Bond referendum subject of public hearing

The First Presbyterian Church moved from the Appearance Commission's unanimous vote Monday night to the Zoning Board of Adjustment's unanimous vote Wednesday night.

With its Special Use Permit (SUP) in hand, demolition of the church's fellowship hall on the corner of Fifth and Main will begin the latter part of January. Construction of the new 7,209 sq. ft. fellowship hall will begin mid-February with completion set for Christmas of 2008.

At Wednesday night's meeting, architect Jeff Weller walked the zoning board through the plans noting that the new building will be two stories rather than the current three stories and will be pushed back 30 feet from the Main Street sidewalk "to open up the line site to the historical sanctuary," he said.

The new building will mimic the existing sanctuary in profile, roof design, size and texture with lap siding and butternut paint color.

He said the design of the building which will include classrooms, a kitchen, nursery, offices and bathrooms, will improve accessibility to the property and its building by utilizing a "step" design.

Macon County Schools graduation rate up by 10%

Highlands School only school to hit "high growth" mark on state ABCs model

By Dan Brigrman
Superintendent of Schools

Over the last year, I have taken time to visit many classrooms throughout the district and observe staff and administrators attending to the state curriculum and other daily demands within each facility. The Macon County School System is very fortunate to have a quality team of professionals in each school and department to serve our children and prepare students for the ever-changing world we live in.

Each county and school system has its own unique challenges. For Macon County, we are continuing to address increasing academic standards, steady growth, and space restrictions within each facility. Academically, we are continuing to provide adequate educational opportunities for all students.

Crane Barn to get a face lift

Over the next several days board by board, nail by nail, Crane's Barn at the Fine Art Center site on Oak Street will be meticulously disassembled. After a new foundation is constructed, the barn will be reassembled exactly as it was only with a new interior. It will be the Center's pottery facility where work will be created and fired.

‘Big Box’ regulations discussed again

The Planning Board can’t seem to put the Big Box issue to rest.

At its August 27 meeting, members voted unanimously to limit new construction of commercial buildings to 15,000 sq. ft. and to require owners of existing commercial buildings who want to expand beyond 15,000 sq. ft. to apply for a special Use Permit (SUP) from the Zoning Board of Adjustment.

But at the Monday, Sept. 10 meeting, members decided by consensus that they wanted to amend last month’s ordinance change.

cational services to each student with limited resources. The Macon County School System has consistently performed at or around the state average on all performance indicators and assessments.

But, improving student performance is one of our district’s primary goals for the current academic year.

Happily, at the State Board of Education (SBE) meeting Sept. 4-6 at the Education Building in Raleigh the 2006-07 performance results on state and federal accountability models for the state and each district were approved. North Carolina public schools showed improvement in the 2006-07 school year, according to the ABCs report approved by the SBE Thursday. Nearly 72 percent of schools showed expected or higher growth, a 17.5 percent increase from the previous year’s numbers.

Also reported was an increase in students graduating from N.C. high schools in four years, with 69.4 percent in 2007, up from 68.3 percent the prior year.

Macon County successfully met its graduation requirements for 2006-07 with an overall gain of nearly 10 percent in the new Cohort Graduation Rate calculations. Our Cohort Graduation rate for 2006-07 was 76%.

We are proud of our historical accomplishments and meeting both federal and state accountability models year after year; however, under the federal No Child Left Behind (NCLB) legislation, our school system did not make Adequately Yearly Progress (AYP) in one or more areas during the 2006-07 academic year.

Under the federal accountability model (NCLB), two of our schools, Macon Middle School and East Franklin Elementary School did not make AYP and have now entered year two of school improvement. In 2006-07, Macon Middle School achieved 15 out of 21 target areas with performance among the following academic cells and subgroups not meeting annual goals:

- Reading – Hispanic students
- Reading - Students with Disabilities -

Letters - The Editor's Policy

Dear Editor,

I must respond to the letter written by Arthur Hancock in the September 6 issue of Highlands' Newspaper. I don’t have a problem with Northland Cable other than they have fewer channels and charge more money than the cable system I had when I lived in Montgomery, Alabama. Also they currently do not have any High Definition channels – although I understand that is about to change.

Like Arthur I know that Northland was not the cause of WLOS not being on their Highlands system. Northland simply could not receive the WLOS signal because of technical difficulties at WLOS. If you can’t get something, you can’t sell it to your subscribers.

However, I don’t think you can equate Western North Carolina news and weather that’s provided by WLOS with taped programming on the local cable access channel. Every cable company is franchised by the local community they serve – and they are required to provide a local access channel. That’s why we have the programming provided by Arthur and Katie on Channel 14. That’s why the Episcopal Church services are also on Channel 14. Not because Northland is a great community servant: This is what they are required to do.

Now that WLOS has their technical difficulties fixed, we can all stop jumping on Northland Cable. I’ve been waiting over a year for them to get High Definition service and it can not come too soon for me.

Dear Editor,

I hope this letter finds you well. I recently purchased a new pair of reading glasses and have noticed a significant improvement in my ability to read. I am writing to you because I believe there is an issue with the lighting in my home that may be affecting my ability to see clearly.

Over the past few weeks, I have experienced difficulty reading in the evenings, particularly when the lights are turned off. I have tried adjusting the brightness of the lights in the room, but the issue persists. I would like to know if there are any tricks or tips that you could share with me to improve my ability to see clearly in low light conditions.

I am also interested in any advice you may have for someone like me who needs to rely on reading glasses. Are there any specific glasses or lenses that you would recommend for someone with my vision issues?

Dear Editor,

I recently received a call from a representative of the local news station, asking me to participate in a special program about the importance of mental health awareness. I was honored to be asked and have been preparing for my appearance for the past few weeks.

