2007 revaluations to go out Jan. 15

Property revaluations are in the works for 2007 and commissioners are bracing for the traditional volatile backlash.

At the Dec. 4 Macon County Commission meeting, Tax Administrator Richard Lightner explained the regulations behind the county's every four-year revaluation process, how revaluations are determined and how the appeal process works.

Citing several real estate sales in various areas of the county since 2003, he showed how the county's consistent growth and the rising market values of property will undoubtedly raise the tax base considerably in 2007.

Based on the 2003 revaluation, the county's adjusted tax base in 2004-2005 was $5,572,174,261. Lightner said the County to consider moratorium on Dec. 18

Commissioners have heard the outcry. Now, following the county planning board's lead, they are ready to invoke a moratorium on high-rise construction in the county.

The Dec. 4 Macon County Commission meeting was continued until Dec. 18 at 6 p.m. when commissioners will vote on adopting a six-month moratorium on high-rise construction of commercial or residential buildings over four stories or 48 feet high.

Between now and Dec. 18, County Attorney Lesley Moxley and County Planner Stacey Guffey will work on language for the moratorium. Moxley said the moratorium must be narrowly crafted and involve a reasonable amount of time to be legal and binding.

The prospect of a 10-story condominium complex on U.S. 64 east across from the Community Bible Church has sparked a county-wide grassroots movement to prohibit such building anywhere in the county.

During the public comment

Board fines RiverWalk $400,000

After breaking twice for closed meetings on the subject, hearing impassioned pleas from homeowners, lawyers, and evidence from town employees, the Town Board moved to hold RiverWalk developers accountable for soil and erosion violations at its site.

Instead of signing the $5,000 settlement resolution discussed at the Nov. 8 meeting with RiverWalk attorney Billy Clarke, at the Dec. 6 Town Board meeting, commissioners voted unanimously to reject the previously discussed settlement that would wipe clean 10 violations dating from the summer through Oct. 24 - each for $500.

"After hearing evidence to the substantial harm done and due to the significant amount of money it will take to remedy and rectify the harm done, I move that we reject the settlement and impose a $400,000 fine for the two distinct areas where we've had violations," said Commission Amy Patterson.

Patterson was referring to two Commission makes plans for the future

New faces took their seats at the Macon County Commission table Dec. 4 and new titles assigned as Commissioners Allan Bryson and J.D. Shepherd left the table.

Vice Chairman Charlie Leatherman was unanimously nominated and elected chairman of the commission. After several nominations were offered and withdrawn, newly elected Commissioner Ronnie Beale was named vice chairman.

"In light of our tradition of bipartisan leadership on the commission, I would like to nominate Commissioner Beale as vice chair," said Commissioner Jim Davis, who had been one of the commissioners nominated for the position.

Chairman Leatherman was quick to put forth his plan for the commission over the next four years citing upcoming changes in

From my perspective

Mayor Don Mullen

This past weekend the Town of Highlands had a joyful and festive time as we prepare for the Christmas season.

Not only was the tree lighting the week before a good time but the parade on Saturday was one of the best ever... even live camels and a donkey for Mary, the mother of Jesus. The people at the parade turned out in large numbers not only for the parade but, immediately following the parade, for the charity events displayed at the Presbyterian Church and over $11,000 was raised for 15 very special charities. We have a "giving town" and it certainly showed that day. We hope this will become an annual event for the benefit of charity.

We are making progress in plans to remove the silt from Big Creek where all of Highlands' water supply comes from. At the past week's Town Board meeting the board made a first positive step by approving a $16,000 study by Mountain Engineering to determine the final cost of dredging the entire Big Creek arm of Lake Sequoia.. We needed that estimate before making final plans for obtaining funding of the entire project. There is still a slight chance we will get a grant from the federal government but I am not optimistic about that. It depends on the final cost estimate as to which course we will take in getting this funding.

I feel very strongly that we must now move quickly to get this done sometime this winter before most of the people who live along the lake return for the summer. It will be a noisy project which will cause some inconvenience to the residents and the fewer people who are here, the better. The town's water supply depends on Big Creek and we simply cannot wait any longer to take care of this major problem in our community.

I was certainly glad to hear the Riverwalk was never 'on track'

Dear Editor,

Mayor Don Mullen stated in his Nov. 16 From My Perspective column in Highlands' Newspaper that the Riverwalk development was "back on track."

As the sole independent homeowner located in the Riverwalk development, we respectfully disagree with the mayor. To be "back on track" suggests Riverwalk had to be "on track" at one time. Riverwalk has never been "on track."

Our home is located in the center of the development and for the past year we have been surrounded by construction chaos. We have lived through three complete staff changes with each change following a period of gross mismanagement, fines and further construction delays. Riverwalk has promised us the moon and stars only to deliver cut power, phone, and water lines; a washed-out driveway, blocked access to our property; along with many other things.

However the worst of these offenses is their blatant disregard for the destructive amount of silt they are allowing to flow from their property into the Cullasaja River and ultimately Mirror Lake.

We have witnessed and photographed Riverwalk's numerous silt spills, several of them intentional where workers released silt fences holding water and silt into the stream bordering our property which drains to the Cullasaja River.

In every incident we called the town to complain and they responded with the appropriate fines to the development. Unfortunately, this did not and has not dissuaded Riverwalk from committing the same offenses again and again. Riverwalk continues to arrogantly violate the laws of Highlands and North Carolina and they have made it crystal clear that they have complete disregard for its neighbors and the town of Highlands.

Therefore one can imagine our frustration when we learned the Town Board "settled" with the Riverwalk developers for a grossly inferior fine amount. Other fines prior to this date are still outstanding.

Whatever the circumstances surrounding the settlement, we trust that in the future the Board will refuse to negotiate with the developers. The Town Board approved this development and is ultimately responsible for the finished product. One can only hope it will be what the developers promised...but beware Riverwalk has yet to live up to one of its promises.

We fear the town will be left with a monumental clean up project, one that all taxpayers will bear. Each rain brings additional silt runoff and at this rate there could be a land bridge damning the Cullasaja River.

The Town Board has two options: either fine Riverwalk to the full extent EVERY time they break the law; or be prepared to require them to restore the waters and land affected by their failure to minimize the detrimental effects of the sedimentation pollution.

Stop settling with the developers!

It is the Town Board's job, duty and obligation to ensure that the laws of Highlands are enforced. They need to remember the responsibilities they pledged to uphold when they were elected to public service.

