Commissioners agree to revenue neutral budget but not the rate

Citizens wearing stickers and waiving miniature signs proclaiming "MIL LIMIT 25" packed the board room, lined the walls and spilled into the hallway for the Macon County Courthouse Monday night. But the cry for a revenue neutral budget to be set at the 25 millage rate wasn't to be, at least not yet.

At the April 9 Macon County Commission meeting, Commissioner Brian McClain made a motion to adopt a revenue neutral budget. It failed, as expected, by 3-2 on a party-line vote and the commission tabled the issue. Mayor-Businessman Bob Simpson cast his vote in favor of the motion.

County's height ordinance on temporary hold

Just as county planners were crossing the finish line with the Building Height Ordinance the commission put on the brakes.

"The problem? No distinction in the ordinance between height restrictions for commercial and multi-family projects versus single-family residences. "I do not want this ordinance to stop construction of single-family homes," said Macon County Commissioner Bob Simpson at the April 9 commission meeting. "This ordinance was supposed to apply to commercial and two-or-more family homes, not single-family homes."

County Planner Stacy Guffey said according to a recent superior court decision handed down in reference to Hendersonville, the height ordinance can't discriminate between building types.

"We can't single out structures in the height ordinance," he said. "This ordinance is meant to protect the skyline of the mountains while allowing reasonable use of property with some restrictions."

Guffey was hoping the ordinance would be accepted so a public hearing for the Building Height Ordinance could be advertised and set for the May 14 Macon County Commission meeting— with a vote to follow.

However Commissioner Simpson said

Tax relief bills in the pipe

As property values in resort and second-home areas continue to rise, the cry for tax relief is being heard from Western North Carolina to the sea.

This session, more than 30 bills have been introduced in the house and the senate.

At the April 9 Macon County Commission meeting, Tax Administrator Richard Lightner discussed 10 proposed bills he believes have the highest chances of passing and explained how each proposed bill could affect the county's coffers. He is in support of three of the bills.

"State legislators are very busy introducing..."
The Plateau's Position

From my perspective

My hope is that everyone had a wonderful Easter and Passover last week. It was a time of many Holy Week activities amongst the local churches and synagogues. Fortunately, we continue to be an active religious community here in Highlands and we are proud of that. Our churches have always worked together in an ecumenical manner which brings those in the religious community closer together as we all work in trying to understand and trust each other as we move toward bettering our Town. It is understood by us. Highlands is such a different community when the road is safer. I hope they have plans for some guard rails between Osage Overlook and Blue Valley...that is straight down! Onward!

We are developing and growing and more people can come in and get Don Leon's free coffee if the road is paved. And by the way...parking meters have been in St. Augustine FL since the 1940s. Everybody pays and it works in the oldest city in the U.S.A., a tourist heaven. Works for them, come on bite the bullet, commissioners.

Also, we love Highlands' Newspaper...not because it's free, but because the publisher/editor has a knack for feeding us things of interest. Your friends in Scaly.

as written, the ordinance would hinder single-family home development, particularly in Highlands.

As the draft ordinance reads: The maximum building height on any building, structure or unit within the jurisdiction of Macon County shall not exceed 48 feet or four stories, whichever is less. For the purposes of this section, building height shall mean the vertical distance measured from the top of the foundation of said building, structure or unit to the uppermost point of said building, structure or unit.

Maximum height doesn’t refer to water, radio or television towers or any equipment for transmission of electricity or communications or both; minor vertical projections of a parent building, including chimneys, flagpoles, flagpoles, flagpoles, spires, steeple, bellfries, cupolas, antennas, poles, wires, or windmills, or buildings and structures designated as National Historic Sites on the National Archives Registry.

County Attorney Lesley Moxley said she would investigate the recent superior court ruling to see how it may apply to the height ordinance and report back to the commissioners at their April 24 continuation meeting.

If the ordinance is accepted at that meeting, there is still time to advertise the public hearing prior to the May 14 meeting for final adoption.

If you’re a person who reads this stuff regularly, then you already know I’m a little weird. OK, maybe a lot weird. OK, a whole lot weird. And if you’re the lil’ missus married to a whole lot weird person for a whole long time, then you know she is also weird.

Of all the weird things the lil’ missus and I do together, the weirdest is eating out. Even though we don’t eat out often, when we do, it’s weird. You see, we never eat in the same restaurant twice, even if we love the food. When the waiter asked, “Have you been here before?”, we proudly shake our heads “no.” Sometimes we say, “We have eaten in this building, but not in this restaurant.” We get strange looks. We know this is weird because we have friends who have eaten at Cracker Barrel so many times they went to the waitress’s wedding and now bring gifts for her kids. I think we ate in a Cracker Barrel back in 1997. I’ll check the books.

Wrap your lips around this!

One day we knocked them off and then privately voted on whether they would be there by next Christmas. As of last week, there were only two left for us to visit: sushi and Mexican. Since we have vowed to never eat anything placed on the end of a fish hook and thrown into the water, we were left with The El-Roacho Grande, an upscale fancy schmancy joint that proudly advertises every employee has a green card and no criminal record. Actually, I’m only kidding about the name, green card and criminal records. Get real. It’s called the Rosa Mexicano and features a 10-foot high wall littered with fake candles running on batteries. The backside of the wall is part of the main restaurant and features a grand waterfall with real water, all lit in dark blue. The food was just as impressive.

We have eaten in many Mexican restaurants in our day and here is what we know. Even though the menu may be extensive and have 26 pages of wonderful entrees, in reality, there are only 3 cauldrons of food in the kitchen. What you order determines where and how the food from these cauldrons is arranged on your plate. Will the pulled chicken be hidden under a limp, slimy piece of dough, placed over to the right or will they roll it up into a tube, place it to the left and call it something else? In any case, it’s the same pulled chicken and the same slimy dough.

The gook makes the difference. Once the food is arranged, they season it with their special sauces. Mexican rice and black beans are always somewhere nearby. Have you ever looked closely at Mexican black bean mush? Scary stuff! Like the Italians crush their grapes with their feet, the Mexicans crush their beans in like fashion. Yummy, yummy, yummy!