I believe that it is crucial to raise awareness about mental health issues and hope that my participation in this program will help to educate others on this important topic. I am looking forward to the opportunity to share my thoughts and experiences with the audience.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]
Mary Ann Powell

Mary Ann Powell, age 70, of Crawfordville, FL and Highlands, N.C. died Wednesday, September 5, 2007 at Highlands-Cashiers Hospital. I never ever use a public restroom unless it is absolutely necessary. Well, just this week it was necessary. I am on Main Street acting like a typical tourist, fondling everything, buying nothing when Mother Nature called. No, let me rephrase. Mother Nature screamed. Since there was no need to even try to use a merchant's facility, I high-tailed it to the restroom behind Town Hall. My situation was bad…real bad. Have you ever tried climbing that hill with irritable bowel syndrome? Whew!

Under normal conditions, whenever I enter the stall of a public restroom I always cover the seat with toilet paper. I know that's kind of girlish but this habit is left over from when I was a cop. We once had this infection nurse lecture us on personal hygiene. I'll leave out the tacky details but I'll never forget her first question to a room full of police officers. "Why do you guys wash your hands after you use the facilities when all the germs on your hands are there before you used the facilities?" DUH!

According to the infection nurse, it is wise to wash your hands before using any restroom and then again after. And always cover the seat with paper. The only exception to this is in China where you can actually pick up more germs washing your hands than not. Anyway, that's your personal hygiene lesson for today.

Let's get back to my dilemma. None of that personal hygiene stuff was going to occur on this occasion because this was an emergency. I was a desperate man. I'm in the stall for only a moment when a guy enters the stall next to me. After a moment, he moves his foot close to my side of the stall and does interesting little movements with it. I thought the guy was cool and was wearing his Ipod, listening to his favorite rock song and keeping beat with his foot. I was envious that he had music and I didn't.

Just to show my envy and appreciation for his music, I moved my foot close to his and picked up his beat with my foot. This seemed to get him real excited as his foot movements became frenzied and I was concerned and wondered why he would do this. He probably wants to see if I am wearing an Ipod and listening to the same type of music. Anyway, there's this giant eyeball stuck against this hole in the stall and looking around; very, very unsettling.

I was getting bored with this foolishness and was finished with my business anyway, so I prepared to leave my stall. Then the guy sends me a note which I should have just ignored, but didn't. It said, "Meet me later and I'll light your fire." Now I'm really suspicious and wondering what this guy is up to. Then, like a flash, a thought crossed my mind that I had not thought of since my days in the Army. I quickly pulled off 40 or 50 sheets of toilet paper and lit them. When they were in a full blaze, I lobbed them over my stall into his. Whoa, what a commotion; such thrashing and shouting.

Now all my readers and friends know I am a reasonable man. If I had known for one minute he was an undercover officer for the North Carolina Department of Smut, I would not have set him on fire. I laughed and told him I was a retired policeman. He laughed and threw me in jail. Some guys just don't have a sense of humor.
The pride in a job well done

A writer knows that his creative well is dangerously depleted when he drops a bucket and pulls up mud and moss. Mine was as dry as west Texas in August and I considered calling in sick when I received inspiration from a most unlikely source.

I stopped in Seneca at the Waffle House this morning and was rewarded with a column and an omelette. A short order cook, whom I hadn’t seen for several weeks, stood at the grill. I had imagined that he had drifted to the next job or the next town. He looks like a jockey who had outgrown the ponies, 5’4” and impossibly slim. He would be described as “wiry” in a western novel. He faded black jeans ride low and cling tenuously to whatever bit of flesh they can find. His black baseball cap is pulled low as if a size too large or meant to conceal his shaved head. He wears two rings in his left ear. His eyes dart from grill to toaster to waffle iron, like a hawk in search of prey.

His ageless face shows signs of aging. There is a hint of humor and wisdom, of some grand joke untold or of some great secret unrevealed.

I like the guy and had missed him. The cooks who had replaced him moved more like turtles than like sparrows. I always sit at the counter in a place like this. It seemed that I had watched him in a hundred diners. He is like a department store Santa, sometimes a little older, sometimes fatter, sometimes drunker, but pretty much the same guy. A Santa or a short order cook would never be mistaken for a banker or a surgeon. It’s amazing how often I’m treated to a virtuoso performance, cooking with a flair by guys who care.

I was inexplicably pleased to see him and delighted with his greeting. “bacon and cheese omelette on the side” which in the language of Waffle House means without toast, grits, or hash browns. “Just the omelette,” I reply ritually, and add, “and coffee,” knowing that she will ask in a robotic voice, “Do you need cream?” I want to answer, “No, black, just like yesterday, last week, and tomorrow,” but it comes out a polite. “No thanks. Just black.”

I told the cook I’d missed him and that I’d figured he’d moved away. He answered that he worked only weekends which at Waffle House means 10-hour shifts, Thursday through Sunday. He volunteered that he was a certified welder and could do anything. He mentioned roofing and plumbing. It occurred to me that roofers and cooks look a lot alike. I imagined him growing up on a farm, his Dad teaching him all the skills that farmers were too poor or too independent to hire out. I could see him fixing a truck engine, welding a broken plow, roofing a barn, rewiring the house, or fixing a leaky faucet. He was proud now. He broke egg shells with a flourish, scraped excess batter from the edge of the waffle iron, pulled toast, butter it, stacked it and neatly halved it. He turned the bacon and served customers if the waitress was slow. He flipped my eggs unnecessarily high in the air, folded in the bacon and cheese and delivered it himself.

There are people who take pride in their work, who transform a job into an art form. Others resent their work, and who, by doing it poorly or dispassionately, seem to believe that they demean not themselves, but their work.