There is nothing to be settled or negotiated, demand that Riverwalk follow the law.

Highlands needs football!

Dear Editor,

Imagine a crisp, autumn, Friday night in one of our beautiful small mountain towns. Everything about the scene is ideal, except one thing, the fields are empty. A common thread in small town America is high school football on Friday nights and our dream is to see football come to the mountains.

We understand the problems associated with being a small school and the limited resources we all have which is why we are proposing a different idea. 8-man football is played all over America especially in areas with smaller populations and smaller schools.

It is played with significantly less people, on a smaller field, with fewer coaches, but with the same intensity and feel of 11-on-11 football.

There are schools playing 8-man football all over eastern North Carolina although they are in the private school sector. After talking to the manager of one of their leagues, Russel Leake of Northeast Academy, I was able to discover what it would cost to outfit a player and the amount of students it requires to have a healthy program. We learned that we can launch a program from scratch for under

James Howard Keener

Jamie Keener, loving husband, devoted father and grandfather, and friend of many died peacefully on November 28, 2006 at the age of 69. Born in Mt. Pleasant, Arkansas on October 17, 1937, he served in the U.S. Army before spending his career with Keener Brothers Construction Company in Highlands, NC. Splitting his time between Highlands and Raytown, Georgia, Jamie enjoyed family, friends, Pat's Store, fishing, deer hunting, barbecue contests, and cattle farming. He was chairman of Macon County School Board from 1978-1988.

Jamie Keener

Jamie is survived by his wife and lifelong companion, Mary Keener; daughters Sharon Manning and husband Mike of Charlotte, NC; son Tim and wife Donna of Raleigh, NC; son Michael and wife Stephanie of Zurich, Switzerland; daughter Melanie Miller and husband Buddy of Highlands, NC; and brother Johnny Keener of Destin, FL. He is also survived by his seven grandchildren, Christine, Kelsey, and Michaela Manning; Christian and Caleb Keener; and Benjamin and Jonathan Miller. An eighth grandchild is expected in March.

Admired for his generosity, sense of humor, and kindness, Jamie touched the lives of many throughout his life. As a husband, father, friend, and mentor, he demonstrated integrity, courage, wit, and a ready smile that should serve as an inspiration to all of us.

A funeral service was held at Yellow Mountain Baptist Church in the Norton Community at 11 a.m. on Saturday, Dec. 2. Officiating were Reverend Walter Wilson, Reverend Wayne Price and Reverend Keith Ashe. Interment followed at the Stewart Family Cemetery. Pallbearers were Tim, Michael and Don Keener, Buddy Miller, Mike Manning, David Sims and Gene Massey.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Lewis Rathbun Wellness Center, 121 Sherwood Rd., Asheville, NC 28803.

Arrangements were by Bryant Funeral Home, Highlands, NC.

Macon County Commission Chairman Charlie Leatherman, congratulated outgoing commissioner J.D. Shepherd for a job well done over the last four years. He said he made history as the first black man elected to the commission and that he appreciated Shepherd's heart, which leads him in all he does.

Macon County, which the commission will have to deal with, he said.

"Macon County is going to face more changes in the next five years than it's faced in the past 25," he said. "This board will face some of the most difficult situations and circumstances and face the hardest choices then ever before, but the people have put us here to do what's best for Macon County. The difficulty comes in separating that from self-interests."

Leatherman said this term's board needs to put Macon County in a position so 10 years from now it can talk about how Macon County is, not was.

"Change is upon us, but we need to keep our traditional values while dealing with change. It's a delicate balance," he said. "There will be development issues. We need

• LAUGHING AT LIFE •

Is that a banana in your pocket?

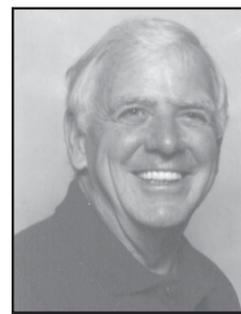

Before I even begin with this, I am going on record to confess I am a cheapskate. Done! Finished! Call me Mr. Cheapo, if you want.

It was not something in my genes, but a learned behavior. Raising three kids on a cop's salary and sending them to Catholic school was to blame. I simply took my paycheck, divided it in half and gave it to the school and my mortgage company. I worked overtime and off-duty details to buy silly stuff like food and clothes.

Once the kids started school the li'l missus worked mornings and I got lucky with promotions. Things started getting better and money was not so tight. As time went on and things got even better, I could not put down my old ways. I constantly bargain shop. I search the Internet for the best buys. I always put the generic brand in the shopping cart, but sometimes the missus will switch to a name brand if I'm not looking. No high priced spread in this house. Got the picture?

Years ago, there was a movie theatre in our neighborhood that let cops and their families in free. It was accepted practice in those days so one night I took the li'l missus to a movie only to find it was restricted with no passes allowed. Since I am too cheap to buy tickets, I told the cashier I would see another feature. Once inside the building, I made a quick stop at the rest room where I did nothing and a quick visit to the candy counter where I bought nothing. Then I looked around to see who was looking, grabbed an extremely reluctant wife and dragged her into the restricted show.

I was feeling real smug sitting there among a sea of people who had paid top dollar to be there. Just as the movie started, the theatre manager walked down the aisle and shined his flashlight in my eyes. "Excuse me sir, may I see your tickets?" I was speechless. Worse yet, as we were being thrown from the building, we met our teenage son walking in. He told a friend, "My parents are being kicked out of the movie. How cool is that?" He was so proud of us. Being a cheapskate is very hard sometimes. Ask me if the li'l missus spoke to me for over a week. Ask me if I was on triple probation.

Have you priced candy at a movie theatre? No, I'm not talking about our Ruby Cinema but the big boys with 16 screens. I once bought a normal sized package of M & M's and the cashier said "$3.25 please." I told her I didn't want the whole box but just one package but she insisted it was $3.25. Once inside the darkened theater I counted the morsels and learned I was being charged one cent each. What a rip off!

Now I smuggle food into the movies. It's easy using my new "movie pants" I bought, on sale of course, that have large cargo pockets at the knees. It's amazing how much food you can squirrel away in those pockets. Once I forgot about a sandwich I left in there and you should see what a peanut butter and jelly sandwich looks like after it's been through the wash. Wow!

