Town’s ‘06-’07 budget adopted

Besides passing the proposed Town of Highlands budget at a special budget meeting, Wednesday June 28, commissioners discussed further the need to increase taxes and fees for services in Highlands.

Expanding the sewer infrastructure is high on the Board of Commissioners’ list of things to accomplish over the next five years—and money is needed to do it.

First up is the infrastructure in the Harris Lake Drainage Basin which will cost about $2 million when it’s all over. Increasing sewer usage and connection

Bell new PB chair

With John Cleaveland’s resignation from the Planning Board, electing a chairman was the first thing on the Planning Board’s agenda Monday night.

Griffin Bell was elected unanimously to take Cleaveland’s place. “I think Bell will make a good chairman,” said Gantenbein. “He understands that it’s important for the Planning Board to be totally independent and to give the appearance of being independent to maintain integrity.”

During the rest of the meeting, the board worked on zoning the ETJ area’s residential areas. Gantenbein presented the board with a R4 zone to accommodate new growth and what is currently in the area.

As written, “The R4 ETJ residential district is a low- to medium-density residential district for single-family dwellings, with customary accessory outbuildings.”

Parking permits part of solution

by Ashlyn Williams

Taking an afternoon to explore unique stores is a definite thrill for many who venture to the Highlands. They come from all over—Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, and neighboring towns in North Carolina. But, with parking spaces on Main Street at a premium and a two-hour time limit designated for many spots, retailers claim some shoppers worry more about parking limits than shopping.

Recently, the Highlands Chamber of Commerce proposed a solution to this problem: special one day passes. For all out-of-state visitors, passes can be obtained from the Highlands Visitor Center. The Center keeps a log of the addresses of the people who get passes and at the end of 30 days the result will be given to the Town Board for review.

Though the “bike police” have only noticed a few passes in cars, since June

On Tuesday, June 27 at about 4:15 p.m. the Highlands Fire & Rescue Dept. burned the old Nick’s Restaurant. Despite exhaustive efforts by the Moschourises, Old Edwards Inn & Hospitality Group, The Highlands Historical Society and private citizens, a taker for the building couldn’t be found. OIEI donated the $5,000 it was going to give to help move the house to the fire department. It tooks weeks to get permits from the Public Health Dept. and the Air Quality Dept. to burn the building. After 35 percent asbestos was found in 108 sq. ft. of linoleum in the kitchen area of the building, it had to be removed and carted away before burning. Testing fees cost OIEI about $1,800.

HS principal set for 2006-2007

By Kim Lewicki & Susanna Forrester

The search for the Highlands School principal is over so students and staff will have a new principal to guide them in the upcoming school year.

At the Monday, June 26 school board meeting, the school board voted to hire four new principals at the recommendation of Superintendent Dr. Frank Yeager. Three were hired from within the system but one, Brian Jetter, was hired for Highlands School. Jetter comes to Highlands from the Thomasville City School System in Thomasville Ga.

“It’s clear to me that Jetter can make the tough decisions for the right reason as opposed to doing what’s popular,” said Yeager. “He will offer Highlands School
Ross responds to Cleaveland letter

Dear Editor,

After reading John Cleaveland's letters to last week's newspapers, I felt that I needed to shed some light on the subject of my attendance to Planning Board meetings. My relationship with the Planning Board I thought was a good one, however now I am not sure. I am one who frequents the planning board. The following are my reasons for attending many of your meetings. I am on two committees of the Town Board that require my attendance. I am a member of the OEL Committee. This committee was formed several years ago because of public concern due to the appearance of a conflict of interest by a staff member. I also attend the PB meetings as representative of the ETJ Committee. As you know, we have had multiple meetings and scheduling discussions for this complex effort. In addition, I attend some PB meetings to get early or first hand information on some complex projects. I feel that this can make me a better-informed commissioner to serve the public. Lastly, I am there to represent clients from time to time.

When I attend these meetings, I make my best effort not to include myself in the discussions. There have been times when I have been asked to clarify some information or direction from the Town Board. I do this very reluctantly and I try to choose my words carefully so as not to influence any decisions that you make.

John's term limit on the PB expires at the end of this month and therefore his resignation is effectively from only the Appearance Commission. It will be a loss to our community in that he cannot continue on the PB. His support and effort for ETJ has been extremely valuable. If it was not for his and other leaders' past efforts we would not have the important land use regulations in place.

I also wish to thank the current and outgoing PB members for their time served. I know that sometimes the Town Board does not always agree with all your decisions; however, it is not because we do not listen. On personal note, as a former PB member, the largest reason that I ran for the Town Board was that I was frustrated by the good old Town Board's reluctance to move forward with the issues that you are taking on today.

Highlands-Cashiers Hospital’s general surgeon search over

General surgery will soon be available again at Highlands-Cashiers Hospital, thanks to the addition of a new surgeon who has agreed to relocate his practice to the area effective July 10.

Dr. Leslie Pearlstein, FACS, has been practicing for the last several years in Murphy, NC, but has had many years of operating room experience in hospitals in St. Petersburg, FL. The hospital has been without a general surgeon since Dr. Daniel D. Richardson resigned abruptly last February.

Hospital officials were early pleased that the intensive search for a new general surgeon had met with success.

“I am delighted that the hospital is soon going to be resuming general surgery. It’s a very important step forward for the hospital and for the communities it serves,” said Bud Smith chairman of the hospital’s board of directors. “I think Dr. Pearlstein is a very good fit for Highlands-Cashiers Hospital and we are very lucky to have a surgeon of his impeccable credentials joining our medical community.”

Da Gladfly Report

Summer is in full swing and Highlands is jumpin' with cash registers a chinging and wine glasses a tinklin' all over the mountain. The smell of gossip and money is in the air and that means it is time for my disgusting gladfly report on everyone who is anyone right here in our grand little town. Ready? Are you sitting down?