Admiral Rickover asked a young Ensign Jimmy Carter if he had done his best while at the Naval Academy. When Carter answered that he had not, Rickover ended the interview with a single question, “Why not?” The question changed the life of the future president and it changed my life the first time I heard it. When I lecture or teach, I repeat the story, hoping to enrich other lives. I end each lecture with a most unlikely source.

MC Health Dept. starts dental clinic

By Sally Hansen
 Reporter

The county’s new dentist and its dental program were introduced at Tuesday’s Macon County Health Department meeting.

Dr. David Oliver is working with the Board on the new Adult Dental Clinic. Currently, the county’s mobile dental unit (the Molar Roller) only serves Macon County residents between the ages of 2 and 20, providing preventative and restorative care to those who are at or below 200% of the poverty level. Emergency care is also available through the Molar Roller for adults.

However, there have been a few issues in the past concerning containment of the radiation used in dental x-rays, and the Molar Roller is now undergoing changes to ensure staff and patients are not exposed to dangerous levels of radiation, Jim Bruckner, director of the Health Department, said “we were seeing patients on the Molar Roller, but not anymore.”

According to Bruckner, the Adult Dental Clinic is targeting both adults with Medicare and those who are uninsured. The latter patients will be charged on a sliding fee scale based on family size and income, just as they have been on the Molar Roller. “We looked at three other clinics and how they operate, and they are able to generate enough revenue to set up contingency funds to replace equipment and other things,” Bruckner said.

Money – totaling about $100,000 from the Kate B. Reynolds Grant – will be used to replace equipment and other things, he said.

“We looked at three other clinics and how they operate, and they are able to generate enough revenue to set up contingency funds to replace equipment and other things,” Bruckner said.

Floyd said training includes learning what constitutes illegal parking and also teaching volunteers what information has to be put on the citations. “This includes things like the type and color of the vehicle, and the tag number,” he said.

The penalty for failure to display a hang tag or proper license plate is a fine of $250. Harrington said that 275 parking violations have been written since February, but that not all of them are true for illegal parking. “Many are due to someone not hanging the placard or letting it expire,” she said.

Floyd said “Some people don’t like it, but I don’t like it when people park in handicapped spaces when they don’t need them.”

Several members of the Kiwanis Club showed interest in bringing a similar program to Macon County, which would free up police and bring in revenue. Mike Decker, Franklin town manager, attended the meeting and he’d pass the information on to the town board.

Also in attendance at the meeting was Ann Parkey, one of the program’s volunteers. She talked about several laws regarding handicapped parking that people don’t know about, even though they are listed in the driver’s handbook. “For instance, many people don’t know that the stripe zone next to the space is part of handicapped parking,” she said.

It was clear that improper use of handicapped parking is definitely an issue in our county, as most people wanted to know exactly what volunteers could write the tickets for. Parkey explained that if the car is parked in a handicapped space and it has the proper license plate or hang tag, then the volunteers can cite the driver even if there is no apparent disability.

Disabilities aren’t only physical, but can include neurological and cognitive limitations as well. Problems with balance or coordination can necessitate a handicapped sticker, even in younger people.

Recipes with a fresh twist

Grilled Garlic Lime Pork Tenderloin

Servings: 8

Ingredients:
- 2 Pork Tenderloins, 12 oz. avg.
- 3 large garlic cloves, chopped
- 1 tbsp. soy sauce
- 1 tsp. grated fresh gingerroot
- 1 tsp. Gourmet Table Dijon mustard
- 1/4 cup fresh lime juice
- 1/4 cup Raffinato olive oil
- cayenne pepper to taste

Instructions:
- In a blender or small food processor blend marinade ingredients with salt and pepper to taste. In a large sealable plastic bag combine pork with marinade. Seal bag, pressing out excess air, and put in a shallow baking dish.
- Marinate pork, chilled, turning occasionally, at least 1 day and up to 2 days. Prepare grill. Let pork stand at room temperature about 30 minutes before grilling.
- Remove pork from marinade, letting excess drip off, and grill on an oiled rack set 5 to 6 inches over glowing coals, turning every 5 minutes, until a meat thermometer registers 160°F., 15 to 20 minutes.
- Transfer meat to a cutting board and let stand 5 minutes before slicing.

- 1 each Green Bell Pepper, julienned
- 1/2 cup Black Olives, pitted and coarsely chopped
- 4 each Green Onions
- 1/8 cup Fresh Parmesan Cheese, grated
- 1 tbsp Fresh Italian Parsley, chopped

Instructions:
- Cook cheese tortellini according to package directions. Drain and allow to cool completely. Combine remaining ingredients with tortellini and refrigerate. Garnish with grated Parmesan cheese and parsley before serving. Serve as part of an entree salad, as a side dish to sandwiches or as a part of a buffet or salad bar.

Nectarine Blueberry Cobbler

Ingredients:
- 8 small nectarines, pitted and sliced thin (about 4 1/2 cups)
- 2 cups blueberries, picked over
- 1/2 cup water
- 1/2 cup sugar, or to taste
- 1 tbsp. + 1 tsp. cornstarch
- 1 tbsp. lemon juice
- 1 3/4 cups all-purpose flour
- 3 tbsp. sugar
- 1 tbsp. double-acting baking powder
- a pinch of salt
- 1 cup West Creek Heavy Cream sugar for sprinkling on the biscuits