I just know that, sooner or later, the theatres will come up with food detectors and I will be toast. Last week I thought they had when a ticket taker called me back and said, "Sir, is that a banana in your pocket?" I was shocked. How could she know? I walked back checking my zipper as she pointed at one of my cargo pockets. There, peeking out one corner, was the tip of my banana. Once we were seated the li'l missus asked if I was embarrassed. "Nah, she didn't find the cereal and small package of milk in my other pocket."

Since most of the movie theatres have been alerted that I am a food sneak, the missus and I go in separate cars. She doesn't want to be present when I am frisked. I have had to be more devious, like Oh Henry candy bars in my underwear and Milk Duds under my armpits. Once in the darkened theater I always ask the missus, "Want a bite of my candy bar?" and she always responds, "Ah, I think I'll pass."

case. This project and the others that will surely follow can only be regulated by you, our locally elected officials," he said.

He and others said high-rise development affects all the people in the county and affects everyone's property rights. "Vertical development allows developers to stack "view" lots on top of each other and make millions of dollars, dollars they take south," said Wright.

When is war justified? Part 2

It must have been clear from the first part of this essay that I think war is seldom justified. The whole concept of "just war" is an anachronism, left over from the days of omnipotent monarchs, states controlled by religious entities, or the proto-adolescent passion of nationalism.

We can acknowledge that nations, like individuals, are entitled to use force in self-defense. Sometimes they will need to come to the aid of an ally who is under attack, or intervene in a genocide conducted by some other nation-state.

But always they must have honestly exhausted all diplomatic means before waging war. This is the tricky part. Politicians will lie, rationalize, exploit, and find a thousand and one excuses to do whatever they want to do; after all, they're human. And often what they want to do is clobber the enemy with every weapon in their arsenal as long as they think they can win; after all, they're human.

This is precisely what Israel did recently in Lebanon, or, for that matter, the U.S. is still doing in Iraq. It's no coincidence that both misadventures turned out badly for the perpetrators. The same weapons that can be used to kill thousands and even millions can be neutralized by urban and guerilla warfare.

Even the most powerful occupying force is often impotent in the face of hit and run tactics. The only exception to this rule are occupying powers that are willing to use draconic measures against the local population, like the Nazis and Soviets did.

A typical tactic was the mass execution of an entire village when a single soldier was harmed by guerillas. Fortunately, democratic societies seldom have the stomach for such reprisals. In a time of quickened world communication and reaction, it's almost impossible to get away undiscovered with such behavior, and to escape some kind of sanction..

Dr. Alex Redmountain

I do believe that acknowledging our sometimes brutal nature is no longer an excuse for waging war (with the exceptions noted above) in the era of weapons of mass destruction. Distinctions between soldiers and non-combatants are extremely difficult to make, and armies are not well-suited for such subtlety. They are basically a conglomerate of individual killing machines, making up a far larger killing machine, like herds of hyenas or packs of wild dogs.

I think I know how wars among nations could be abolished, but it would take a presently unimaginable and revolutionary commitment to change by the major powers. First of all, every nation would have to give up some of its sovereignty to a central authority, like the U.N., or hopefully a better model, like the European Union. A military division would have to be formed, with personnel contributed by all nations. Gradually, national armies and possession of weapons would be prohibited. Given the hysterical reaction of many Americans to very minor abrogation of sovereignty, the chances of this happening are slim to none

So why am I even suggesting such a scenario? I'm not an idealistic dreamer, but I fully believe that eventually some such alternative to war will exist. It will probably take a number of ugly nuclear or biological wars before nation-states come to their senses, but it will probably happen—or all sensate life on this planet will be destroyed beyond redemption.

Barring this kind of change, there is little hope of eliminating war. Today we are also experiencing a new kind of conflict, against an enemy of loosely organized cells, a type of warfare more like attacks by criminal gangs. If I knew how to stop this terrorist activity, I'd offer it to the Pentagon.

High scorer was Alec Schmitt with 21 points, 5 rebounds and 5 assists. Next up was Nick Kerhoulas with 12 points, 3 rebounds and 1 assist; and Jason Aspinwall with 9 points and 1 rebound. Schmitt and Kerhoulas were on court 37 minutes. Aspinwall was on court 29 minutes.

On Dec. 4, Highlands beat Robbinsville 68 to 50. High scorer was Alec Schmitt with 28 points, 6 rebounds and 4 assists. He was on court 24 minutes. Next up was Jason Aspinwall with 16 points, 9 rebounds and 5 assists. He was on court 16 minutes. Darren Keener scored 11 points with 8 rebounds. He was on court 16 minutes. Nick Kerhoulas, on court for 24 minutes, scored 6 points, with 6 rebounds and 5 assists.

Let's cherish diversity

One of the things I noticed in Cape Town was the presence of a large Muslim minority. I didn't actually count Muslims, but there were many. How did I know they were Muslim? It wasn't because they were carrying explosives or slaughtering Jews and Christians. It was because many women were wearing the hijab, or head scarf. A few were wearing the burqua, which to my western eye, gave them a mildly sinister, ninja like appearance. A few of those wearing only the hijab reminded me of Jackie Kennedy or Grace Kelly. Or maybe it was Katherine Hepburn, but it was a good look in any case. The point is that they were walking around, attracting little notice, except from me. We even saw a few men dressed in traditional garb. Maybe they were clerics.

We, in the Western world, get in quite a snit about the hijab. It seems to me that women with bodies like mine wearing hip huggers and midriff revealing tops should evoke far more outrage. We assume that the hijab represents repression of women. I remember when nuns wore a garment that resembled burqua, but with the face exposed. The habit, as it was called, was a loose fitting head-to-foot shroud, and depending on the Order, featured an elaborate head covering.

When I was a boy growing up in the Catholic Church, women were required to cover their heads before entering the sacristy. I knew the world was changing when a young girl could simply pull a Kleenex from her purse, pop it on her head, and secure it with bobby pins.

When I was studying medicine, learning how to apply a Band-aid, nurses wore caps. The cap was awarded in a candle-light ceremony that marked the successful conclusion of the first year of nursing school, and as far as I knew, was worn with pride. Each school had its own distinctive design. Some were simple pill boxes. Others featured wings and racing stripes. Many required some assembly. They returned from the laundry starched stiff and as flat as a board. A crease here, a fold there, a strategically placed stud and a nursing crown was born. It was sort of like origami. I loved them all. Major medical centers attracted nurses, and their caps, from around the country. It provided a pleasant illusion of diversity and individuality.