When I ordered the pulled beef enchilada, the waiter cautioned, “Señor, this dish is just a little spicier than what is usually offered. I wanted to prepare you.” I laughed, took it as a challenge and responded, “Bring it on!”

Half way through the meal the lil’ missus asked, “Is it real hot?” “Nah, want a taste?” She hesitated. I was hoping in the dim light, she couldn’t see the tears running down my cheeks. She smiled, “I’ll pass.”

In the parking lot, I asked, “You always taste my food. How did you know?” She shook her head, “Your tears glistened in the candlelight and you haven’t drunk three glasses of water with a meal since I married you. Duh!”
Let’s pay attention to business

There is probably no job less important to American interests than ambassador to the Kingdom of Belgium. Kingdoms are anachronistic and would be of no strategic importance were it not for all that oil under the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. We could send Donald Rumsfeld, Don Imus, Howard Stern, or Charles Barkley to Brussels with fear of loss of American prestige. Neither Ben Franklin, Douglas MacArthur, nor Henry Kissinger could shake European faith in our essentially vulgar nature. Why then all the fuss about the appointment of Sam Fox as ambassador to Belgium? The work of diplomacy is done by career diplomats. Plums such as this are political payback, nothing more, nothing less.

Sam Fox is a major Republican fund raiser. He has contributed millions of his own money and persuaded his friends to donate millions of theirs to the Republican Party. Under the sole criterion for the ambassadorship, he is eminently qualified. Among his contributions was $50,000 to the Swift Boat Veterans for Truth, a group which opposed John Kerry in the 2004 presidential election and produced a series of TV ads which were highly critical of Kerry, which many consider a distortion of the record, and which some believe cost Kerry the election.

Senator Kerry who chairs the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee may be among them. It is the very committee which is responsible for ambassadorial recommendations. It was clear that the Foreign Affairs Committee would not recommend Fox nor would the full Senate confirm him. Had Kerry won in 2004, he would not have been in a position to block the nomination, nor would Fox have appeared before the committee.

There is sometimes a strange symmetry to politics. In what initially seemed a rare display of good judgment, President Bush withdrew the nomination. Only a week later, he bypassed the requirement for Senate approval by using the “recess appointment” to name Mr. Fox to the position. Democrats in general and Senator Kerry in particular howled foul, as if Democratic presidents hadn’t done exactly the same thing in the past, and as if presidents of both parties won’t use it in the future. It is interesting that two far more substantive appointments were made in the same manner in the same week without eliciting so much as a whimper. It makes no difference that the recess appointment was originally intended to permit appointments when Congress was out of town for an extended period. This was a one week absence from Washington, during which the members were seeking votes, vacationing at tax payer expense, and dabbling in foreign affairs.

The question remains, why all the fuss? Democrats are happily flexing their newly attained legislative muscle and grabbing any chance to embarrass the president. They’ve been waiting years to avenge attacks by the Republican congressional majority against President Clinton. And what of President Bush? Why would he sacrifice the chance of bipartisan cooperation to repay a political debt to a Republican donor? Probably because he believed that there was no possibility of cooperation, despite promises as recently as January, when the president and the speaker of the house pledged to work together. The president could have compromised, out of respect for Senator Kerry. He might have offered Mr. Fox two weeks in the Lincoln bedroom, American plan, or free riding lessons at the Crawford ranch, or the ambassadorship to Bangladesh. But I think he really wanted to stick it to the Democrats.

We are once again distracted from the business of the Nation. We’ll bicker over Sam Fox and over Alberto Gonzales while we should be working together to solve the conundrum of Iraq, to conquer world hunger, to insure health care for every American, to deal fairly with immigration, humanely with issues of social and economic justice, and courageously with the threat of global warming and global terrorism.

Historical museum now open every weekend

The Highlands Historical Museum will open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. every weekend through October. The public is invited to view the many exhibits relating to Highlands history and to view hundreds of photographs, documents, family histories, etc., which are now available on the Museum computer.
Coalition issues action alert to cancel federal highway study

Stop I-3 Coalition has issued an action alert to its thousands of supporters seeking the immediate rescission of $1.3 million of taxpayer funds earmarked for study of proposed Interstate 3 corridors through the mountains of Southern Appalachia. Congress paved the way for this action by requesting some $3.47 billion in transportation program reductions from the Federal Highway Administration. The FHWA, in turn, is asking each state to propose specific budget cuts.

"This is a key opportunity, for Georgia in particular, to cancel the $330,000 it had earmarked of its own state revenue for study of the I-3 proposal, a truly unnecessary and unwanted road," said Holly Demuth, the coalition’s executive director. "But citizens across the Peach State must act quickly to make their voices heard. "Friday, April 13, is the deadline for states to make their cuts known to the federal government. Citizen letters and calls should be addressed to Georgia’s Transportation Commissioner, Harold Linnenkohl, either by e-mail, at harold.linnenkohl@dot.state.ga.us, or by fax at 404-463-6336 or by telephone at 404-656-5206. Tennessee and North Carolina have refused to pay their share of the study. Stop I-3 supporters from those states may write the Commissioner pointing out that their states are not supporting the proposal and would therefore view the cancelation of funds as a burden relieved.

Congress is providing citizens a rare opportunity to correct blatant, pork-barrel excess. Demuth urges Coalition supporters to work hard to get the project canceled – now. The I-3 proposal would create a new interstate highway from Savannah to Augusta to Oak Ridge, in effect creating a new road link between some of the country’s key nuclear weapons and nuclear processing depots. The proposed I-3 would also duplicate current interstate routes that enable the movement of goods from the Port of Savannah to Knoxville and on to the Midwest.

Those of you who endure this column every week know that there is a handful of elements in this world that really trouble me, among them the United Nations, environmental whackism and militant, destructive feminism. To me, these groups seem to have a parallel purpose and that is to bring down the United States as a World power. Farfetched you say; just look around. As I research and write about the influence these groups have on our lives, I wonder what promotes this hard to understand attitude which seems to advocate the diminishing of their own power, and ultimately their existence. Who knows? I wonder why all this stuff started to happen at about the same time? Is there a connection, and if so, what is it?