Instructions:
- Preheat the oven to 450°F. In a saucepan combine the nectarines, the blueberries, the water, 1/4 cup sugar, the cornstarch, and the lemon juice, bring the mixture to a boil, stirring constantly, and simmer it for 5 minutes, or until the fruit is softened. Transfer the fruit mixture to a shallow 1 1/2 -quart baking dish. Make the biscuits: Sift the flour onto a sheet of wax paper, into a bowl sift together the flour, 3 tbsp. sugar, the baking powder, and the salt, and make a well in the center. In a bowl beat the cream until it holds soft peaks, spoon it into the well in the flour mixture and combine the mixture with a fork until it just forms a dough. On a lightly floured surface knead the dough until it is combined well; roll or pat it out about 3/4 inch thick, and with a 2 1/2 -inch round cutter cut out 6 biscuits. Arrange the biscuits on top of the fruit mixture, brush them with the cream or milk, and sprinkle them with the sugar. Bake the cobbler in the middle of the oven for 15 to 17 minutes, or until the biscuits are browned and the fruit is bubbling. Let the cobbler cool slightly and serve it with vanilla ice cream, if desired.
A charge that conservatives have leveled against environmentalists is that they care more about trees and spotted owls than human beings. I always thought this was a ridiculous statement, until I read a new book called The World Without Us, by Alan Weisman (304.2W). This book will provide a lot of fuel for the conservatives’ argument.

The point of the book is to imagine what the planet would look like if somehow, magically, all human beings completely disappeared simultaneously. Mr. Weisman had written a magazine article about what happened after people abandoned the area around the nuclear disaster at Chernobyl, and an editor suggested he imagine what would happen if humans vanished on a planetary scale.

It is a very strange endeavor. The author goes into intricate detail about plants taking root in cracks in roadbeds, water filling subway tunnels, all the ways nature would bring down what humans have created.

What is perhaps strangest is that he keeps saying “when” humans are gone; he less frequently says “if.” You start getting the strong impression he wants human beings to disappear.

The quote on the front cover is by Bill McKibben, the author of a book called The End of Nature.

I believe that human beings are part of nature. Everything humans have created is natural. There is nothing that is not part of nature. We may have created huge problems but those problems are natural. Human beings have not brought about the end of the natural world — that’s in fact impossible.

I remember the time I spent on Heron Island in the Great Barrier Reef. The island was a bird refuge and every tree was filled with the nests of the Black Noddy Tern. Hanging from the nests were stalactites of birds’ droppings, which appeared to be killing the trees. We are not the only creature who fouls our nest.

Mr. McKibben, a famous environmental author, is quoted on the front cover saying this book “is one of the grandest thought experiments of our time, a tremendous feat of imaginative reporting!” What rubbish! I found it a colossal waste of time. How about a thought experiment that explores how humans can live sustainably on this planet? That would be useful.

And it’s too bad because Mr. Weisman takes the reader on some interesting journeys and shares some fascinating information, but then it always ends up the same way: wouldn’t it be much better if there were no people.

For example, I had no idea before I read this book the fantastic variety of creatures that lived on the American continent before humans arrived around 13,000 years ago. There were giant short-faced bears, nearly double the size of grizzlies; beavers as big as today’s black bears; a lion bigger and faster than today’s African lion; the imperial mammoth, weighing in at 10 tons; mastodons; horses; camels; saber-toothed tigers; cheetahs; and a ground sloth that lived in what is now Florida that was the size of a modern elephant and weighed 3 tons.

Many scientists believe these creatures went extinct within a thousand years of humanity’s arrival on the continent because we hunted them out of existence.

This book is not dropping the idea of a planet without humans into a vacuum either. This may surprise you as it did me, but there are people out there actually advocating the end of the human species.

The Voluntary Human Extinction Movement (www.vhemt.org) advocates just what its name implies. The group encourages people not to reproduce. They envision the slow extinction of the human race over 100 years as no new humans are born. If you visit their website you can get an “award” for not reproducing (click on “biology and breeding” and scroll almost to the bottom of the page).

Others, such as Dave Foreman, the founder of the radical environmental group Earth First!, think we should just reduce our numbers and redact our relationship with wildlife. Mr. Foreman directs The Rewilding Institute, which advocates creating huge interconnected areas of wilderness similar to that existing in the pre-human world. Part of the plan would be to reintroduce to the Americas some of the large predator animals lost 13,000 years ago — import African lions, cheetahs, and elephants (www.rewilding.org).

Mr. Weisman suggests that all women on Earth refrain from having more than one child. He cites research that suggests that if all women did this the world population (currently 6.5 billion) would drop by 1 billion by 2050, instead of rising to approximately 9 billion. By 2100 the population would fall to 1.6 billion.

He somehow believes that this decrease would solve all of our problems. Yet we would still be driving cars, spewing pollutants out of factories, spraying chemicals on our farms. We would still be thinking in the same fight/flight ego-centered way. Maybe the pressure on the planet would be reduced, but this isn’t any true solution.

I believe that only a major evolution in human consciousness will turn things around.
A few days ago a good friend of mine called me with some sad news. Unfortunately, his father had passed away over the weekend and he wanted me to know – mainly because he knows how much I admired his father. It was very difficult talking to my friend about his loss, and he implored me to enjoy the lesser things in life because you never know when it is going to end.

I thought a lot about his statement and along with the thoughts about my own family, mortality and I ended up thinking about some of my first experiences with death. I immediately thought of my grandmother who died when I was young, and I also thought of Reggie Lewis, who died when I was thirteen. Lewis was a rising star for the Boston Celtics (my favorite pro team) and was going to take them back to the top after Larry Bird’s retirement. Unfortunately, Lewis died of a heart attack during a summer workout. I remember being devastated by the news and wondering how such an athlete could be gone from this world in merely an instant. In addition to Lewis, here are a few other athletes/sports figures who left us much too soon.