Nursing caps, hats in Catholic services, and elaborate habits for nuns have all disappeared, victims of a number of factors; fashion, comfort, and feminism. But they were present, common, accepted, and expected just a few decades ago.

Both the French and Canadians have taken steps to ban the hajib in schools. Even in Canada, a country with relatively few problems, I would suspect that there are bigger fish to fry. And there is nothing that makes the scarf more attractive to a Muslim than attempts to interfere with the religious freedom to wear it. The scarf means different things to different people. It may be a symbol of modesty and devotion. In some cases it is a mark of Muslim pride. Wearing it has become a political statement. When it is required by Muslim imam, it may indeed be repressive, although there are far more tangible and troubling signs of male dominance in the Muslim world. Wearing of the scarf in the western world may represent defiance in the face of anti-Muslim sentiment, while refraining from displaying it may defy the wishes of family and mosque.

Maybe we would be less leery of Islam and its outward manifestations were it not for the events of September 11, 2001. My view is that this melting pot that we call America has a good many lumps, and these lumps make for a far more interesting country, kind of like chunks of ham in split pea soup. We attempt to homogenize America. I'm all for unity and assimilation, but I'm also all for religious freedom and individuality.

A cowboy moves from Texas and persists in wearing his boots. He pretends that it is for comfort but we know that it is because he is a Texan, and proud of it. We have exempted sushi, pizza, pad Thai, and burritos from the requirement for a bland nation. I find multicultural societies both exciting and reassuring. We don't pluck the golden threads from a rich tapestry to make it uniform. In like manner, we should celebrate our

• THE CONSERVATIVE POV •

We haven't hit bottom yet

My wife and I made our annual trek down to South Florida to spend Thanksgiving with our sons. In addition to the enjoyment of visiting with them and their ladies, I like the warm weather that usually prevails (it was in the low 40s and blowing like crazy when we got there) and there's a lot of nostalgia.

And then, there is always something political or some kind of public excitement going on; some public official is always getting canned or going to jail or whatever.

This trip we managed to be in Miami the night Larry Coker, the Miami Hurricane head football coach, got fired, and deservedly so. He managed to take a world-class football program and run it into the ground in six years. But I digress.

The night of his firing, University of Miami president, Donna Shalala, one of Bill Clinton's smurfs (but a pretty capable administrator, I understand), made a magnificent statement regarding the search for Coker's successor. She said that outside consultants would be called in, blue-ribbon committees would be empanelled and no stone would be unturned to find the absolutely perfect, most excellent in all respects, replacement. An admirable position and I applaud it.

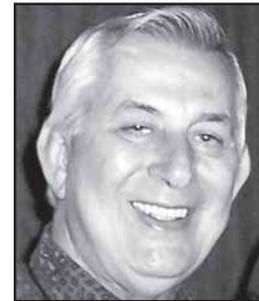

On the other hand, another leader has been faced and will continue to be faced with many replacement choices. Of course, I speak of Nancy Pelosi, evident newly crowned leader of the free world. Perhaps she should have adopted Shalala's high-road approach to her job search efforts.

Her first faux pas was the contemplation of John Murtha as House Majority leader. Murtha sort of refused a bribe offered in the ABSCAM sting operation (get back to me later) and was the recent poster boy for the cut-and-run element of the lunatic left. Saner heads prevailed (I guess) and Murtha failed to make the cut.

Next, she felt Alcee Hastings, impeached and convicted federal judge (bribery again; do I spot a pattern here?), would make a fine Chairman of the House Intelligence Committee. After all, the safety of $300 million or so deserves the very best and I'm told he's the best money can buy.

At the time of this writing, she may be reconsidering her options. One wonders why she passed up Jane Harman, top ranking Demo on the Committee, and a sister Californian? Who knows.

One blessing in an otherwise murky political environment is that the Senate,

Don Swanson Feedback is encouraged. Email dswanson@dnet.net not the House, confirms the next ambassador to the UN. I certainly hope the Senate doesn't feel the need to have Pelosi advise them in the selection of John Bolton's replacement. (He won't be confirmed; he's far too wuff and tuff on those wonderful folk with whom he has to deal).

In a line of brilliant choices, Nancy would see Sandy Berger, Clinton's National Security Advisor and convicted critical document thief as the perfect replacement. I cannot find any bribery in his background, but his other credentials seem sufficient to qualify him. Let's hope the Senate can suppress the impulse to resuscitate Sandy from the Archives.

So, I find myself defending a liberal university president and her over-the-top effort to replace a football coach in contrast with a liberal who is staffing a ruling body of the most powerful country on earth. A chilling thought which was widely aired prior to the election is that Ms. Pelosi, the San Francisco treat, will be two heartbeats away from the presidency. Can you imagine the disastrous appointments she might make?

If you are a praying person, no matter what you think of President Bush, I suggest you pray for his well-being, especially considering VP Cheney's health history. If you are one who thinks things have reached bottom, just look down.

The Problem of Evil

Our culture has a problem with Christianity. One objection to Christian belief is the problem of evil and suffering. It is a very formidable problem not only for the Christian to answer, but for the non-Christian too.

The problem goes like this: "If God allows evil/suffering to continue because he can't stop it; then he might be good, but not all powerful. If God allows evil/suffering to continue because he could stop it, he may be all powerful, but not good." This is indeed a problem which dates as far back as Epicurus's old questions.

In 1 Peter 1: 3-12, St. Peter addresses the issue persuasively. "In this you greatly rejoice, even though now for a little while, if necessary, you have been distressed by various trials, so that proof of your faith, being more precious than gold which is perishable, even though tested by fire, may be found to result in praise and glory and honor at the revelation of Jesus Christ." For the Christian, evil and suffering doesn't have to weaken faith!

Peter is simply saying that abandoning belief doesn't help us in understanding evil and suffering. Martin Luther King, Jr., in his "Letter from Birmingham Jail" said if there is no higher law, then how do we know if a human law is unjust. Like Peter, Martin Luther King, Jr. knew that in order to beat the man-centered laws of segregation, he would have to appeal to a higher transcendent law than that of man. During the most haunting times of his life, Martin Luther King appealed to his fellow man by looking to the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

If there is no God, no higher law to determine that something is unjust, then we're stuck in a predicament. If there is no God, then how can we say any historical event is unjust? If there is nothing but nature, then there is nothing more natural than violence wrote Jeane Paul-Sarte in his essay entitled "Existentialism." Fyoder Dostoevsky wrote: "If God did not exist, then everything is permitted."