Gaia - part 1. I travel into the land of mythology, a subject I somehow missed in high school, and admittedly know nothing about. In mythology, Gaia was the Greek goddess personifying the Earth. In Latin, she was called Terra Mater - "Mother Earth." I’ll bet you never wondered what those bumper stickers meant or why people put them on their cars. Neither did I.

In mythology, Gaia emerged from the Chaos, and was the source of all life. She evidently produced a male god without the benefit of conjugation and thence produced mythical progeny who were the major gods and goddesses who ruled the world (and beyond, for all I know). I realize that this summary is very rudimentary and I apologize to those who take this stuff seriously.

So, in the dream world of Mythology, Gaia replaces God as the creator.

Gaia - part 2. Fast forward to 1999, when a source which I consider reliable produced the following: "U. S. taxpayers are being forced to subsidize a new form of state religion which holds that natural resources have to be protected for the sake of Gaia, a so-called Earth spirit. This religious movement, which has cult-like qualities, is being promoted by leading figures and organizations such as (then) Vice-President Al Gore, broadcaster Ted Turner and the United Nations.

"Gore, who as a member of the U. S. Senate, participated in the 1992 U. N.-sponsored Earth Summit, is the most prominent member of what appears to be an environmental cult built around the concept of reverence for the Earth. Gore has written openly about the Earth having sacred qualities and he has praised primitive pagan religions and goddess worship.

"Another key player is Ted Turner, who has turned his broadcasting empire into a virtual arm of the United Nations. A noted critic of Christianity and ambassador on behalf of the U. N. Population Fund, he promotes the concept of Gaia in his television programs, such as the “Captain Planet” cartoon show, in which characters get magic powers from an Earth spirit or goddess.

"At the United Nations, the U. N. Environmental Program, founded by Maurice Strong (now Gore's partner in the carbon offset exchange scam), promotes the idea of an “Environmental Sabbath,” a variation of the Gaia concept. One of Strong's organizations, the Earth Council, has produced an “Earth Charter” for the world that refers to respect for “Mother Earth” and animal rights.

Those promoting the Gaia concept have no qualms about using the full force of government, even the international resources of the United Nations, to impose their beliefs on the rest of us. If they are successful in their drive for “sustainable development” to protect Gaia, they could stifle economic growth and promote a drastic decline in the American standard of living.”

Here is the paradox that the Gaians currently face. In their thesis, the earth is an all-powerful, self-sustaining organism which has the intelligence to adjust to any negative influence which may befall it. If the Earth is perfectly powerful, then why should global warming occur at all, if it is destructive, and if it does, why doesn’t the self-correcting mechanism kick in? Their answer is that it will, but it’s taking too long. Oh really?

Now, feminism on steroids, I don’t have space to make the obvious connection in this column, but I will in the future. I would point out two current, dramatic events about which I speak; Nancy Pelosi’s treasonous, self-promoting and downright stupid trip to Syria, and Rosie O’Donnell’s continuous rant on the evils of America and Christianity. How people of this mentality can reach their level of influence is beyond me.

Editor’s note:

Last week, Don Swanson submitted the following. “...Christ made a triumphal entrance into Jerusalem, soon to join His Father.” It was printed “...his Father.” We regret the error.
Golden Corn

My father's father was a farmer in Wisconsin. He had dairy cows when my father was young but later grew corn. I vividly remember visiting one summer, the year of the Bangladesh famine, and touring his fields. There was corn as far as the eye could see until we came to a field full of weeds. I was horrified and made him promise never to allow weeds to grow in his fields again. He had been paid by the government to grow food when all I had been hearing for the last year was that people around the world were starving.

How could this be? How could it make sense to pay someone not to plant?

Today the corn subsidies are done a little differently. Instead of paying farmers not to plant, the government guarantees the farmer a minimum price for his corn, no matter how much he grows. As anyone who read my Omnivore's Dilemma review knows, this has resulted in mountains of cheap corn and innovative new ways of using it.

The latest is ethanol. Last week the papers were filled with the news that farmers were putting a record amount of land into corn production because of the expectation of high profits due to the demand for corn to make ethanol.

Congress has mandated that four billion gallons of ethanol be blended with gasoline every year, and that ethanol production be subsidized with a 51-cent per gallon tax credit. The number of ethanol plants is expected to rise by nearly 50% in the next few years.

Almost universally the spin seems to be that this is great news. Isn't it wonderful to think we can replace oil with a renewable fuel we can grow ourselves?

Unfortunately, the picture isn't so rosy. The problem with corn-based ethanol is that you don't get more energy out of it than it costs to grow and make it. The EROI (energy return on investment) for corn-based ethanol must take into account the energy it takes to grow the corn (the tractor fuel and the oil used to make fertilizer), the fuel to transport the corn to the ethanol plant, the plant operation, etc. Some computations show corn-based ethanol has a net energy of zero. Others show it as a net energy loser — that is, it takes more energy to make than it provides. (If you don't believe me just google corn and EROI.)

In the 1970s, Brazil embarked on a program to substitute ethanol for oil. Today, every gallon of gas in Brazil is blended with at least 20% ethanol, and many cars run on ethanol alone, at half the price of gasoline. Brazil uses sugar cane to make ethanol. Sugar cane has an EROI eight times that of corn.

The Brazilians are making so much ethanol they would like to export it to the United States. Great, let's buy our fuel from a friendly country, not from Iran or Venezuela. But, again, there's a problem. The corn producers don't want a more efficient ethanol getting in the way of their big, big profits so they have called on their senators in Washington — oh, I mean their elected representatives — to write a tariff bill into law (54 cents a gallon tax on sugar-based ethanol).

Of course all the Midwestern corn-state legislators were in on this, Barack Obama among them, passing legislation that goes squarely against the interests of the country, but benefits a few constituents who know how to get a legislator's attention with a sufficiently large campaign contribution.