A quick check of all the cars parked on Main Street revealed over half of them have those cute little yellow ribbon stickers plastered somewhere on their cars. This, of course, is a takeoff from a wonderful song written in 1972 about a felon, probably a sex predator, being released from prison after serving three years of hard time and is coming home to who knows who.

She, maybe a girlfriend or wife, or both, (or maybe even a guy) is supposed to tie a yellow ribbon around the old oak tree if he is to get off the bus and register with the parole office. I was shocked to see so many of our visitors have criminals in their families who are doing hard time for felonies. I hope they are all not sex predators. Is it safe to go out at night?

Since I was already on Main Street, I decided to do a random survey on what our visitors thought about the current ETJ hubbub. They were presented with this question. "What are your personal feelings about ETJ?" Surprisingly, they took the question quite seriously. Here are the results of my survey.

Twenty-three people reported they are taking prescription drugs for the ailment and are getting better while sixteen people were firm believers there really are people from other planets visiting us. Eight people admitted they had not seen the movie. Six folks said they were embarrassed to say they had never eaten there and only one guy said he was outraged by the unfairness of what is going on. He felt that hard liquor should be sold in restaurants.

Moving on, Sandy Better from Chitlins, Georgia will marry Rufus Moore from Climax, Georgia. The couple will marry on Sunset Rock in Highlands. The wedding announcement, of course, will read "Couple to get married on Sunset Rock is Moore/Better.

Cindy and Melissa Nason have been acting for years, but this summer's production of Fiddler on the Roof in Highlands, NC has given them a chance to reflect on their real-life roles of mother and daughter. Fiddler on the Roof, running at the Highlands Playhouse June 22 – July 9, features Cindy as Golde, the matriarch of a large family of girls—five to be exact—and Melissa, age 13, plays Shprintze, one of Golde's younger daughters. The well-loved musical looks at the importance of family in a changing world, something Nason and other female cast members are familiar with.

"It's been fun. It's also been a little bit challenging," says the mother of two about working with one of her daughters on stage. "This is Melissa's first professional role—until this show it's all been school and community theater. I'm responsible for someone else so I have one foot in being a mom and one foot in being an actress." Nason has found herself reminding Melissa to refrain from whispering at key moments in the show, and to stay focused. Melissa doesn't seem to mind the guidance. "She's less temperamental than Golde in real life," the younger Nason grins. "She's very calm.

Another teenage performer, Kelsey Duttlinger, also finds family a big help. Kelsey's mom Cari, a costumer with the show, is on hand to provide support. "I try to make sure she's ready and puts the time in to know her lines like a pro," she says of her 14-year-old daughter. "She'll get food for me, and give me encouragement," adds Kelsey. "It's good to have her around."

Local teen Jessica Bryant, who plays daughter Bielke, doesn't have to worry about being far from home but draws on her family as well. "I get the dynamic of a hectic, crazy family. It makes me miss them so much," says the twenty-something actress. Her goal now, she says, is "to be a working actress in New York and still have time to have a family; to balance that out." Bryant is currently attending New York University's Tisch School of the Arts. Could she use a matchmaker in the Big Apple? "Definitely," she laughs. "When you're around a bunch of theater guys all the time, you don't meet many good prospects."

As for her own two daughters' future, does Cindy ever find herself wishing for a good matchmaker? "Of course!" Nason replies. "Me being the matchmaker!"

We are hearing whispers about Highlands/Cashiers Hospital doctors discovering a new virus affecting our community. The doctors have supposedly isolated the virus and have named it “LaCabuksincoffers,” pronounced Lac-a-buks-in-coffers. The virus mostly affects lucky spermers living in the Highlands area and reportedly poor folks have little to worry about.

Speaking of “lucky spermers” (people born with loads of money who just live around drinking wine and hugging their Grand pianos) a group from Atlanta is negotiating with the Forest Service to buy a small strip of land between here and Franklin. They will construct a zip line between the two towns. People attach themselves to the line and zip to Franklin in less than two minutes. When asked how folks get back, they said “Who cares? They did recommend keeping your mouth closed to keep bugs off your teeth.

While pushing dirt around to build OEI’s new village, workers uncovered an ancient mammal that actually ate day trippers. Scientists are frantically looking into ways to clone the mammal back into existence. They have named it “Ridotrippers Rex.”

Speaking of scientists, there’s a bunch of cone heads at the ole Nature Center studying the sex habits of the rare North Carolina minnow. The study got sidetracked after learning that minnow poop, when rubbed on one’s forehead, makes people want to vote for ETJ. Supposedly, the town board is hoarding samples of the rare stuff.

Fight terrorists not governments

The FBI announced the bust of seven mostly home grown terrorists in Miami last week. The two from Haiti weren’t exactly home grown but were probably nurtured on US food stamps.

I’m skeptical of the report that these guys planned to blow the Sears tower in Chicago and some buildings in Miami. I can imagine folks in Miami rioting to demand trilingual street signs, but planning terrorist strikes against America? Terrorists from Miami, Florida seem about as likely as NBA stars from Burlington, Vermont.

If I’d been asked to guess one thing that Orange County, California and Dade County, Florida have in common, it would have been complete absence of Mudjahideen. These guys hadn’t attended jihadist camps in Afghanistan. They drilled around a warehouse parking lot in Liberty City. They tried to lure young boys into the Islamic life style with promises of free karate lessons. A neighbor reported seeing guys standing outside the warehouse wearing turbans, guarding whatever was happening inside.

I don’t want to dismiss the danger of these guys too quickly or cast doubt on federal reports that we’ve thwarted a major terrorist attack, but FBI Deputy Director John Pistole’s statement that their “plans” were more inspirational than operational seems close to the mark. The Miami terrorists are to terrorists as Highlands-Cashiers Hospital is to the Mayo Clinic.