On what possible basis can a culture reject that God doesn't exist based upon evil? We might have personal feelings that something is evil or unjust, but how do we ultimately know this apart from our emotions? If all there is is the natural order of things, then why do people complain about evil and suffering? It seems only natural. In a Naturalistic universe, it's just the strong eating the weak. What's scary is that some people actually live their life like this.

I in no way discount that evil and suffering is a problem for Christianity and belief in God. However, it is a bigger problem for those who disbelieve in God. Here's why. On what basis can we ask for a better world? So, how can we face evil and suffering? The cross of Christ.

Christianity cannot answer the question of evil and suffering any better than the non-believer. However, what I can say with certainty is this: I don't have the answer as to why evil and suffering happens; I can only say that it isn't because God doesn't love us.

In the cross of Christ, in the Divine sacrifice for the world, we see God emptying himself out for his people. If you're a political prisoner, then God is there. Jesus was lynched before the ruling authorities. If you feel abandoned, God is there. We see the Son crying out to the Father, "Why, why." If you have lost a loved one, God is there. He saw the Son die. God died in and through the death of Jesus Christ and tasted death infinitely more than we ever will.

This is the grand mystery of Christianity which is the inherited promise of the prophet Isaiah, "Surely our grief He Himself bore, and our sorrows He carried; yet we ourselves esteemed Him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But He was pierced through for our transgressions, He was crushed for our iniquities; the chastening for our well-being fell upon Him, and by His scourging we are healed." (Is. 53: 4-5).

to keep an eye on our future and we need a plan and a vision to follow and not be reactive."

He said there's a lot of emotion attached to people's roots in Macon County and people born in the county or whose families have been county residents for generations often feel differently about the county as a "place" than those who moved to the area.

"For those of us who were born here, our appreciation for Macon County may be likened to the appreciation one has for a home versus a house. The same activity takes place in both of those but they have a different meaning due to the passion attached to them," he said. "It's about the appreciation versus the value. We have to be sensitive to that."

Leatherman assigned each commissioner to county boards as commission liaisons while outlining areas of concern.

"Fifty-percent of the county can be developed and that's where the impact will be," he said. "We need to continue working on ordinances with the planning board." Leatherman asked Commissioner Ronnie Beale to continue his work with the planning board, this time as liaison. As a previous planning board member, Beale saw the high-impact ordinance pass and worked on the subdivision ordinance.

"Mr. Beale will act as the liaison for the commission because his approach is saturated in common sense, but as we have seen common sense isn't so common. We just have to see things as they are and do things that need to be done," said Leatherman.

Saying children are the most important resource the county has, Leatherman named Commissioners Bob Simpson and Jim Davis liaisons to the Macon County School Board.

He said the county has a new superintendent, a new school board and new school programs like the Early College High School that all represent change and growth in the school system - issues the board has to meet head-on.

violations issued - one on Oct. 24 when silt fences were allegedly opened to release silt buildup and one on Oct. 26 when silt ponds were allowed to fill with silt so that pipes meant to release clear water could only release silt-laden water.

Mayor Don Mullen said the seven violations prior to Oct. 24 are "still out there." Those are $500 each. The fine was changed later to $5,000 per day per violation.

Town Attorney Bill Coward said it's up to RiverWalk's attorney to pursue the citations prior to Oct. 24 totaling $3,500.

Proceeds from the $400,000 fine will go to the state, as is the law. Mayor Mullen said the town will pursue measures to obtain a stabilization bond to "repair the property."

RiverWalk developers have hired a new contractor to hopefully move the soil and erosion plan and subsequent development toward the finish line but General Manager Lingos admitted that the project has suffered immensely.

"Exposing the deficiencies in the original soil and erosion design and fixing that has cost us $800,000 just for the engineering and design," he said. "We've angered the neighbors, the town and we probably never will regain our reputation."

The original erosion plan failed to take into account the water that comes onto the site off U.S. 64 and its related springs - water that is largely responsible for the erosion on the site.

Bill and Liz Daughtrey, owners of the home adjacent to RiverWalk, hired Attorney Doug Wilson from Asheville. He said

"I know there are people who have moved here and are retired who may be reluctant to be a part of Macon County's growth, but we have to do the right thing for our kids and our teachers," said Leatherman. He said he wants open lines of communication between the two boards.

Economic development was cited as a major concern for the county. "We need jobs with benefits," said Leatherman. "Competition is keen and we need to come up with a plan that brings industry to Macon County so there are jobs for our kids so they can stay here."

He said when the youth of a county has to leave it to find work in the long run the county fails.

He assigned Commissioners Jim Davis and Brian McClellan as liaisons to the county's Economic Development Commission.

The board is planning a retreat in January and Leatherman asked each commissioner to come to the table with five top issues important to Macon County.

"We must lay out a positive approach for growth in Macon County," he said. "I know it's hard to work hard at something and fail, but it's worse not to try to succeed."

The Dec. 4 commission meeting has been continued to Dec. 18 at 6 p.m. The first meeting in 2007 will be Monday, Jan. 8 at 6 p.m.

the town's ordinance provides for fines per day, not per violation and when it's all added up the potential fine could be $675,000.

Even though the Daughtreys have suffered power outages, cut cable and phone lines, access to their home blocked, the creek on the property filled with silt, Attorney Wilson said they don't care about the money they just want compliance.

"They want these people to understand they absolutely must comply. They're ignoring the law even after they've been told what to do," he said.

He strongly suggested that board not accept the settlement. "Enforce the law and require them to work directly with Mr. Gantenbein (Watershed Administrator) on a specific, consistent schedule so everyone knows what's to be done, then issue a per day citation if there are violations," he said. "Unfortunately, the threat of a fine is what brings people into compliance. Five thousand dollars wipes all this away and opens the gate for more violations to come."

He also suggested the town insist that RiverWalk be required to spray flex terra on the site to stabilize the area and he suggested the town pursue a stabilization bond which could be used to repair the erosion damage.

"I've seen people walk away from things like this. You need a bond particularly due to all these people have done," he said.

He reminded the board that the law says when someone disturbing the land fails to comply with the law, "the town shall initiate an enforcement action."

expected income growth in 2007 from property values is a minimum of $150 million.