It's not just the corn farmers either. The sugar industry is very strong — a well-known fact to anyone who has lived in Florida — and sugar costs twice as much here as in the rest of the world because of government price supports. That's why no one's talking about making ethanol out of sugar in this country — it's too expensive as a raw material.

Another consequence of this gold rush in the cornfields? Higher food prices. Subsidized cheap corn is a component of a quarter of the items in the grocery store. Now that it's not cheap we are all going to pay. From tortillas in Mexico to steaks at Dusty's this ethanol boom is going to make us regret our subsidized agricultural policies.

You could say our policies are insane. But actually they're extremely logical. They are the direct consequence of special interests buying legislation.

Ethanol is a dream issue for a politician: he or she can look progressive — "look how much I care about the environment" — while still playing the same old money game — "whatcha got for my re-election fund."

The most important political issue today is public financing of campaigns. Until we get politicians who are beholden to no one but the people who voted for them we will continue to have government of the rich, by the rich, and for the rich.

My career as a litterbug lasted 10 minutes. My family had gone for a hike in the Blue Ridge Mountains near our home, and as we stopped to catch our breath, I took a can of orange soda out of my pocket. I unwrapped it with enthusiasm, popped it into my mouth, balled up the wrapper, and tossed it on the ground.

“And what do you think you're doing, Miss Priss?” said my mother. “Oh, it's OK!” I replied, “There's a sign over there, and it says that it's fine for littering.”

“No,” my father chided. “It's not fine for littering. There's a fine for littering. It's $50.”

Since my allowance was 25 cents a week in those days, I was certain they were going to put me in prison instead. I hoped they made those striped uniforms in small sizes. From that day onward, I never littered again, provoking comments from friends and acquaintances for my tendency to stuff garbage in my pockets or handbag until I got to a trash can, where I could dispose of the refuse. When you make this a habit, it's not hard. It becomes second nature.

So, here's the issue. What's with all the trash, people? I've had the good luck to move to one of the most beautiful places on earth, and what do I see every day on the side of the road? Empty coffee cups, soda cans, beer cans, potato chip bags, old yogurt containers, cigarette packets – the list is endless. Haven't you ever heard of keeping a garbage bag in your car or trucks? Or throwing your garbage in trash cans?

I'm particularly annoyed, because we live on a small private road, and it has become increasingly littered over the last several months. One of our neighbors is redoing his house, and two new houses are being built at the end of the road. Each day adds a new layer of insult and garbage to this lovely area.

Since I like mystery novels and detective shows, I decided to try to figure out who is leaving the trash, and began with a process of elimination. It can't be golfers, since golfers like their nice, tidy golf courses, and wouldn't dream of leaving the land in any less than the pristine condition they demand for themselves. It can't be the family and friends of those wonderful folks who regularly turn out for trash clean-ups, because they know first-hand what back-breaking work it is to pick up all that garbage. It can't be ecologists, conservationists, and environmentalists, since they know the damage pollution has on the environment. And it certainly can't be folks who go to church, since we are regularly told that we do not own the land, but are only God's stewards whose duty is to care for the Earth and its creatures in His name.

Since I can't figure out for the life of me who these thoughtless people are, I can only conclude that this stuff is left behind by aliens. Gee, I sure do wish they'd take their Coke cans and Dorito bags back with them when they leave.

Hair loss can also occur in women as a normal process as they age. However, women who go through menopause can also undergo hair loss. Menopause is a natural part of a woman’s life, and as she ages, her body goes through hormonal changes. When a woman enters menopause, her ovaries stop producing estrogen and progesterone, which are hormones that help control hair growth. As a result, women may experience hair loss during this time. This type of hair loss is often referred to as androgenetic alopecia and is characterized by thinning hair and balding on the top of the head. It can affect women at any age but is more common in those over 40 years old. Treatment options for this type of hair loss include medications, topical treatments, and surgery. Other causes of hair loss in women can include genetics, stress, and certain medical conditions. Women should consult with a healthcare provider to determine the cause of their hair loss and receive appropriate treatment.

Proposed legislation aimed at reducing property taxes to many different groups and causes,” said Lightner. “While we know the rapid growth in real estate values and the need for relief for certain property owners, poorly planned legislation will end up costing the county tax revenue and be very expensive to implement.”

Bills H539, H540, H596 & S412 and S569 & S1203 will cause some major reduction in property taxes and inequalities, said Lightner.

Bill H39 – Homestead Exemption Expansion – sponsored by Representative Grady and others. It is in the House Finance Committee and opposed by Lightner.

For the 2007 tax year, this would raise the maximum income allowed for eligibility for inclusion in the Homestead Expansion – elderly exclusion and the totally and permanently disabled – from its current maximum of $20,500 to $49,000. For future years, the maximum income level would be adjusted by the cost-of-living adjustment made to the Social Security Act.

“The increase proposed in this bill for the allowable income level is too great – 139 – and would most certainly swell the ranks of taxpayers who could become eligible for approval in this program,” said Lightner. “It would have a major impact on the tax base.”

Bill H54 – Residential Property Tax Reduction – sponsored by Representative Grady and others. It is in the House Rules Committee and opposed by Lightner.

This bill would require a statewide voter referendum to add a new section 105-283.1 to create a new definition and application of the Uniform Appraisal Standard for “permanent residences.”

Section 1 would provide for the possibility of the General Assembly to enact limitations on the appraised value of a permanent residence by more than an amount specified by law.

Section 3, effective for the 2009 tax year, restricts the increase in appraised value of a permanent residence to no more than the increase in the Consumer Price Index, unless ownership is transferred outside the immediate family or an increase in value occurs as a result of a physical change to the property, which in either case would require a reappraisal of market value. (If approved as part of the November 2007 General Assembly, it would become effective for the 2008 tax year.)

“This bill is proposing a cap on the appreciation shown in the market for real property and is somewhat similar to what as approved by South Carolina voters in November 2006,” said Lightner. “If enacted, and if the market continues to act as it has historically, higher valued properties would benefit the most from this legislation while lower valued properties would continue to be appraised and assessed at something more akin to their true value.

the income derived from the millage rate
Leatherman said the arithmetic used to derive the millage rate for a revenue neutral budget is easy, "it's the algebra part that's hard."