There were expected protests of disbelief from family members, stuff like, “My boy’s a good boy and wouldn’t harm a fly.” But what added unneeded additional comedy to this story came from the father of one suspect who claimed that his son was home reading the Bible in the evening.

Five native born Americans teaming with two Haitians, honing terrorist skills in a parking lot, wearing turbans, luring kids with promises of free karate lessons, reading Quran by day and Bible by night. These guys were well rounded if nothing more. In terrorist bombs, fertilizer rules. If they had been able to secure a few pounds of Miracle Gro, they might have succeeded in blowing Miami right off the Peninsula. Which leads us to their relationship with al Qaeda.

A neighborhood boy whom they had attempted to recruit reported their efforts to the FBI. Maybe he was a patriot. Maybe he was a snitch. I’d hate to think the FBI paid much for information on this gang. Somehow, the feds managed to plant a contact and infiltrate the “Army of Islam” or whatever these guys called themselves. They used a guy of middle eastern descent claiming to be an al Qaeda spokesman, but how he got in remains a mystery. Maybe he dropped by the warehouse and said in a thick Arabic accent, “You guys got a basketball court inside?” Maybe the answer was, “No, dude, but we got us a fine dojo.” I do wonder what these guys were smoking at cell meetings to believe that this jihadi just fell into their laps. Maybe they met on “My Space” with the introduction something like “Seven aspirant Islamic terrorists in search of a patron.”

After contact was made, the nascent terrorists requested, among other things, uniforms, boots, fertilizer, and $50,000 to start an army. I understand the fertilizer, the stuff of bombs, and the money. But boots and uniforms? If I wanted to blow up the Sears Tower, I think I’d try to remain as inconspicuous as possible. Imagine these guys showing up in Chicago in boots and fatigues, hefting 50 pound bags of fertilizer from DuPont. Maybe the uniforms they had in mind weren’t fatigues at all but those cute pajama coordinates that terrorists are forever wearing in videos from the mountainous training camps. They feature baggy pants and a sash over the blouse. The trainees are hurdling mountains wearing in videos from the mountainous training camps. They feature baggy pants and a sash over the blouse. The trainees are hurdling mountains.

Terrorism is a grave concern. Even this comedic, inept version carries a strong warning. England learned that home grown terrorists do exist and are capable of blowing up trains and buses and killing people. The Canadians dodged a bullet and we seem to have dodged at least a cream puff.

In both Canada and England, the terrorists were native born Islamic youths who had failed to integrate into society, who identified themselves as Muslim rather than British or Canadian, and who, acting on that sense of identity chose jihad in support of Muslim brethren. It was apparently different here. These young men did not.

9, there have been a total of 28 passes issued at the chamber. The numbers aren't exactly what the chamber hoped for, but then again Highlands is just coming into the tourist season.

"It's not been quite as many as I had envisioned," said president of Chamber of Commerce Bill Bassham. "As of right now there is plenty of parking on Main Street during the week and there is heavy usage on Fridays and Saturdays," he said.

While walking along the streets of town, it is easy to see that parking can be problematic on Main Street during peak times. But, the question is: Will this new trial parking program be beneficial to business?

"In one way, when they come into shop, it will be better for the store owners. It gives them more time to look around at other shops and find what they want without having to move their car," Lauren Cress, assistant store manager of the Bear Mountain Outfitters.

Some merchants claimed the problem with the two-hour parking limit was that people were interrupted during their shopping time. With the trial parking program, merchants hope people will have more time, as some vacationers agree.

"Great idea, it gives us more time to shop," said Martha Roth, visitor from Houston, Texas.

"Anything to help the merchants—we certainly need more than two hours," said Mary Humphreys of Florida. When questioned, these ladies were surprised to hear about the new parking program, showing that the word on this may not be well-known.

"People can shop a little more leisurely," said Brenda Platainia, store clerk with Bear Mountain Outfitters. "But, the problem is how do you get the word out to visitors? With the 4th of July coming up — maybe make an announcement," she said.

Of course, as you venture downtown, opinions somewhat vary. In fact, some store owners feel that their businesses were affected either way.

"I don't think it [two hour parking limit] affected us. No one ever said that they had to go and move their car," said Eugenia Green, manager of Katy's on Main. "It doesn't affect us either way — we've been blessed," she said.

Yet, consider the new parking rule: passes are given to visitors from out-of-state.

"Why wouldn't it go to everyone?" Green said. This is a very plausible question to ask: What about those people that are in-state residents that come from Greensboro, Charlotte, or the coast to visit for the weekend? Will they still be bound to the two hour parking rule?

"It's hard for an out-of-town visitor to do Highlands in two hours, so parking permits are a good idea," said Colette Clark, gallery sitter at the Robert Tino Gallery. "But why does it have to be someone out-of-state? Anyone should be able to get a one-day pass."

Eugenia Green, manager of Katy's on Main, felt the same way.

"I don't know what the solution is going to be. The answer?" she said.

The opinion of everyone having the same privileges — both in and out-of-state — is a thought shared by many people.

"Why should we be any different than the residents," said retired school teacher, Oscar Oropeca. Owner of Bags on Main, Bob Milgrim, felt the same way.

"No, I don't think you should limit the parking permits to out-of-state visitors. It should be the same for everyone," he said.

"There are both short-term regular shoppers and long-term shoppers — there needs to be longer parking," said Rosemary Fleming, store clerk at Cyrano's Bookshop. "There has always been a parking fluctuation," she said.

Regardless of fluctuation, parking in the center of town can be quite a task. "I know people that avoid downtown because it's such a hassle," said Stewart Ferguson, store clerk at Cyrano's.

So with parking a problem and the passes offering a partial solution — what's the answer?

"I don't know what the solution is to parking," said Colette Clark. "As an answer, we're focused on getting the word out to the community."

employee, I park on Spring Street to free up the Main Street parking. I think if everyone did that, then it wouldn’t be as much of a problem,” she said.

