training.

"Just because they appear to speak the language better does not mean they comprehend it well," said Bell. "They need the ability to read and comprehend."

Parents of LEP students also need to be able to comprehend what is happening in their child's education. Spanish language report cards are available for all K-5 classes at Macon County Schools, and one on one contact with the parents is encouraged. Parents are often asked to volunteer in the classroom or at the school.

"Teachers themselves are encouraged as part of their job to make contact with families," said Bell. "We have an open house just for the families to give out information and meet with them."

In the future Bell said even more will be done to help train classroom teachers in dealing with and communicating with LEP students. "We're trying to help the classroom teachers. We're trying to get them more training in that area," Bell said. As of now state conferences, online videos, and college courses are available to assist teachers of ESL students.

In the eight years since Macon County began using the ESL curriculum, the program, which started with only five students, has grown to 251 Hispanic students, which is roughly six percent of the total student population in Macon County. Highlands School has 35 Hispanic students enrolled for this year, and the numbers are expected to grow.

"As the population grows we will have to grow with it," said Bell. "Under 'No Child Left Behind' we have to meet the reading goals for our students no matter who they are or where they're from."

Nothing says 'summer' like a sunflower

Are they called sunflowers because the flowerhead looks like the sun or because it follows the sun across the sky, looking east in the morning and west in the evening? The wild sunflower, from which all the cultivars have been derived, grows naturally in almost all of North America from central Canada to northern Mexico. It grows in prairies and dry, open areas, and is sometimes a weed in cultivated fields and pastures. These are in the field at Short Off and Buck Creek Road. In the background is the old Lowe homestead.