• Darryl Kile – Kile was a baseball pitcher who died of a heart attack at the young age of 33. I remember watching Kile when he was with the Astros and marveling at his curveball and the effortless with which he threw it. I also remember seeing the announcement that the Cubs would not play the Cardinals due to Kile’s death. The Cardinals honored Kile by writing DK57 on their jerseys, as did many former teammates of Kile after this tragedy.

• Owen Hart – Hart was a WWF wrestler who died from a tragic accident when he was attempting to zipline into the ring for a match. This memory is like a bad dream for me, because my friends and I were watching the pay-per-view when Owen fell from the ceiling – for a long time we debated over whether or not what was happening on our screen was real or simply part of the show.

Unfortunately, it was all too real and Owen was no longer with us. Hart was a dynamo in the ring, capable of high flying or technical ability, and the best part about seeing Owen Hart was listening to him work the crowd as a heel – truly a loss for all fans of wrestling. Wrestling held a tribute show for Owen the next night, one that saw even the toughest of wrestlers sobbing openly in mourning the loss of a friend and colleague.

• Dale Earnhardt- One of my worst college memories is that of being in our old house in Coats and watching the end of the Daytona 500 only to see Dale Earnhardt crash into the wall. Crashes happen quite often in racing, and we didn’t think much of it until we started to hear the announcers voice gaining in intensity and ultimately panic. When the announcement that we had lost Dale Earnhardt came it was like a sledgehammer, even for a non-racing guy like myself. My best friend openly wept and I saw first hand the affect that the loss of a hero can have on folks. The Intimidator was a legend in the south and in racing, and it was a huge loss for all race fans regardless of allegiance.

• Jim Valvano- Valvano is best known for his famous “running around looking for someone to hug” moment after the 1983 national championship and his “never give up” speech given at the ESPY awards ceremony in 1993. Valvano was stricken and fighting cancer at the time and yet found the ability to speak some incredible words stating that “Cancer can take away all of my physical abilities. It cannot touch my mind, it cannot touch my heart, and it cannot touch my soul. And those three things are going to carry on forever” I honestly cannot even read those words now without seeing Valvano in my mind on that stage and getting a little misty eyed.

All of us have lost loved ones – whether they be family, friends, or simply people that we looked up to at some point in our life.

Today, take the time to savor some of the best memories that you have of those lost, and then take a moment to call or visit those people that you love the most.

Today is a great day to make a new memory, because you never know when the book is going to close for those that we love.
It's fall (almost)

I just love this time of year. Soon the trees will turn and the fall colors will appear. The green landscape will suddenly turn yellow and orange and red and brown and it's all beautiful. It used to be that the Atlanta Braves would be gearing up for the playoffs about now, not so this year. If you are a baseball lover, you'll just enjoy who is in it and wait until next year.

The County Fair should be going on right about now. For the first time, my very talented wife and her no-talent hubby will be entering the competition in various categories. We'll see how that works out.

A lot of fans are all excited about the NFL season getting underway. My wife is still a big-time Dolphin fan but since they insisted on resigning that pothead Ricky Williams several times, they lost me. I'll wait until the playoffs until I really get interested.

But college football is a different issue. Their season started last week and what a start it was. I went to the University of Minnesota, and for 50 years, Michigan has been eating our lunch. Typically, big time nationally ranked teams schedule patsies for their pre-conference games to pad their record. Fifth-ranked Michigan scheduled Appalachian State for their home opener. Now this is a total mismatch; Appalachian State isn't even in the same classification as Michigan. That didn't stop the Mountaineers from beating the Wolverines in front of the Michigan fans. It doesn't get any better than that for Michigan haters.

Now, on the positive side, when we moved to Miami, since Minnesota was going nowhere, I took the Hurricanes as my team just in time for them to win several national championships. That was then, this is now. Miami scheduled Marshall for their opening day patsy and did what they were supposed to do; they won 31-3.

This week, however, a tragic mistake was made. Miami scheduled Oklahoma. The Sooners dismembered my precious Hurricanes, and to make matters worse, it was a nationally televised game. My only solace would be if Oregon can beat Michigan in the late game.

Now that my undefeated season is history, what is left? Fortunately, we will have four or five months of what could be vicious inter-party campaigning. The rhetoric is heating up in both camps and this could turn out to be fun. By the way, I saw my first yard sign today; “Ron Paul for President,” it read. While I don’t agree with much of his politics, he certainly doesn’t hesitate to let you know what he thinks. He also seems to be the winner of Republican debates based on public call-ins.

So Oprah has come out in support of Barack Obama. Personally, I’ve never seen her show, but I understand she has a large and faithful following. Does her choice mean that color will trump gender in the election? Does it mean that sex appeal is in play? Does it simply mean she likes his politics better than the others? Of course, I have no idea but I’ll bet the pundits are having fun with the possibilities. At least he’ll raise a ton of money at her house party on his behalf.

Has Romney eased into second place on the Republican side? I think he leads fairly substantially in the two early states, Iowa and New Hampshire. That’s got to count for something. Evidently, Fred Thompson’s long overdue entry into the sweepstakes sort of fell with a thud. As much as I like the guy’s politics, he looks old and gray, and a little ridiculous with his young wife and little child. Maybe others see it differently. We’ll soon see.

Meanwhile, John Edwards seems to have a lock on third place on the Democratic side. Admittedly, I haven’t paid much attention to his message, which is possibly why I don’t understand it. I do keep on hearing him wanting to end poverty in our country on the one hand and helping to create it, poverty, on the other. I guess I’m confused.

I’m surprised and a little disappointed that Al Gore has slipped into quietude. I had hoped he would have maintained some visibility so that his campaign could be launched from an active platform. Maybe I was wrong about his political intentions and he is content to profit from his carbon credit trading schemes.