"That's the variable that is the unknown at this time and we don't know right now how much our tax base will be reduced due to the appeal process," he said.

He said the valuation of 5,000-6,000 pieces of property in the county will likely be decreased before the process is completed.

Tax Administrator Richard Lightner said the income from property value decreases is traditionally only about three percent. "It's usually a loss of about three percent of the value but we never know and won't know for sure until late May," he said.

"That potential value loss is still outstanding."

Greenwood agreed, saying the budget should be based on the amount of the tax base that survives the appeal process.

Chairman Leatherman spoke often of the published millage rates of other counties - some higher than Macon and some lower - but said what other counties do is of no concern to him.

"We need to deal with the needs of Macon County and not concern ourselves with how we compare to other counties. We evaluate property to a fair market value, which increases the tax base and we'll come down to a revenue neutral figure, but I don't want to be locked into a number," he said.

Davis agreed. "I don't want to be locked into a number until we go through the entire process."

County Attorney Lesley Moxley told the board to direct the county manager to prepare a revenue neutral budget at the appropriate time.

McClellan amended his motion to adopt a revenue neutral budget. That motion passed unanimously. But it was clear McClellan considers the revenue neutral budget and the millage rate of 25 cents to be one in the same.

In essence, lower-valued properties—which typically appreciate at a slower rate—would be subsidizing higher-valued properties—which tend to appreciate more rapidly—especially in resort areas of the state.

Bill H596 & S412 – Homestead Exemption Modification — sponsored by Representative Cleveland and others and Senator Brown and others. This would become effective for the 2008 tax year.

This would provide an option for tax relief consisting of the current elderly exclusion OR a “circuit breaker” where the tax would be predicated as a percentage of the owner’s income ranging from incomes of $5,000 or less; $5,000-$10,000; $10,000-$25,000; or $25,000-$50,000 and percentages of 3.5%; 4%; 4.5%; and 5%, respectively, rather than being based on the value of the property.

Section 3 provides that when the qualifying owner’s income is $25,000 or less if single and $34,000 if married, all or part of the tax may be deferred unless prohibited by federal law or where liens against the property exceeds 85% of the assessed value.

“This bill essentially blurs the lines as to how a tax for property tax purposes might be determined for a certain class of property owners and replaces the typical property tax bill with one determined as a percentage of one’s income,” said Lightner. “This becomes an income tax payment – a tax payment based on income – made in lieu of property taxes.”

Lightner also said this bill would require five more employees to the tax office staff.

S569 & S1203 – Wildlife Conservation Property Tax Relief & Present-Use Value Charges, respectively. Sponsored by Senators Hartse, Nesbitt, Jr., and others. S569 would be in effect for the 2007 tax year and S1203 would be in effective for the 2008 tax year.

This would allow land managed and maintained under a sound management plan certified by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission to be treated as agricultural land and assessed based on the Present Use Value (PUV) section in place. The land would have to be in PUV prior to its conversion to wildlife land. Lightner opposed this bill.

“Preferred tax treatment should be provided via the state income tax, as opposed to further deterioration of the local property tax,” he said. “PUV programs reward land in production—farmland and managed forestland—integral to the local economy. Macon County would lose a minimum of $1 billion in value and tax rates would initially go up around 7-10 cents per hundred.”

Section 1 of S1203 would reduce the minimum acreage requirement for qualifying agricultural land from 10 acres to five acres. “While I am generally supportive of Section 1, the problems inherent with the provisions of Sections 2 & 3 are so abusive in terms of equity and administration costs that it cannot be supported,” said Lightner.

Section 2 is identical to S569 (see above) and Section 3 would permit land previously classified as PUV and now encumbered by a conservation easement to continue to be appraised at PUV rates without having to meet the requirements of income or actual production.

Bill S1305 – Present-Use Value Easement Tax Credit – sponsored by Senator Queen; to go into effect for the 2008 tax year.

In anticipated substantial property value increases across the state, this bill would provide that property in PUV be taxed at 50% of the general tax rate levied by the taxing unit when the “owner donates an easement on the property – made in perpetuity – requiring the property to continue to be used in a manner consistent with its current use.”

“This is a quid-pro-quo where the property owner gives up future uses of the property – development rights and others – for being billed at 50% of the general tax rate of the taxing jurisdiction,” said Lightner. “The assessment value of the property would continue to be based on the PUV schedules adopted for the most current reappraisal, already a highly favorable benefit to qualifying owners.”

Lightner is in favor of H972 and S241 and S445.

Bill H972 – Raise Income Ceiling to $30,000 – sponsored by Representatives Allred and others.

This bill would increase the allowable income level from the current $20,500 to $30,000 for eligibility for benefits of the Elderly Exclusion/Permanently Disabled Program as otherwise provided under 105-277.1 and would become effective for the 2007 tax year.

“This and the S1051 bill, provide preferable options in an attempt to keep the benefit of the exclusion in synch with appreciation in the real estate market and the effective purchasing power of the dollar,” said Lightner.

Bill S241 – Conservation Tax Credit Modification – sponsored by Senator Clodfelter and others to be effective for the 2007 tax year.

This would modify existing law regarding the taking of tax credits against North Carolina Income Tax obligations for donations of, or an interest in, real property that meets certain statutory requirements under 105-130, 34 & 105-151, 12.

“This is a much preferable to H234 which would adversely impact the tax base and create an inequity in the expectation from property required to be in a state of actual production versus “wildlife” said Lightner.

Bill S445 – Study Bill for Property Tax Relief – sponsored by Senator Jacumin and others to be effective upon passage.

This bill would create a Property Tax Subcommittee of the Revenue Laws Study Committee.