As per the town’s ordinance, employees and merchants are supposed to park on Main Street.

Bob Milgrim said the town’s original two hour parking restraints did not help business and he thinks employees shouldn’t be allowed to park on Main Street.

But Charlie Belvedere of Suzette’s Boutique on Main said employee parking on Main Street is a big part of the “parking” problem. “I don’t think that there would be a parking problem if a rule was enforced so that employees couldn’t park on Main Street,” he said. “But with the old two-hour parking rule, customers would get upset because they would have to go and move their car,” he said.

Yet, there are always exceptions to circumstances. Real estate agencies say they rely heavily on easy access to their cars and it’s a hassle for them to escort potential buyers to their cars on side streets.

“I disagree with the parking ordinance. I shouldn’t have to take customers two blocks to get to my car,” said Terry Potts of Country Club Properties. “I would have to have equal access to parking on the streets as visitors,” he said. Potts went on to say that if merchants could police their own employees, making sure that they don’t park in front of the stores, then perhaps it would help free up parking.

The chamber will present its findings to the Town Board by the end of July. The report could affect the town’s parking ordinance.

Peter Malvern Sterrie

Peter Malvern Sterrie, age 83, of 71 West End Drive, Franklin, died Saturday, June 24, 2006 at an Asheville hospital.

Born on November 14, 1922 in St. James, MN, he was a son of the late Ole Hess and Ella Christine Anderson Sterrie. A US Army Air Corp veteran of WWII, he was the pilot of a B-24 bomber. He was a life member of the Franklin VFW Post #7339, and was an employee of the Macon County Recycling Center in the Carson Community.

Mr. Sterrie was a humble man and loved his family. Wild bird feeding was his passion, and he never met a stranger.

He is survived by his wife of 58 years, Joan Fuller Sterrie; two daughters, Kris Sterrie of Franklin, N.C. and Jane Sterrie Escalera and her husband, Emile of College Park, GA; a son Richard Sterrie and his wife, Patricia, of Maryville, TN; a sister, Eloise Cadman of Clairmont, CA; a brother, Dr. Norman Sterrie of Minneapolis, MN; three grandchildren, Grant Sterrie, Emily Sterrie, and Yuri Escalera; one great-granddaughter, Lucy Sterrie.

Memorial services will be held at 7 p.m. on Saturday, July 15, 2006 in the Chapel of Bryant Funeral Home. The Rev. Hunter Coleman will officiate.

The family will receive friends from 6-7 p.m., one hour prior to the service, at Bryant Funeral Home.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests that memorials be made to a humane society of your choice. Bryant Funeral Home is in charge of the arrangements.

not have roots in the Middle East, but in Africa. They were not first or second generation Muslim immigrants. In fact, unless it turns out they were the children of recent Haitian immigrants, it is most likely that their ancestors arrived aboard eighteenth century slave ships. Islam issues a strong call to poor, desperate young black men, in prison or out. Perhaps the siren call of revenge is equally strong. What has happened in our society that our own citizens see us as the enemy — that they are willing to succumb to the call of an alien philosophy and an unfamiliar religion, and choose to wage war on us?

We may not be so fortunate with the next group. The outcome may not be slapstick. It is likely to be tragic. It is far easier to identify the enemy from without, and that is a more daunting task, than the enemy from within. We can’t intercept these guys at the border or find them on a list of suspected terrorists provided by the Jordanian secret police. We can’t subject them to fingerprint checks and iris scans at the point of entry, because they are already here, living. If not among us, at least on the other side of the tracks.

We house a significant number of citizens who feel hopeless, disenfranchised, bypassed by the American dream. Few of them, I suspect, are candidates to adopt a perverse variety of Islam and wage war on America. A few is far too many. I have often said that we must fight the war on terrorism by fighting terrorists, not by toppling governments. The carnage, excuse me, the collateral damage, of war is far too great. Too many innocents are killed, maimed, left sick, impoverished and homeless. The blood that is shed in these adventures nurtures the seeds of Islamic terrorism, even, it seems, in the sandy soil of Miami.

"Recruiting a new general surgeon has been a top priority for the hospital. We've talked with a number of very fine candidates, but we are very pleased that Dr. Pearlstein has decided to come here. This is a major step forward in restoring public confidence in the direction of the hospital and the future of quality medical care for area residents," said president and CEO Ken Shull. "Dr. Pearlstein's decision to relocate his practice to Highlands is solid confirmation that Highlands-Cashiers Hospital can, and will, attract top-quality physicians."

A fellow of the American College of Surgeons, Dr. Pearlstein has nearly 35 years of experience in his field, much of it specializing in general cancer and breast cancer surgery. He has received numerous honors during his career, including being named Top Doctor by Business North Carolina last year. Before moving to the mountains of Western North Carolina, he was associated with Bayfront-St. Anthony's Healthcare System in Florida, where he served at various times on numerous hospital boards, as head of the surgical department, and as chief of staff.

He graduated Summa Cum Laude from Duke University and in the top 10 percent of his class from the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine. He performed his surgical internship and residency at Hopkins and the University of Louisville.

"We are very excited to get a general surgeon of the experience and qualifications of Dr. Pearlstein," said Shull. "He is extremely well-qualified professionally and he is going to be a strong addition to our medical staff. In addition to his outstanding professional reputation, Dr. Pearlstein is both a very warm and pleasant person."

"I hope my surgical experience, particularly in the area of cancer surgery and breast surgery, will enhance the overall quality of medical care available in the Highlands-Cashiers area," Pearlstein said in the telephone interview Friday. "I'm looking forward to working closely with the other physicians in the area to serve the hospital's patients."

Since he has already been practicing elsewhere in the state for several years, Dr. Pearlstein already has a North Carolina Medical License. "That was an added benefit, since it will allow him to transition to Highlands very quickly," added Shull. Dr. Pearlstein's new office will be located in Suite 300 of the Jane Woodruff Medical Building at the rear of the hospital campus. Appointments can be made by calling 828 526-1900.