"The county's growth has led Western North Carolina for the past 20 years and the county continues to lead Western North Carolina in sales growth," he said. "Every indication is that the population will continue to rise like it has since the 1980s when it was 20,000 to 30,000 in 2000 to 50,000 in 2020."

On one hand Macon County is lucky because 50% of the county is owned by the USFS and will never be developed, but on the other hand land is a precious commodity with values skyrocketing and large parcels all over the county being subdivided. "In 1991 we had 32,000 parcels in the county; in 2006 we have 43,000," said Lightner.

The building per-square-foot price has increased dramatically over the years, too. "People are willing to pay what it takes to get a builder to their site," he said. "In the 1980s the cost per-square-foot was $38; now it's $125 per-square-foot."

Though property values county wide have increased dramatically since 2003, Highlands and Nantahala are seeing the highest percentage increase.

A Highlands property valued at $214,800 in 2003 sold for $460,000 in 2005 — a 114% increase in value, said Lightner. Another valued at $1,035,760 in 2003 sold in 2005 for $3,850,000 — a 272% increase. Another valued at $557,970 in 2003 sold for $1,475,000 in 2005 — a 164% increase. Another valued at $111,140 in 2003 sold for $433,000 in 2005 — a 290% increase.

Nantahala — destined to become the next Highlands, say some — saw large percentage increases, too.

A home valued at $249,850 in 2003, sold for $330,000 in 2005 — a 33% increase. Another valued at $96,780 in 2003, sold for $300,000 in 2005 — a 213% increase. Another valued at $186,550 in 2003, sold for $1,200,000 in 2005 — a 543% increase. Large parcels — 47.72 acres valued at $488,190 in 2003 sold for $1,325,000 in 2005 — a 172% increase. Another 37.16 acre parcel was valued at $92,130 in 2003 and sold for $350,000 in 2005 — a 280% increase.

"Location, location, location is still what drives the market values and sales prices up," said Lightner. "Not all properties will increase the same percentage county-wide. Location is still very much a factor."

He said view property and property on water like on the lake in Nantahala are high dollar properties.

The property revaluation process is driven by state laws — NC 105-286 and NC 105-283 — which require counties to establish property values at or near 100% of the current market value thereby reflecting changes in the real estate market.

His department establishes the market value by collecting and reviewing recent sales, reviewing the sales to comparable properties and developing a schedule of values.

He said they use three approaches to setting the value: a Comprehensive Sales

Approach where the property is compared with similar properties that recently sold; the Income Approach which is used for commercial businesses and involves the income derived from a similar business in the area; and the Cost Approach which involves construction costs less depreciation.

The market value is defined as the most probable selling price that a property will bring in a competitive and open market with both the buyer and the seller being motivated and well-informed.

"Things that affect the value are additions and remodels, supply and demand of the property type, the local economy and the cost of replacing or building a similar structure," said Lightner. "But the value may or may not be what the owner has invested in the property."

When it comes to appeals, the North Carolina courts have ruled that tax assessments are assumed to be correct and are accepted until proof is provided to the contrary. Lightner said only four cases have been heard in his 22 years as tax assessor.

"That's where the appeal process comes in," said Lightner. "First there is an informal appeal where the property owner tears off the part of the first notice and sends it back identifying the area of concern. If we adjust the assessment based on the concern, we send a second notice. If the owner still wants to appeal, a formal appeal process is started with the Board of Equalization."

Lightner said the burden of proof is with the taxpayer to show that the property is exceedingly over valued. "Property owners have to show solid proof and a reason why the revaluation is wrong," said Lightner. "If the proof is solid, like it's a clerical error on our part or something else, we might lower it, but sometimes we increase it. We don't like to do that, but sometimes it happens."

Tax revaluation notices will begin to go out Jan. 15, 2007. He warned commissioners to be ready. "Remember that when your phones start ringing please encourage people to go through the appeal process," said Lightner.

"During the 2003 revaluation, we had several people who appealed saying their value was too high when they actually had a sales contract on the property for a higher price than the value," said Lightner. "In one particular case, the property was valued at $262,710. The owner said the new value was unreasonable and all the time had a contract on the property for $300,000."

Commissioners said the tax rate will be set in July after they determine the amount of money they need for the fiscal 2007-2008 year. For a few years, commissioners have invoked a "Revenue Neutral Tax Rate" but they said it's too early to know what will be done for the next fiscal year.

"Valuation is determined by the market, not us, said Commission Chair Charlie Leatherman. "We determine the tax rate based on the county's needs not the other way around."

'Dance Like Nobody's Watching'

Highlands School high-schoolers did just that...danced like no one was watching, at the Homecoming Dance held at the Highlands Country Club's Hudson House, Saturday, Dec. 2.

Sara Bates and Nick Kerhoulas were selected as king and queen of the Homecoming Court at the dance. Seniors in the running were Alec Schmitt, Nick Kerhoulous, Jason Aspinwall, Grey Alexander, Allison Winn, Brittany Dryman, Katie Bryson, and Sara Bates. The court also included juniors: Greg Porter, Jake Heffington, Sally Wheeler, and Jessica Dryman. Sophomores were Hunter Lefter and Marisol Ruiz. and freshman were Matthew Potts and Ladonna Rodriguez.

Highlands Christmas Parade 2007

Long ago, it was big news when the circus came to Highlands trailing elephants up the mountain roads.

On Saturday, Dec. 2, history was made again when the Highlands United Methodist Church brought camels to town as part of the ecumenical float in the Christmas Parade. Mary and Joseph led the possession of shepherds, sheep, wise men and of course lots of children.

Crowds four people deep lined Main Street to watch the Highlands School band, cheerleaders and basketball teams; civic groups and churches dress the part as they heralded in the 2007 holiday season.

differences as much as we cherish our equality.

South Africa is a long way from a perfect state, but for a country which has been experimenting with majority rule for less than 15 years, they are doing well. Nelson Mandela walked out of 27 years of unjust imprisonment and said to his captors, hey guys, let's build a country.

They avoided the massacre of whites which characterized the post colonial period in the Congo. They have refrained from confiscation of white owned land, such as took place in Zimbabwe. They suffer a high crime rate and a frightful incidence of AIDS/HIV. They cope with tribal hostility and corruption. They are attempting to accommodate all the elements of their diverse population. They boast 11 official languages, and the constitution mentions several others from Portuguese, to Hebrew, to Sanskrit. And a woman can wear the scarf without inciting fear or incurring ridicule.