First cousins Doshie McCall Wilson and Irene Picklesimer James sit with their grandchildren – couple Brenda and Tommy James at Doshie’s 100th birthday party on Thursday, April 5 held in the conference room at the Highlands-Cashiers Hospital. About 38 family members and friends joined in the celebration... In a typical Highlands’ twist, Brenda James is Doshie’s grandchild and her husband Tommy James is Irene’s grandson. Doshie’s mother, Albie Picklesimer McCall, who died at 103, was Irene’s aunt, the sister of her father Edward Picklesimer. Folks say it is the longevity in the Picklesimer genes that keeps these women and their kin going. Irene will celebrate her 102nd birthday in June. At the party, Doshie and Irene talked about old times and tried to remember the horse they used to ride when playing together. Irene grew up in the Picklesimer home in Clear Creek and Doshie spent most of her youth at the McCall log cabin off Clear Creek Road under the brow of Brushy Face Mountain. Doshie’s parents, Rufus and Albie McCall, bought the cabin and the property it sat on from the Brooks family when they left North Carolina for Traveler’s Rest in South Carolina. Doshie moved with her family to the log cabin when she was seven. She was the youngest of the six McColl children – Cassie, Wiley, Emory, Itta, Ransom and Doshie. As first-cousins close in age, Doshie and Irene were playmates. Irene said she visited Doshie at the cabin often. The cabin was purchased by the USFS in 1998. It was disassembled and reassembled on a knob on Walden Way off U.S. 64. Plans have stalled due to funding, but its earmarked as a historical visitor center for the forest service.
By Senator John Snow

This year the North Carolina House has the budget first and the budgeting process has begun in earnest. Most budget committees, starting this week, will separate from having joint meetings with both Senate and House members to just having meetings with House Budget members. The leadership of the House has announced that they intend to present and pass their budget by the last week of April. While there are many moving parts to the budget early indications point to the fact that there will be some very significant differences between the Governor’s budget request and what the Legislature will ultimately vote on. These mainly surround several of the half-cent sales taxes that are supposed to expire this year. From what I understand, Senate legislative staff has been instructed to come up with budget scenarios that assume that this tax will expire this year as planned. Some concern has been voiced over letting this tax expire in relation to the mental health crisis. Mental health and child service advocates are very concerned that the expiration of these taxes will make the job of fixing our State’s mental health system extraordinarily difficult and in some cases next to impossible. While we will not know what the total revenue picture looks like until after April 17, you can be sure that this is going to be a debate that rages in Raleigh as the months turn warmer.

This Week: Transfer Taxes, Ringing Phones, Biofuels, Disbarred District Attorneys, and 529s

Transfer Taxes

This year several counties throughout the state have come forward and have requested legislation to allow for a transfer tax on the purchase or sales of homes in their county. A transfer tax is what is placed on the price of a home when it is sold. The tax amount is usually around one percent. The county collects the tax and uses it to plan, develop, and construct needed infrastructure for the county such as schools, water and sewer lines, and other such things.

Currently in North Carolina there are seven counties that have a transfer tax. After studying these counties it appears to me that if that transfer tax is the sole financing mechanism for the development of infrastructure in a county that the tax makes it economically illogical to either buy or sell a house. Moreover, in our counties where many of the home sales are for second-home sales, where the person buying the home is most likely not living in the home for the majority of the year, that a strain on infrastructure is not as great as it may be in other counties in North Carolina.

After studying this situation for the last few weeks I have determined that a transfer tax is neither needed nor necessary for our mountain counties and I will not support the enactment of a transfer tax across North Carolina or in any of the Counties of the 50th Senate District. (See related story on page 1.)

Ringing Phones

All of us know about the Do Not Call List; however, this week the Senate’s Commerce Committee heard and passed the Telephone Records Privacy Protection Act which would make purchasing private telephone information from other companies illegal. The reason for this additional protection is due to the fact that the telecommunication industry is changing rapidly and as it does, our laws need to ensure that the intentions of laws such as the Do Not Call List law remain in effect despite the new technology. Another benefit of the bill is that it will help the State Bureau of Investigation find people who engage in identity theft.

Biofuels

A few weeks ago I wrote about many of the bills that I am introducing to help get the biodiesel industry going here in North Carolina. As you will remember Western North Carolina is leading the way in biodiesel development in North Carolina. I was so happy to learn this week that one of our leaders, Smoky Mountain Biofuels from Cullowhee has signed a deal to provide biodiesel to 23 gas stations across Western North Carolina. Before their announcement there were less than 20 biodiesel pumps in all of Western North Carolina. Now over half the pumps in North Carolina are located right near us. For those of you out there with diesel engines in your cars and trucks, I hope that this summer, if prices go up, you will consider using a fuel source that helps put money back in our mountains and not in the pockets of the oil cartels based out of the Middle East.

After waiting a while, I am also happy to tell you that the State of North Carolina is finally showing leadership on the idea of biofuels. The Biofuels Strategic Plan calls for 10% of our state’s liquid fuel source come from biofuels by 2017. North Carolina imports and uses over five billion gallons of foreign liquid fuel every year.

Disbarred District Attorneys

This week, the Senate unanimously passed legislation to remove district attorneys or judges who have been disbarred. This will keep district attorneys who have lost their license to practice for whatever reason, from holding a public office and stopping prosecutions from taking place. Under the legislation, the governor would appoint a replacement.

The College Foundation of North Carolina and their 529 plans are great ways to save money for your child, grandchild, or friend to go to college. In North Carolina there is a tax deduction offered that many families may qualify for. Your earnings grow tax free from both the state and federal perspective and as long as withdrawals from the plan are used to pay for college they too are not taxed. Moreover, the money can be used at any college anywhere for tuition, fees, room, board, books, and supplies and equipment required for enrollment. I encourage you to learn more about a 529 plan if you have a little one running around the house who might go to college. You can learn more about the plan at http://www.cfcn.org <http://www.cfcn.org/>
Cold temperatures across the state since last weekend reminded all that Spring is always full of cold weather surprises. These events seem to happen each year. Snow and record breaking cold cover much of the South and Southeast. However, beyond the beauty of the snow lies the reality of killed or damaged vegetation and lost crops.

Temperature records in the Southeast are not just being broken by a degree or two, but they are being shattered by as much as 5-10 degrees. The fruit crop (apples, pears, cherries) and early vegetable crop is have been heavily damaged from Mississippi, Alabama, and Georgia across Tennessee and the Carolinas north into Pennsylvania. The local apple growers in the Asheville area are saying the crop is already 80-100% gone.