The signing of Pearlstein by the hospital drew praise from at least one former colleague Jim Rothermel, MD, a retired OB/GYN from St. Petersburg, who now lives in Highlands and recently joined the H-C Hospital's board of directors, worked with Dr. Pearlstein during his career.

"We practiced in the same town for 20 years, and even at some of the same hospitals, I've worked with him on several difficult cases over the years, so I am very familiar with Dr. Pearlstein's qualifications and abilities," Rothermel said last week. "He has impeccable credentials, in addition to being a quiet and caring individual. Not only is he very experienced, but he is a very bright person. He is well-versed on the latest surgical techniques and procedures. We are very fortunate to get a person of his caliber."

Pearlstein has published and lectured extensively in his field. He is certified by the American Board of Surgery and a member of the American Society of Breast Surgeons, as well as other professional organizations. While in Florida, he was an assistant clinical professor at the University of South Florida.

The hospital has suffered financially as the result of the loss of its only general surgeon and active gastroenterologist last winter, but Shull said the resumption of general surgery may well prove a key to turning the corner financially.

"In addition to restoring an important medical service to our community, resuming general surgery will significantly improve the hospital's financial situation over the course of the next several months, and also facilitate our efforts to resume gastroenterology services," he said. "We have been talking at a gastroenterology group that has expressed interest in opening a part-time practice here, but they have been reluctant to do so until we had a general surgeon on staff. Now, that hurdle has been cleared."

Changing the world one house at a time

By Susanna Forrester

In a small corner of Clear Creek a group of young volunteers crouches on a rooftop in the blazing midday sun. The smell of tar drifts in a warm summer breeze along with the sound of hammers and saws.

“It seems like they work good together,” said Jane Houston, owner of the home whose roof is being repaired. Houston’s husband died seven months ago and taking care of the house had taken a back seat to taking care of him.

Houston heard about World Changers, an organization sponsored by the Southern Baptists, from a neighbor who lived down the road. She applied two years ago for help. “It was getting really rough,” Houston said. But now she doesn’t have to worry about her roof leaking during a mountain gully washer.

The volunteers pry up rotten pieces of plywood and knock them to the ground while others nail down shiny black tar paper and brand new shingles.

“It’s fun if you like to work with kids,” said Stan Johnson, the crew leader and a volunteer for the past 27 years. “The kids get satisfaction because they’ve done something you can see.”

“We should be able to get the kids to do the work Johnson added. Johnson’s team was made up of four or five different church groups, and not only Baptists can participate in the organization, which began in Brevard, Tenn. in 1990, but other church denominations as well. The ministry focuses on helping youth from junior high to college express their faith by reaching out to those in need.

On a shady lane on the Cashiers side of Highlands another group of World Changers puts down fresh shingles on Pam and Lorraine Talley’s house. “I’m glad they’re doing it cause we needed it,” said Pam Talley, Lorraine Talley’s daughter, as she watched them through the window.

A hundred Macon County residents have been visited by World Changers in the past six years for repairs to roofs and floors, electrical, plumbing, insulation, and the installation of ramps for the elderly and handicapped. The materials are provided locally and World Changers provides the labor.

This year, 25 Macon County home owners will have improved living conditions thanks to World Changers. The North Carolina Housing Finance Agency’s Urgent Repair Program will provide the funds for the materials needed for this year’s projects. Macon County will save an estimated $63,800 and be able to serve twice as many homes with the Urgent Repair Grant Funds because of the volunteer labor provided by World Changers.

Volunteers from across the United States, 274 of them from Kansas, Texas, Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Eastern NC, Oklahoma are at work in Macon County this summer. They range in age from 15 to 64, but they all serve here for one purpose. “It’s a wonderful ministry,” Johnson said, wiping the sweat from his brow.

the stability it needs.”

Though a committee process was discussed early on, when the school board charged Dr. Yeager with the task of finding the county the four principals needed for the 2006-2007 school year, he decided to go it alone.

Monday night’s school board meeting was the first time board members had heard anything about the candidates. All four principals’ employment is effective July 1. Yeager said it might be a while after that until Jetter can get settled in Highlands.

Jetter, who served five years as principal of Thomasville High School in Thomasville, GA starting in 1994, was named Director of Operations for the Thomasville City School System in July of 1999. He had many responsibilities including finance, budget, purchasing, transportation, maintenance, crisis management, safety, and risk management.

“Jetter was a successful principal for years and is successful in his current job,” said Yeager. “He is bright, articulate, can handle high school and is intelligent enough to know how to best deal with high school and elementary school.”

Yeager said he considered the task of finding good principals for Macon County top on his list.

“There is nothing as significant to a school system as its principals. It’s what makes all the difference and there is nothing I take as serious as this,” said Yeager.

“I’ve seen good districts with bad schools and good schools in bad districts, and invariably it’s the principals that make the difference.”

After graduating from Fort Lauderdale High School, Jetter began his college career at the University of Florida on a football scholarship. He earned a B.A. in English, and, after a brief spell with the Atlanta Falcons in the NFL, returned to UF and earned an M.A. in English.

Jetter, who is entering his 34th year in public school education, began his teaching career in Gainesville, Fl., in 1971. In 1988 he received his Education Specialist degree from Nova University.
After serving as a teacher, athletic director and assistant principal in Gainesville high schools, he became principal of Columbia High School in Lake City, Fl., in 1991.

Jetter being given a $750 housing allowance to help offset Highlands high cost of housing. The board said he doesn’t have to live in Highlands year round, but he is required to live in town during the winter so he can drive the roads and decide if school needs to be closed. So, he can presumably use the money for that time of year, said Yeager
if he chooses not to live in Highlands year round.