By the way, Oregon annihilated Michigan so badly I almost feel sorry for their fans.

Support the National Party of the United Race?
Michelle Mead & John Armor
michiemead@aol.com
John_Armor@yale.edu

Does that sound like I’ve gone off my rocker? Am I asking you to support the White Citizen’s Council, or the KKK, or some such? No. Hold your fire. You’ll be angry when you finish this column. Not at me, but at an organization which pretends to be just a community-based, self-help group.

La Raza, or the National Council of La Raza, claims to be just a self-help group. It says on its official website that the word “la raza” means “community.” It says it has “no interest” in reclaiming for Mexicans the lands from Texas to California which form the southwestern seven states of the Union. This appears on a page of its website entitled, “The Truth about NCLR.”

My mind is like flypaper in a barn, everything sticks to it. I remember when La Raza first arose, and engaged in “civil rights” litigation. Its name then was “La Raza Unida.” There’s still a website for that old form name. It’s for the Partido Nacional de La Raza Unida. That means what the title says, the National Party of the United Race.

The best way to find out what any organization stands for, or what leaders in that organization really intend, is to read what they say to their own supporters, when they don’t think outsiders are listening. For instance, when one reads the garbage that Palestinians are dumping into the minds of their schoolchildren, it’s clear that for now, Palestinians are uncivilized, murderous barbarians who cannot be trusted with a blackboard and chalk, much less with weapons, uniforms, and a nation.

Let’s review what the United Race is saying to its own people, to see where it stands. You will notice first the symbol, a circle containing the red outline of the southwestern states of the US. What is the intention of the United Race about those states? The text makes clear that “Mexicans” in those states are “oppressed” and that the United Race can and should establish “self-determination,” and “rescue our culture.” According to the United Race, all people and the Working Class.” In addition to wanting the states back, they also want to bring down the U.S. free-market economy.

This website unabashedly promotes Aztlan libre, which means freedom for the American southwest. Note this quote from its information section: “Because the governments of the U.S. and Mexico signed a paper giving the U.S. rule over the current ‘Southwest’ does not mean that the people gave up their nationality or their right to struggle for liberation.”

Just last week, President Felipe Calderon of Mexico said this in a speech, “Wherever there are Mexicans, there is Mexico.” Hasn’t anyone cracked a history book lately? World War II began with the claim of Adolf Hitler for the Sudetenland, lands belonging to other nations but having substantial German populations, who had a “right” to a German government, rather than the Polish, French, Czechoslovakian or Austrian governments they actually had at the time.

Am I suggesting that Mexico is planning an armed assault on the United States? Not in a million years. They are not that foolish. However, unlike German ambitions beyond its borders, Mexican ambitions can succeed without a shot being fired. There is already proof that the Mexican invasion is succeeding.

More and more local governments, and notably the state government in California, are making decisions as demanded by their Mexican “citizens” rather than their American citizens. How else can one explain the status of Los Angeles as a sanctuary city, at the same time that gang murders there, from largely Hispanic gangs, are at an all-time high?

How else can one explain the
It's Time to Plant Spring Bulbs

By Charlie Nardozzi

Fall is bulb-planting time across the country. However, not all spring-flowering bulbs are created equal. Some require less maintenance and are more likely to come back and flower year after year. These are what I call the “no-fuss bulbs,” and here are my favorites.

Daffodils

You just can’t go wrong with daffodils. They come in a variety of flower shapes, sizes, and colors; they bloom early to late, depending on the variety; animals don’t bother them; and they come back faithfully every year with little extra effort. I particularly like the small-flowered, fragrant daffodils (often called narcissus or jonquils). The flowers range in color from pure white to deep yellow. Some of my favorite hybrids are ‘Thalia’, ‘Quail’, and ‘Tete a Tete’. They look great in rock gardens, mixed in perennial borders, and cut for indoor arrangements.

Tulips

Tulips have a reputation of being difficult to grow and quick to stop flowering after a few years. While this may be true of the large-flowered varieties such as ‘Triumph’ and ‘Darwin’, the species tulips are a different story. Species tulips are lower growing (less than 12 inches tall), and the flowers are smaller and less spectacular than their hybridized cousins. However, what they lack in flower stature, they make up for in performance and longevity. Species tulips will bloom for years in your garden with little care. Tulipa saxatilis has stunning lavender-colored flowers with a yellow base. It grows 6 to 8 inches tall and naturalizes readily. Tulipa greigii ‘Red Riding Hood’ features red flowers with striking purple-striped foliage.

Minor Bulbs

The so-called “minor bulbs” are small bulbs that produce small flowers. They are usually planted by the hundreds for a striking visual effect. When allowed to naturalize, these bulbs can create a carpet of color in spring. However, you don’t have to break the bank buying hundreds of these beauties to create an impact. Even 20 or 30 bulbs tightly planted in the right location can be lovely.

Scilla is one of my favorites. This early-blooming bulb looks great planted among deciduous trees or even in the lawn. The flowers appear before grasses and other perennials start growing. When allowed to go to seed, the flower can multiply itself around your property.

Snowdrops are the first harbingers of spring. They bloom so early that these fragrant white flowers often appear poking through the snow. Plant them among perennials that will fill in later once the snowdrops have gone by.

Plant these no-fuss bulbs in a sunny, USDA zone 4 to 8 location. Shade in summer is okay, since these bulbs go dormant by June. Work in a little bulb fertilizer at planting time and keep them watered. Critters such as mice and voles seem less interested in these bulbs than in tulips and crocuses, but if they are a problem, place a handful of crushed oyster, clam, or dried egg shells in the planting holes to deter them.