The whole area is experiencing lows in the 20s and teens during the nights. According to a recent report, an apple grower whose family has been in the business near Asheville since 1910 said he has never lost more than 70% of his apple crop to spring freezes, but he estimates his loss this spring is already “near 100%.”

The Center for Life Enrichment is pleased to present a lecture by Breta Stroud about the important environmental issue of global warming. The presentation is free and open to the public at the Performing Arts Center on Tuesday, April 17 from 5:30 to 7 p.m.

After seeing the Oscar award-winning documentary film which presents the scientific facts and evidence of Global Warming and Climate Change, “An Inconvenient Truth,” Stroud began searching on the internet for ways to actively spread the word.

In January of this year Stroud was chosen as one of 1,000 from a field of 5,000 applicants to attend a three-day training in Nashville, Tennessee sponsored by the Climate Project, a nonprofit organization that was formed to recruit and train people from across the country to present a modified and updated version of the slide show that Al Gore presented in “An Inconvenient Truth.” Along with Al Gore, the Climate Project training included renowned climate scientists who were present to answer questions.

The slide show Stroud presents details the scientific facts about Global Warming and Climate Change and offers simple but effective and hopeful solutions that we, as individuals, can incorporate into our everyday lives to combat this growing problem.

The group of trained volunteer presenters was formed by Al Gore and the Climate Project to educate and energize the public and governments from around the world and challenge them to take action against the crisis of Climate Change and to work, together, toward finding solutions.
Christ Anglican Church moves to the Highlands Community Center

Christ Anglican Church will move to the recently renovated Highlands Community Center for an 11 a.m. worship service beginning this Sunday, April 15.

The Reverend Canon David C. Anderson, president of the American Anglican Council, will preach and celebrate Holy Communion for this inaugural service. The Highlands Community Center, formerly known as the Highlands Conference Center, is located in Highlands next to the ball field on U.S. 64 east.

Christ Anglican, which serves the Highlands and Cashiers communities, has worshiped at the Community Bible Church (CBC) on Sunday afternoons for the past two years and expresses deep thanks to CBC for its wonderful act of hospitality during Christ Anglican’s formative stage as a new church.

Christ Anglican, a member of the Anglican Province of America, is a traditional, orthodox and conservative parish seeking to know Christ and to make Him known. Its agenda is simple: to worship God and to preach and teach the Gospel of Jesus Christ in the power of the Holy Spirit.

The church is sponsoring an ongoing Visiting Rector Series that has attracted a number of leaders of orthodox Anglicanism to come to the Highlands-Cashiers area to teach, preach and celebrate Holy Communion.

Community meetings set to determine library needs

A series of community meetings will be held throughout Jackson County to gather information about what services and features the citizens would like to have in their new library. The dates, times and locations for the library services meetings have been finalized. All full-time and seasonal residents of Jackson County are encouraged to attend one of these meetings.

The dates, times and locations are as follows: Monday, April 23, at 7:30 p.m., at the Qualla CDC, in Whittier; Tuesday, April 24 at 11 a.m. at the Family Resource Center (Old Webster School), in Webster; 2 p.m. at the Golden Age Center, 1 N. Central Street, in Sylva; 5 p.m. at the Cullowhee Valley School, Highway 107, in Cullowhee and at 7:30 p.m. at the Jackson County Justice Center Grand Jury Room #246, 401 Grindstaff Cove Road, in Sylva.

A children’s program will be provided at the 11 a.m. meeting at the Family Resource Center on Tuesday, April 24. Lori Richards, Director of Kindermusik, will conduct children’s musical activities during the meeting.

Snacks will be provided for the children.

Ron Dubberly, library consultant, will facilitate these meetings. This is the first step in the process that will ultimately result in a new library for Jackson County.

Dubberly will use a list of Library Service Priorities as the basis for discussion at these meetings. The list of library services is posted on the Friends of the Jackson County Main Library’s web site - www.fojcmvl.org. Meeting participants may want to review these service priorities prior to the scheduled meetings.

Directions are available at the current Jackson County Library and at the Friends of the Library Book Store 536 West Main Street, in downtown Sylva.
Rev. Canon David Anderson to visit Christ Anglican Church

The Reverend Canon David C. Anderson, president of the American Anglican Council, will preach and celebrate Holy Communion at 11 a.m. at Christ Anglican Church this Sunday, April 15.

The service at which he will be officiating marks the move of Christ Anglican Church to morning services and its permanent Sunday location at the Highlands Community Center (formerly the Highlands Conference Center) located next to the Highlands baseball field on U.S. 64.

Canon Anderson is recognized around the world for the passionate commitment to traditional Anglican teaching and theology. He has served since 2001 as president and CEO of the American Anglican Council (AAC) based in Atlanta, GA. His leadership gained national and international recognition in 2003 when the AAC emerged as a leading voice for Anglicans in the United States after the Episcopal Church USA adopted theological and doctrinal innovations contrary to the teachings of the Holy Scripture. The Episcopal Church’s actions created an historic crisis in the Anglican Communion. He travels extensively for the AAC and is in regular conversation with global Anglican leaders.

Canon Anderson holds a Bachelors degree in history from the University of Maryland and a Master in Divinity from Virginia Theological Seminary. He is married to MaryAnn Kemp and is the proud father and grandfather of three children and four grandchildren. The Andersons reside in suburban Atlanta.

The Reverend Paul F. Blankinship, assistant at All Saints Anglican Church in Asheville, will be the next visitor in Christ Anglican’s ongoing Visiting Rector Series coming to Highlands to preach and celebrate Holy Communion at 11 a.m., Sunday, April 22.

Children’s classes continue at Bascom-Louise Gallery in the Hudson Library on Main Street across from the Falls on Main complex.

The cost is $5 per student and days and classes are designed for various age groups.