School board members said they don’t feel they owe a ‘hardship’ allowance to anyone else at Highlands School, because the principal is the only one required to be in Highlands in the winter to judge the road conditions.

Dr. Yeager said Assistant Principal
Mark Thomas is still employed by Macon County as Highsands School Assistant Principal.

The other new principals hired by the county are Todd Gibbs for Macon
Middle School, Scot Maslin for Cullasaja Elementary School, and Carol Waldrop for Cartoogechaye School.

Waldrop has been employed by Macon County Schools since 1977, where she began her career as an elementary teacher at Highlands School.
Waldrop, who received her Education Specialist degree at Lincoln Memorial University, was transferred to Cartoogechaye School in 1978. In 2002 she became lead teacher at Cartoogechaye and at the beginning of the 2005-06 school year she became half time lead teacher at Cartoogechaye and was responsible for countywide elementary curriculum.

Gibbs, who has been employed by Macon County Schools since 1997, spent six years at Franklin High School, originally employed as a Social Studies teacher. In 2001 he became Assistant Principal. Gibbs, Assistant Principal at South Macon Elementary since 2003, earned his Master’s degree in School Administration from Lincoln Memorial University.

Maslin, who was employed by Macon County Schools in 1997 at Macon Middle School as a Language Arts and Math teacher, transferred to Franklin High School to become assistant principal in 2004. He earned his master’s in school administration from Western Carolina University.

Scam ALERT

On Wednesday, June 28, several businesses in town reported receiving phone calls from people claiming to be Barbara and Bruce Werder. They said they are traveling and have been mugged in the airport in Canada. They ask that money be wired to via Western Union.

The people are very well versed about Highlands and seem real. But it’s a scam said Police Chief Bill Harrell.

“If you get the call, do not wire them money. Report it to the police department right away,” he said.

In fact, Chief Harrell is urging people ever to give money over the phone or the internet. “Unless you can see the white of their eyes, just don’t do it, he said.

On July 18, special agents from the US Postal Service will be conducting a forum on identity theft at 5 p.m. in the fellowship hall of the First Baptist Church.
Leadership Highlands Class Selected

The Governing Board of Leadership Highlands is pleased to announce the selection of the 2006-2007 Class for Leadership Highlands. "We received a number of applications to fill 12 spots; it was a difficult decision," stated Robert E. Smith, President of the LHGB.

The leadership program curriculum is changing for the new class and will be offering more skill-based education along with community resource information. The Board and the alumni are excited about the change. "I am looking forward to attending some of the programs to sharpen my own skills. I think it will be a more practical approach to developing leadership," said Katy Calloway, LHGB member.

Applications for the 06-07 class were accepted from March 15-May 15. Applicants were selected by a committee of volunteers unaffiliated with the Leadership Highlands program. The program runs from September 2006 until May 2007. Through the course attendees are prepared and encouraged to take on leadership roles within the business, social and political communities of Highlands.
In 1979 I went to the Soviet Union for six weeks. I was in college, I had taken Russian in both high school and college and could speak it passably well. Brezhnev was Premier and the Cold War was very much in place. I went because I wanted to see what our enemy looked like.

The most common comment I heard from ordinary Russians I met in the street was “Why do you want to have war with us? We don’t want to have war with you.” Of course they had been convinced by government propaganda that the US was a mortal threat to them, just as we had been convinced the USSR was a mortal threat to us.

I was very surprised to find out that no one I met was a member of the Communist Party. I had assumed that everyone was a believer and a member but it became obvious that the people I met hated the Soviet system but were terrified to let anyone find that out. While I was there I had dreams of being in jail.

The group I traveled with was organized to maximize contact with ordinary Soviet citizens. Most of us were college students who spoke Russian, we traveled in VW buses, camped in campgrounds and used public transportation in cities at a time in which the vast majority of tourists were barred by official guides from foreign-tourist hotels to foreign-tourist restaurants in large tour buses.

We paid for our relative freedom in the country by our treatment at the border as we left. At least half of us, including myself, were strip searched. I ended up being part of three successive coalition governments during the last fifteen years. I have had a front-seat to both tyranny and terror.

His belief is that everyone in the world wants to be free. Everyone on the planet deserves to be free. No people are incapable of democracy. He rightfully condemns the world’s democracies, particularly the US, for not banning their foreign policy on this issue and this issue alone. That is, we should be friends only with other democracies. We should not cozy up to tyrants because it is “strategic.”

Of course, the last century is filled with examples of the US preferring tyrannical regimes to democracies. For example, in Iran in 1953 the CIA helped the British to overthrow the democratically elected Iranian President because we “thought he would be too friendly with the Russians (see my review of All the Shah’s Men). There’s decades worth of examples in South and Central America, there’s the Cold War. The Western democracies where we helped train the tyrants’ troops.

Sharansky argues that promoting democracy is not just the right thing to do; it is also in our best interest: it is the best way to ensure global stability and peace.

As the book moves into the second half the author begins to describe his Israeli experiences. I found it tiring: he is always right and yet no one listens to him (though it is an interesting look at the last fifteen years of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict from an Israeli point-of-view). I also felt that his telling of history was very convenient in terms of “playing” him right.

For example, he is of the camp that Reagan was responsible for the fall of the Soviet Union: by drastically increasing US military spending he bankrupted the USSR. This may have brought about the end a little sooner, but the Soviet Union was set to implode whether Reagan had been president or not. My six weeks in the Soviet Union made that obvious to me. But in order to accelerate the inevitable Reagan may, in the long run, have also brought about the decline of our own country a lot sooner by setting the course of major deficit spending.

Also, I don’t think Reagan opposed the Soviets because he was a crusader for democracy, as Sharansky makes you think. For example, during that same period the US was selling Saddam Hussein almost anything he wanted including chemical weapons for exactly the “strategic” reasoning that Sharansky deplores: supporting a tyrant because he’s “our” guy who can be counted on.