Siltation and other issues

Last week at the Town Board of Commissioners meeting several significant decisions were made that could have long lasting effects on the community. There had been some misunderstanding regarding the paving of roads around Mirror Lake and the Big Creek arm of Lake Sequoyah and a good discussion occurred between the residents primarily on Hickory Hill Road and the board. Since there is no interest by these folks to give the State Department of Transportation fifty foot right of ways for their road, an alternative way of paving these roads must be taken. This holds true for Cowan and Cullasaja Roads also.

The NCDOT has agreed to turn over these three roadways over to the town and assist us in finding funds to pave each road by our own standards and not the repressive standards of the state of NC. Mountain roads are not like roads in other parts of the state, something the state does not seem to understand. Fifty foot rights of way are simply impossible in already established communities on many mountain roads. This decision to take over these roads means we must find funding from different sources within the state and both local DOT officials and our State Senator John Snow have agreed to assist us in obtaining these contingency funds.

We will have a meeting soon with DOT to decide the method and type of paving and look for help in estimating the cost of this project so we can go for the funding to pave these roads “as they are.” We have cancelled the meeting of September 17 because the Board heard the people loud and clear on this past Wednesday night. I thank the residents for their interest and their civilized approach to any misunderstanding which we all may have had regarding these circumstances and hope to work closely with everyone to resolve this difficult situation. It is absolutely essential that we do these pavings in order to protect the integrity of Big Creek and try to prevent silt collection in both Mirror Lake and Big Creek.

In another key issue the Town Board of Commissioners gave permission for a referendum this fall on serving beer and mixed drinks in our restaurants. Since OEI has been able to serve these beverages because they are classified as “a private club,” to make the playing field level, the other restaurants have expressed the desire to have the ability to do the same. This is an issue that the people of Highlands must themselves have the right to decide and the best way to do that is to hold a referendum in the fall. I am taking no side on this issue other than giving the people the opportunity to make this decision. An open and free discussion will go on amongst everyone and the democratic process will work.

Also this past week an important regional representative of Congressman Heath Shuler was in town to meet with me. His name is Boyce Dietz and he was the coach of the representative when he played high school football in Swan County when they won three state championships. Coach Dietz and I had a great day together as I took him round town and told him of some of our most pressing problems such as Big Creek silting and the paving our town roads. We also went out to the hospital and gave him a tour of that great facility. After this visit I feel sure Congressman Shuler will be supportive of our efforts to improve our community and its water supply.

The 2006 PG rated family/comedy/adventure/special effects film, starring Ben Stiller (Along Came Polly, Star- sky & Hutch, Meet the Parents), and Robin Williams (The Ultimate Gift) Directed by Shawn Levy (Just Married, Cheaper by the Dozen, The Pink Panther). Inspired by a 1993 children's book of the same name by Milan Trenc.

The Storyline: Larry (Ben Stiller) is a nice guy, but not real good at holding a job. So, in order to make things a little more stable for his son, he seeks out a job with regular hours and regular pay, something without to many demands or much stress. What about night watchman at a museum? Can't be much to that, can there be?

Well, generally no, unless everything in the museum comes alive every evening, which apparently happens in more places than you would guess.

Larry gets a brief explanation of his tasks and responsibilities, but the original night watchmen, played by comedians, TV and film legends Dick Van Dyke, Bill Cobbs and Mickey Rooney, neglect to mention that one small but salient point, leaving him to figure that little issue on his own.

Since this is an adventure, there must be a few bad guys in the story, but being a PG film, they are not real bad, and I don't think I am giving away too much of the plot here by revealing that most every thing is good or better at the end.

Really good family movie, a little slow to start as the story is set up, but fast and funny once it gets going, with VERY cool special effects, some computer generated, some by costuming and statuary, at a cost of over $110 million.

One early scene starts as though it may be a little too scary for a PG film, but quickly turns funny and cute so nothing to terrify the toddlers here, and plenty to entertain the big, grown up kids. Owen Wilson's part, originally a small one (literally, his character is about two inches tall), was rewritten and expanded halfway through the filming, after playing it so well.

A bit of trivia.

While filming, Ben Stiller and Owen Wilson only had one day that they saw each other. Stiller talked to a tooth pick for the Jedi-diah scenes, then three months later Wilson came in and filmed all of his parts, the woman in the employment office is Ben Stiller's mother, Anne Meara, and as a bit of a game, there are references to many other films, including Alladin, Breaker Mountain, Mary Poppins, and more.

A few more films of similar tone are Stuart of the Movie Stop, Toy Story, Teen- age Mutant Ninja Turtles, Chronicles of Narnia, and Harry and the Hendersons, all available at Movie Stop Video, come on in and take a look.

repeated passage by the California legislature of a bill to offer drivers licenses to illegal aliens in that state. (So far, the Governor has vetoed such bills.) This has happened despite the fact that California is experiencing the same spike of highway deaths due to illegal aliens on the highways in (often) drunk driving accidents as all other states with significant numbers of illegal aliens.

Not since 1066, when the Norman French conquered England, has a foreign population taken over the whole of an established nation and culture. Yet, exactly that is happening, without warfare and with the apparent cooperation of the U.S. government in the southwest today. The United Race makes no secret of its intentions when talking to its own people, rather than writing lies for public consumption...

Here are the two La Raza websites: The first one is the current, official site which spends much of its space attacking what the late Congressman, Charlie Norwood, said about it. The second is the older, candid website, which demonstrates in spades that what the Congressman said about La Raza, and what is said here, is the plain, unvarnished truth. http://www.ndr.org/ and http://members.tripod.com/~larazau/india.htm

Lighting can make your home...

“We’ve got everything you need to light up your life inside and out. If you don’t see what you want, just ask. There’s a good chance we can order it for you.”