We, the greatest nation and first democracy, a country founded both on unity and on individual freedom should be able to do as much.

Eight-man football teams most commonly consist of 15-20 players, Coach Leake recommended that a team needs 12 at a minimum but it has been done with as few as nine. That translates into fewer than five athletes per class! It is not uncommon in 11-man football for athletes to play both offense and defense, so it would be expected that the same may happen in 8-man as well. One of the major similarities between 8-man and 11-man football is that the equipment is the same. Based on his experience we can outfit our players with their equipment (excluding shoes) for $200 - $225 dollars. He also shared that they try to add two or three new pairs of pads a year while eliminating the same to keep costs down and equipment up to date. I'm sure that principle could be applied to helmets as well.

The process is simple, we need to hear from each athletic director as confirmation that their school would like to go forward in this endeavor. Once we have support from enough schools we would make a formal proposal to the Little Smokey Mountain Conference, and upon their consent, they would petition the NCHSAA to allow us to begin to play.

Our goal is to ignite excitement and a sense of community by beginning full contact 8-man football in the fall of 2007!

county is taking seriously the desire to stop construction of a high rise unit on the Cashiers Road. The County Planning Department made the first step in the process by submitting a request to the Macon County Board of Commissioners for a temporary moratorium on construction of high-rise buildings over 38 feet. On Monday night, the Board voted to request the County Attorney and the County Planner to work on language authorizing a six-month moratorium on high-rise construction over four stories or 48 feet in height. This will be a temporary answer to the larger problem of zoning within Macon County, and I hope this is a wake-up call for them to act on a permanent basis to limit unacceptable construction in our pristine area.

The Town Board of Commissioners also approved McGavern Engineering's proposal to help the town engineering department in its ongoing program of improving our utility poles. With the change in state law regarding franchising cable companies it certainly is an appropriate time to push forward with this as we continue our program of pole change-outs. The state has taken over the franchising of cable companies from the cities and towns in NC which will allow other companies to become active in Highlands under a state franchise agreement. We are not sure of the wisdom of this change but we have no choice but to go along with it.

In another move the Town Board has approved a five year lease agreement with the Rotary Club to operate the Highlands Community Building and be in charge of scheduling events at the facility. The Town will continue the upkeep of the building. In fact, much maintenance work needs to be done on the building and this will begin soon.

Good news at the hospital. The Board had approved the purchase of important new diagnostic equipment recently and the first of this equipment has arrived. When I was doing cardiac surgery, we depended on good ultrasound equipment. Since then the equipment has come a long way with much improvements in the clarity of the images. Now the Highlands-Cashiers Hospital has a state-of-the-art ultrasound unit and both our cardiologist, Dr. Curtiss, and our radiologist, Dr. Stinnett, are quite pleased with the quality of the equipment. The addition of this unit greatly improves the diagnostic abilities of not only heart imaging but blood vessel and abdominal procedures. Our hospital is making great strides in not only our ability to care for people in our area but also in management and governance of our great facility.

Incarnation soloists to be featured in 'Christmas Oratorio'

Six of the Episcopal Church of the Incarnation soloists will be featured in the upcoming presentation of Camille Saint-Saens' beautiful "Christmas Oratorio" on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 17 at 5 p.m.

The choir, under the direction of Grammy Award winning conductor Fletcher Wolfe, will be accompanied by organist Barbara Luhn and internationally renowned concert pianist Robert Henry.

Mr. Henry, first-prize winner of many of the world's professional piano competitions, appears frequently as a soloist with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra.

The performance is free and open to the public and everyone is invited to attend a gala reception following the program.

'Jesus Our Treasure' at First Baptist Dec. 15 & 17

First Baptist Church choir, drama ministry, and orchestra invite you to join its congregation for the Christmas Musical Drama, Jesus, Our Treasure. The presentations will be Friday, Dec. 15, at 7 p.m and Sunday, Dec. 17, at 6:30 p.m.

Music has a big place in the celebration of Christmas. This year at First Baptist Church, drama will have a very meaningful part of the Christmas presentation. We will be presenting A Musical Drama for Christmas called Jesus, Our Treasure, created by Mike Harland, arranged and orchestrated by Camp Kirkland and scripted by Lawrence Kimbrough.

Mike Harland takes the idea of looking back at Christmas through the eyes of an old shepherd's still fresh memories from 40 years before. He shares these memories with his granddaughter who loves to hear how her grandfather was one to whom the angels spoke and actually saw the Lord Jesus in the stable where he was born.

Playing the part of Jacob, the grandfather, is Rick Trevathan. The granddaughter, Miriam, is played by Ali Cutshaw. Other characters are Mary and Joseph portrayed by Kirsten and Keith McKim, the boy Jesus, by Elias McKim, Herod by Bill Hogue, other shepherds by Chase and Brice Jenkins, and possibly others. The Wise Men are played by Dennie Davis, Bruce Oliver, and Jerry McGill.

Directors Elizabeth Loosier and Pam Powell are assisted by Sherry Gray and Shirley Layow. Others who are participating or who have contributed in various ways are: Lara Gibson, Jessica Dryman, Hannah Oliver, Greg Porter, Wendy Latta, Alice Dyer, Cindy Trevathan, Seth Robinson, Roy Potts, Marie Davis, Crystal Dempsey, Chris Cutshaw, Robby Reed, Casey Jenkins, and possibly some that are not listed.

Accompaniment will be provided by Anne Porter and June Hogue along with the First Baptist Church orchestra under the direction of Joe Powell. These, as well as the choir, have been working hard and long to make this possible.

We hope you will come and invite all your friends and relatives to celebrate with us on one of the above dates. God wants us to be active in telling His story.

Auditions for HCP's 'Caught in the Villian's Web' Dec. 10-11

The Highlands Community Players are ready to begin work on its next production "Caught in the Villian's Web."

Auditions are Sunday, Dec. 10 and Monday, Dec. 11, if needed.

The group will be casting, five women ranging in ages from 20-60 and four men ages 30-40.

Auditions are held at the Martin Lipscomb Performing Arts Center, Chestnut Street, Highlands. Sunday from 2-4 p.m. and Monday, from 5:30-7 p.m.- if needed. Performance dates are February 22-25 and March 2-4, 2007

For more information please call: 526-2080. "Overactors" are preferred. Scripts available at the Hudson Library.