Sharansky makes a strong case for the universality of the desire for freedom and of the ability of all peoples to handle democracy, but he doesn’t offer much in the way of ideas for how to help countries develop as democracies.

It seems to me that Americans often act as if our “founding fathers” invented democracy and freedom, and we are often arrogant about democracy as if it should be easy for any country to attain.

Sharansky points to Japan as an example of a country with no history of democracy that was helped by the US to build what has proved to be a very stable democracy. He also applauds President Bush for his desire to spread democracy in the Middle East. Besides the fact that he ignores (as he did with Reagan) that at the same time Bush is cozying up to dictators throughout the Middle East—Saudi Arabia, Pakistan, Uzbekistan, etc. for their oil and their help in the war on terror—Bush is incapable of doing what the US did in Japan. Why? He bragged about the reason in his first election campaign: he does not believe in nation-building. In order to build a democracy in Iraq we first needed to help them build the institutions that underlie a free society.

Fareed Zakaria, the international editor of Newsweek, has proposed that there are five preconditions for democracy:

- Rule of law
- Individual rights
- Private property
- Independent courts
- Separation of church and state

If you know anything about Iraq you will know there is no history of these “preconditions” existing in the last few hundreds years at least (the Code of Hammurabi—one of humanity’s earliest systems of laws—was written 4,000 years ago in what is now Iraq).

I opposed the war in Iraq before it started, but once the US invaded there was an opportunity to transform the country. In my opinion the greatest tragedies of the war is this opportunity has been squandered, entirely due to the Bush administration’s complete disdain for government. Post-war Japan became a successful democracy because it was nurtured by a US administration that believed in government. How can you build a government if you don’t believe in government?

I believe as Sharansky does that all peoples want and deserve freedom and that US foreign policy should oppose all tyranny, no matter how convenient to our supposed national interest. But unfortunately, President Bush has given the policy of “spreading democracy” a bad name and after the debacle he has created in Iraq I am afraid it will take a long time before Sharansky’s message is heard.

If you don’t believe me, see “A Democracy Policy in Ashes,” by Joshua Muravchik in the Washington Post (June 27, 2006).

Nature camps featured at the Highlands Nature Center

By Susanna Forrester

In a small meadow the mice run screaming toward their only food source, white ping-pong balls, while the foxes run close behind snatching at the mice's long yellow tails.

The foxes and mice are a group of children participating in one of the Highlands Nature Center's summer day camps. This one is entitled NatureWorks, and it tries to teach the children about the interaction between animals and people.

The mice must attempt to collect five of the balls to survive, while the foxes have to catch three of the mice by snatching off their yellow tails. By the end of the game the foxes have learned some important lessons about nature, but they've also had a lot of fun in the innovative game of tag.

Janis Brannon, the children's guide on this tour of nature, tells the children survival isn't easy for predator or prey. Before they head down a trail into the forest she emphasizes how careful they must be in the delicate ecosystem they are about to enter.

They gather in the woods for a game of “Camouflage.” One child crouches on the trail and counts to ten. The rest of the group dashes into the undergrowth to hide. Once everyone is hidden the child tries to see how many of his classmates he can find. If they're not well hidden or still then they're spotted and called out of their hiding spot.

According to Allison McRae, a camp assistant, the camp is “ecology-based.” Many of the children are from the city, and have never interacted with the natural world. Some are even a little afraid of the animals that they are meeting for the first time.

“We take them to streams and let them find salamanders,” said Amy Huff, a Highlands Nature Center employee. “We do pond studies and look for insects.”

The NatureWorks camp ran from Tuesday through Friday, usually from 10 am to 2 pm, and so far up to 17 kids have participated. Each day revolves around a different area of nature such as botany, forestry, and aquatics.

“We try not to make it like class,” said Huff. “They get to play in the water and get their feet wet. They love the animals. We try to emphasize things throughout the day and at the end of the day we ask them what they learned.”

The camps run through the summer. For a complete list and for more information call the Nature Center at 526-2623.

In the series we will explore summer activities for children in Highlands.

Summary of June 22 meeting of the Highlands-Cashiers Hospital Board of Directors

To keep the news media, and the public, better informed about Highlands-Cashiers Hospital, we are providing you with a summary of the more significant actions and discussion items coming before the hospital’s board of directors at their most recent meeting (Thursday, June 22).

- The board approved the hiring of a new general surgeon, Leslie Pearlstein, MD, FACS. An experienced and highly recommended general surgeon, Dr. Pearlstein comes to the hospital from Murphy, NC, where he has practiced for the last several years. Most of his career, however, has been in Florida where he was associated with the Bayfront-St. Anthony’s Healthcare System. Educated at Duke, John Hopkins and Louisville, he is board certified and fellow of the American College of Surgeons. He will begin practice here July 10.
- CEO Ken Shull told directors that the outside consultant hired last month to study and make recommendations on the governance, organizational structure and internal communications of the hospital, will begin meeting with the subcommittee next week. That subcommittee consists of three board members, two members of administration, two foundation directors, two members of the medical staff and four members from the community. James Orlikoff of Orlikoff and Associates, Inc, of Chicago IL, is under contract to work with the hospital for the next several months.
- Shull reported that interviews have begun with strategic planning consultants, and the list of potential firms has been narrowed to the top three. Shull says the selection committee hopes to make a recommendation to the full board of directors at its next meet (July 27).
- In other physician news, Shull reported that new OB-GYN Carmelo A. Hernandez, MD, is beginning practice in the area this month. Based in Brevard, Dr. Hernandez will see patients in Highlands two Fridays each month. The board approved his application to join the medical staff at its last meeting. Shull also said efforts to bring gastroenterology services back to the hospital are also moving forward. Resuming general surgery will be a key step toward resuming endoscopy services, he said, since the gastroenterologists under consideration have indicated they believe having a general surgeon available is essential to their program. Efforts are also continuing to recruit more primary care physicians to the area, he added.
- Thursday’s meeting was the first for new board members Allen S. Hardin, of Highlands and Atlanta, and Dr. Robert T. Buchanan, who will represent the hospital’s surgical staff. Chairman Bud Smith officially welcomed both to the board of directors.
- The board also heard a report on the hospital’s financial situation. They were told that while cash flow and profitability remain problematic, the picture is much more optimistic now that the hospital is in a position to resume general surgery. Cost control measures are still in effect, but the hospital is not considering layoffs.
- Shull also reported more than 80 patients have utilized the new MRI scanner since it went into operation May 1.