Hurricane Creek to rock ITC April 14

Years ago if a woman wanted to go out on a date she had to wait to be asked by a man. In 1937 famed cartoonist, Al Capp, came up with the notion of creating a day in which woman did the asking out, and if she asked you, you had to go. He named it Sadie Hawkins Day. The Instant Theatre Company (ITC) has borrowed Mr. Capp's dandy idea by presenting a Sadie Hawkins Dance. A night of dancing to the music of the ever popular Hurricane Creek Band, complete with mood making dance floor lighting, and complimentary wine, beer and soft drinks. So women, there is no excuse if you want to dance. You are hereby encouraged to insist your favorite dance partner take you to The ITC's Sadie Hawkins Dance in the Studio on Main, 310 Main Street, Oak Square in Highlands NC. The date is Saturday, April 14th at 8 PM. Reservations are strongly suggested, and can be made by calling 828-342-9197.

Committee to study whether to provide property tax relief and if affirmed, the manner which to do so, including but not limited to, deferment programs, circuit breakers, Proposition 13 and SOH programs, fractional assessment programs—treating commercial differently from residential—treat primary homes differently from secondary homes, etc.

“The various proposals as introduced thus far warrant an in-depth study of their potential impact on tax base and equity,” said Lightner. “Currently, bills introduced represent the greatest legislative change to the property tax program since the change to a market value assessment standard and the creation of the Present Use Value program in 1973. In most cases, the impact would be more adverse to municipalities and special districts—those smaller in size, with less alternatives to absorb the shift—than to counties.”

Lightner urged commissioners to voice their opinions and concerns to legislators in Raleigh.

Hike & picnic to raise environmental awareness

‘Step It Up Congress: Cut Carbon 80% by 2050’

Want to enjoy a great day outdoors with your family? Are you concerned about our environment and would like to know more about the growing problem of climate change? Then come to Highlands to join a swelling national movement called Step It Up 2007, the biggest environmental movement since the original Earth Day in 1970.

On April 14, tens of thousands of Americans will come together all across the country with one goal: to cut carbon emissions by 80% by the year 2050. This movement originated in Vermont with a group of people who thought it was time to ask Congress to “Step It Up” and create legislation that would begin to tackle the growing crisis of climate change. Their original plan was to organize a march in Washington to put pressure on our elected officials to address this issue. Then, they had a better idea: Instead of having tens of thousands of people drive to Washington, why not ask people to organize their own events right where they are, in their home towns? With this more grassroots approach, not only would more people be able to participate in this historic event, but it would also save 1000’s of tons of carbon dioxide from being emitted along the way!

So they rethink their plan, created a website and asked for just that, volunteer organizers from around the USA — and the response has been fantastic. There are over 1,300 events planned all over the country, including a dive to endangered coral reefs off Key West, an event at the levees in New Orleans, and a climb atop the melting glaciers on Mt. Rainer. The common thread of all these events will be that a photo will be taken of all participants at each site, holding a banner that reads: “Step It Up Congress: Cut Carbon 80% by 2050.” These photos will then be uploaded to the Step It Up website and linked together electronically via the web, creating the largest protest our country has ever seen, not in numbers but in extent!

Highlands has also answered this call. At 10 a.m. this Saturday, April 21, folks from all around the area will meet at the base of Sunset Rock to make the moderate hike to the top and get a picture with our banner, made by Highlands’ own Karen Hawk. After the hike, there will be a picnic around noon at the beautiful, natural amphitheater at Highlands Nature Center for all hikers and anyone who would like to attend with music by Franklin musician, Susie Best. There will also be plenty of food donated by local restaurants and businesses, including Brick Oven, Cyprus Restaurant, Fressers Eatery and The Kitchen of Let Holly Do the Cooking. Jackson-Macon Conservation Alliance is co-sponsoring this event and will be providing sodas and water for the picnic.

So bring your friends and family to this important event and enjoy a fun-filled day outdoors while helping to preserve what makes our area so unique—the natural beauty that surrounds us each day. For more information, contact Breta Stroud at 828-342-0076.
County commissioners agree to fund repairs at Franklin High School prior to next budget

Some funding requested for repairs at Franklin High School for the 2007-2008 budget, will be distributed within the current budget cycle, instead.

At Commissioner Ronnie Beale’s urging, the board agreed to fund the money needed to build a handicap-accessible bathroom (ADA), repair the track damaged during Hurricanes Ivan and Frances and outfit the bleachers with seatbacks at Monday night’s meeting.

“These are safety and liability issues,” said Beale, “I can’t believe we have a 1,200 capacity stadium and no ADA bathroom.”

Without backs on the bleachers, Commissioner Jim Davis said it’s just plain lucky that an accident hasn’t happened in the bleachers and the county hasn’t suffered a lawsuit.

The county will be refunded money from the school board once public school funds come in from the state, but meanwhile the county will supply the money needed to begin work immediately.

The state’s public school building capital fund will supply $335,305.34 of the funds needed; the county’s board once public school funds come in from the state, will supply the money needed to build a handicap-accessible bathroom.

The money the Board of Education is short and needs now will be included in its budget this upcoming year,” said Beale. “With the funds we give them now, they can begin the work as soon as school is out and have it completed before school starts in the fall.”

County Manager Sam Greenwood was against the idea.

“You are spending funds that constitute the reserve on which we need to base capital funding for the future,” he said. “You have to be careful about what you prioritize. We are caught between county finances and state robbery, so pay particular attention to where your reserves are.”

Superintendent Dan Brigman said the repairs and renovations were a priority to guarantee the health and safety of students and members of the community.

Commissioner Beale said the money allocated for these projects which was needed before the next budget cycle begins, will be earmarked for these particular projects only.

THE SETUP:
The cube has 27 consecutive numbers in it, arranged in three layers with 9 numbers each. These numbers are arranged in a special pattern: For each layer, the sum of the three numbers in each row, column or diagonal, is 3 times its center number. Eight diagonals connect all 3 layers by running through the center number of the middle layer. Each diagonal contains 3 numbers equalling the total of the three center numbers. One of the diagonals is shown with circles.

THE CHALLENGE:
Start with the three center numbers for each layer and two other numbers. Now pour a cup of coffee, pick up a pencil and erase and try to figure out where the other 22 numbers belong. Good Luck!