HCP annual tradition continues with free Christmas presentation

The Players are presenting their free Christmas reading Thursday, Dec. 7, 7 p.m. at the Martin-Lipscomb Performing Arts Center with many of the same performers from last year and several new faces. The program is a mixture of poetry, prose, and music—some humorous, some serious, some inspirational—all entertaining and performed by talented readers and musicians.

For instance, brothers Chad and Brandon Price will sing several favorite Christmas songs; Ron Leslie will be reading "Christmas in Ten Pieces," a hilarious account of a father trying to put together a toy for his son on Christmas eve; Elaine Whitehurst will read a touching account of a school Christmas play entitled "Trouble at the Inn:" and Dean Zuch will describe some of the celebrations associated with the Winter Solstice, introducing "the Mummies," who will perform a centuries old Mummies' play, "A Tale of Old Christmas."

This is just a sampling of the fun to be had at the Community Players' traditional Holiday program, a gift to the community, requiring no tickets, no reservations—just an audience.

It's suitable for the whole family, and afterwards there'll be hot cider provided by the Highlands Chamber of Commerce and homemade goodies provided by the Players.

For more information, leave a message on the Players' answering machine, 526-8084.

Writers to read for the public

A local group of very talented writers is opening their December meeting to the public in the hopes that this will become a monthly event.

Ann Doggett, leader of the Highlands Writers' Group invites the public to attend the first ever Writers – in – the Round to be held on Friday, Dec. 8 at the Studio on Main at 7 p.m.

This group of writers includes published and non-published authors of various genres: poetry, short stories, novels and even an intrepid songwriter, all of whom will be sharing from their own original works.

Ms. Doggett encourages lovers of the written word to attend this reading and will be glad to answer questions of anyone interested in joining the group. This group has been together for over 10 years and meets weekly in Highlands.

The reading is free and will be held at The Instant Theatre Company's Studio on Main that is located at 310 Main Street, upstairs at Oak Square in Highlands. The studio has ample parking and easy elevator access to its intimate upstairs theatre.

For more information call Ms. Doggett at 526-8009 or visit the ITC website at www.InstantTheatre.org

The Woopets are coming to town!

Mary Wooten and her giant puppets at Instant Theater on Dec. 9.

The enchantment and magic of the Woopets is coming to Highlands Saturday, Dec. 9 at 7 p.m. at The Instant Theater's Studio on Main.

Earlier this year, Mary Wooten brought her Giant Puppets, called Woopets to The Studio on Main for a children's theatre workshop and won the hearts of young and old. The Instant Theatre Company is bringing the Woopets back for a special winter performance that will delight and entertain everyone.

This holiday show consists of two different themes. Peter and The Wolf will feature a "real" full-bodied wolf and the Faerie Ring stars real live fairies. Children of all ages will be enchanted by the imagination and creativity the Woopets bring to the stage and there will be plenty of opportunity for audience participation, as well.

The show begins at 7 p.m. and tickets are $15 for adults and $5 for children under 17. No reservations are required. For more information call the Instant Theatre Company box office at 342-9197 or visit the website at www.InstantTheatre.org

The Studio on Main is located upstairs at Oak Square, 310 Main Street in Highlands. There is ample parking and easy elevator access to its intimate upstairs theatre.

a new mind game

No. AB14

THE SETUP:

The cube has 27 consecutive numbers in it, arranged in three layers with 9 numbers each. These numbers are arranged in a special pattern: For each layer, the sum of the three numbers in each row, column or diagonal, is 3 times its center number. Eight diagonals connect all 3 layers by running through the center number of the middle layer. Each diagonal contains 3 numbers equalling the total of the three center numbers. One of the diagonals is shown with circles.

THE CHALLENGE:

Start with the three center numbers for each layer and two other numbers. Now pour a cup of coffee, pick up a pencil and eraser and try to figure out where the other 22 numbers belong. Good Luck!

The first correct solution emailed earns a coupon for a FREE cup of coffee from Buck's Coffee Cafe on Main Street.

FIRE & RESCUE REPORT

The following is the Highlands Fire & Rescue Dept. log entries for the week of Dec. 3-6.

Dec. 3

• The dept. was first-responders to assist EMS with a medical call at Chestnut Hill. The person was transported to the hospital.

Dec. 4

• The dept. responded to a vehicle fire on U.S. 64 west at Lake Sequoyah. The vehicle was destroyed.

• The dept. responded to an alarm at a home on Flat Mountain Road. It was unfounded.

Dec. 5

• The dept. provided mutual aid to Cashiers. The call was cancelled en route.

• The dept. responded to a call of a brush fire at N.C. 28 south and Rich Gap Road. A construction burn got out of control but there was no damage to nearby houses.

Dec. 6

• The dept. was first-responders to assist EMS with a medical call at the Mountain Living Center on N.C. 106. The patient was transferred to the hospital.

2007 fire & rescue officers elected

At its Dec. 3 meeting, Highlands Fire & Rescue Dept. volunteers elected officers for 2007.

James "Popcorn" Manley was elected Chief; Allan "Ricky" Bryson was elected Assistant Chief; Robbie Forrester was elected Captain; Wayne Henry was elected

1st. Lt.; Roger L. Wilson was elected 2nd. Lt.; Jimmy Tate was elected Rescue Captain; Eric Pierson was elected Rescue Lt.; Terry Watson was elected Treasurer; Lenny Metrick was elected Secretary and Chief Manley appointed Buddy Miller as Chaplain.

• THANK YOU NOTES •

On behalf of my family, I would like to take this opportunity to say "Thank You" for the cards, flowers, food, visits, thoughts, and prayers that were brought forth during the loss of our loved one. Please know that we appreciate all that has been done for our family. We are so blessed to live in such a great community. May the legacy of our dad, husband, grandfather, brother, uncle, and friend live on forever.

Melanie Miller and The Family of Jamie Keener

In all the excitement of the best Christmas Tree Lighting ever, somehow we forgot one of the most important elements. Yes, the decorations were fabulous, the weather was superb, the hot chocolate was great, the sweatshirts, the singers, the committee, and on and on. But it would not have been in any way, shape or form possible without the kindness and generosity of the Highlands United Methodist Church. We used their grounds and their tree, and for all practical purposes, we are guests in their house of worship. We owe them a great debt of thanks for allowing Highlands to celebrate in their house.