The Right Rev. Dr. John S. Erbelding
Chapel of Sky Valley

The pride and faith citizens of the United States of America honor in their country is particularly evident at this time of year as flags are unfurled and fireworks punctuate the evening skies. It's a time when Americans contemplate their citizenship — a citizenship many people throughout the world would be honored to share.

The founding fathers of this country believed that the most important thing in the world is a government in which freedom and liberty of the individual is protected. They believed this freedom is basic to our individual development and happiness. They also believed that each person has an obligation to serve society, to assist in the machinery that helps guarantee our freedoms.

Of course, with freedom also comes responsibility. We must try to do the right thing as we see it, but be careful not to infringe upon the freedoms of others. Since no individual is perfect, freedom may be abused. That is why we have rules in our society — because absolute freedom is anarchy, and no society can survive in such a state.

The emphasis on the rights and dignity of each person occurs again and again in our great documents. We began by declaring: “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights. That among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.” We live by this freedom theme and happiness. They also believed that each person occurs again and again in our great documents and in our daily lives.

Ultimately, nations are only as strong as their ideas and people. And when citizens no longer pay attention to the first principles of a nation, the nation itself is weakened, and soon its future is in question. It is for these reasons that we welcome the pageantry and celebration which takes place each summer in thousands of cities and towns and throughout this grand country. May it always be a strong and free country. And may we never take it for granted.

Annual Special Operations Adventure Race brings hard-core athletes to Highlands

Participants and onlookers gathered at the corner of Main and Fifth streets to see the 68 racers off the foggy morning of Saturday, June 24. Mary Beth Brody sang the National Anthem, the Sheriff's Dept. provided the color guard, and Rev. Brian Sullivan gave the invocation. Racers ran up Horse Cove Road to Black Mountain; rappelled down to the quarry, biked Walkingstick up through Glen Falls; canoed Lake Sequoyah and ended up back at the Rec Park. The four first finishers of the Elite Race are active duty members of the Special Forces, Clay Othic, Eric Truk, Tim Toerber and John Yearwood. The third-place finisher of the Sprint race, David Montgomery, is an active duty member of the Special Forces. Nineteen of the 60 racers this year are active duty members of the Special Forces. The $50,000 raised during this year's activities including the race fees, silent and live auction, will be used to supplement funds that provide a college education to the hundreds of children whose parents have died during Special Operations activities.

All proceeds from the Special Operations Adventure Race benefit the Special Operations Warrior Foundation (SOWF). SOWF provides college scholarships grants, based on need, along with financial aid and educational counseling to the children of Special Operations personnel who were killed in an operational mission or training accident.

The results of the Race in Rank Order, Team Name, Racer(s) name and race time in hours: minutes: seconds after adjustments for bonuses and penalties. Sixty individuals began and finished the Race.

fees will enable the town to escrow money until enough is saved to start the project.

Water rates, which directly affect sewer rates, have been increased from $15 per month to $20 per month for residential users and from $20 to $30 per month for commercial users.

Sewer connection fees have been set at $2,500 per dwelling unit; $3,500 for a single business or $3,500 per business in a multiple business. Connection fees outside the town limits are still 200 percent of the corresponding connection fee inside the town.

Sewer fees have been decreased from 135 percent of water use to 80 percent of water use.

"It costs us about twice as much to put infrastructure here than in the flatlands," said Commissioner Amy Patterson. "I know that users can't fund extensions, it just costs too much. But if we drop our sewer fees back to 80 percent of water, aren't we going to lose money?" She wondered how the town could make better use of the gym, he said.

The board agreed to go ahead with the three percent ad valorem tax increase based on homestead value of one penny per $1,000 to fund everything from recreation, the Pine Street Park project, increases in salaries, insurance and fuel costs, as well as expanding or reworking the Town Hall complex. Each penny brings in $110,000 in revenue.

ings, including home occupations, together with such other related uses which are of a residential character or contribute to the residential character of the district. Multi-family dwellings are permitted with a Special Use Permit.

The board basically agreed with Gantenbein's suggestion, only requiring that the setback in the new R4 district mimic that of residential zones in town – namely 25 feet from the right-of-way and within 45 feet of the road centerline of a NC or U.S. primary route.

"There's still more work to be done," said Gantenbein. "It's hard to make a blanket general use ordinance in an area that is so varied."

Basically lot sizes will follow the watershed requirements of half-acre or more. Mike Bryson and Mitch Gurganus wondered about families who want to put a trailer on their property so they can live in them. But Gantenbein said the trailers would have to be at least a double-wide and they would have to follow the lot size regulations.

ETJ zoning is far from over. The Planning Board is having a special working session on July 10 at 5 p.m. and will have a joint working session with the Town Board on July 19 during the regular Town Board meeting. Members agreed they need input and direction from the Town Board.

Gantenbein feels good about the board. "We've got a good board even though members are divided philosophically," he said.

Chair lift comes down at Ski Scaly

The dismantling of the chair lift at Ski Scaly in Scaly Mountain marks the end of an era. It started as a ski slope years ago, when winters were still cold and guaranteed snow and changed to a snow tubing when winters warmed. The property has been sold and will likely host other outdoor activities.