“Ambient light, low-voltage lights, accent lights, spotlights, and special interest lighting are just some of the possibilities.”

Lighting the Exterior of Your Home

Outdoor lighting has long been considered a great way to make the outside of your house more secure, but outdoor lighting is also a great way to add drama and curb appeal to your home. Strategically placed fixtures with state-of-the-art outdoor bulbs create beautiful focal points and highlight areas of interest within your outdoor landscape.

The same principles of layering light that apply to the interior of your home can be translated to the outdoors, according to the lighting experts at GE. Ambient light, which provides overall illumination, includes yard lights and porch lights. Task lighting consists of low-voltage lights along sidewalks and paths—it can even include lights that keep insects at bay. Accent lighting includes spotlights and other forms of special-interest lighting to dramatize water features, outdoor sculptures or art.

Use GE outdoor bulbs for their unique all-weather construction, which is designed to withstand harsh weather conditions. For a full, balanced effect, use a variety of subtle lighting techniques with multiple levels of brightness.

Uplighting is the perfect way to add depth and drama to trees, landscape features and architectural elements. Uplighting is achieved by placing lights at an angle and lighting objects from below. For heavy-duty, all-weather bulbs that will stand the test of time, choose GE halogen floodlights. They produce broad beams of light for creating dramatic effects.

Backlighting creates beautiful silhouettes by placing objects of interest in front of a lit surface. Instead of directly lighting a tree, shrub or a statue, angle the light against a wall or fence behind the object. GE outdoor halogen spotlights are a great choice for this eye-catching effect.

Use accent lighting to enhance the beauty of your home. For a bright, white light that’s long lasting and designed to make your home look its best, try GE halogen postlights.

Security
- Purchase lighting fixtures that are UL-listed and designed for outdoor use.
- Light decks, patios, porches and other outdoor living spaces well, especially steps. These areas can be prime tripping hazards for those unfamiliar with the landscape.
- Use motion-sensing fixtures with GE floodlights and get light only when you need it.
- Check the motion sensor regularly to ensure it isn’t being triggered by moving pets, wildlife, gates, tree limbs or plants.

Conserving Energy
To save on energy costs, select ENERGY STAR-qualified GE Energy Smart Compact Fluorescent Lamps for outdoor use, which are available in a variety of shapes and styles. These lamps use up to 75 percent less energy and last 8 to 10 times longer than ordinary incandescent bulbs. Outdoor timers paired with incandescent or halogen bulbs will also help you save energy by turning the lights off even if you forget to flip the switch. Motion sensors also conserve energy since they are only activated by movement.

To ensure that you are getting the maximum benefit and effect from your outdoor lighting, clean exposed bulbs several times during the season. Dirt and pollen can build up on bulbs, causing a light loss of up to 40 percent.

Hospital’s Cardiac Rehab Program wins national recertification

The cardiac rehabilitation program at Highlands-Cashiers Hospital has once again received national recertification by the American Association of Cardiovascular and Pulmonary Rehabilitation.

One of the few cardiac rehab programs in the region to meet the association's rigorous guidelines, the hospital’s program has been undergoing the lengthy recertification process for the past several months. Hospital officials were notified Tuesday that their efforts had been successful.

"This recertification for the next three years shows that our cardiac rehabilitation program continues to meet the strict criteria and highest standards required to be awarded national certification," said program director Yvonne Smith, MHS, RD, CDE. "I am very proud of our department and our staff in achieving this recertification. It lets the public know that all of us here at the hospital continue to strive to offer quality health care to our communities."

Part of HealthTracks, the hospital’s wellness and fitness department, the cardiac rehab program first obtained national certification by the AACVPR six years ago. It was recertified in 2004. The American Association of Cardiovascular and Pulmonary Rehabilitation is a national, multi-disciplinary association dedicated to the improvement of clinical practice, promotion of scientific inquiry, and advancement of education for the benefit of cardiovascular and pulmonary rehabilitation professionals and the patients they serve. Certification recognizes those programs that are rigorously reviewed by a national board and found to meet the essential requirements for standards of care.

To be considered for recertification, the hospital’s program had to undergo an extensive, detailed survey, said Smith. All areas of the program were scrutinized, including equipment, staffing, monitoring procedures, and patient outcomes.

Since the hospital began its own cardiac rehabilitation program in 1994, it has helped hundreds of patients recover from heart attacks and cardiac surgery, and aided others in managing chronic cardiovascular disease. The goal of the program is to allow patients to recover as much quality of life as possible and to reduce the risk of recurrence of their illness.

Local cardiologist Carl M. Curtis, MD, FACC, who only took over as medical director of the cardiac rehab program last fall, says the hospital should be proud of the program.

"I’m impressed with the cardiac program that Yvonne and her team have here. It’s one of the best I’ve seen, even when compared to many large hospitals,” said Curtis.

In addition to cardiac rehabilitation, HealthTracks also offers a variety of fitness and exercise programs aimed at the general public. Among the offerings are monitored and independent exercise programs for otherwise healthy individuals, stretching and balance programs, personal training, weight loss classes, yoga, Pilates, and tobacco cessation programs.

HealthTracks is located on the lower level of the Jane Woodruff Medical Building, on the hospital campus.

More than a dozen citizens spoke about the bond – some for, some against – concerning mostly the school expansion, recreation facility and the senior center renovations.

John Cleaveland of Highlands, spoke against the school and recreation facilities portion of the bond, in particular. Of the $64 million, $42.1 million is for schools and $9.4 million is for the new recreation facility on Siler Road.

“I question if the amount of $9.4 million is enough to build and operate the recreational facility you want,” he said. "I don’t see how you can operate a larger facility than the one in Waynesville with less people than they have." He said Macon County is a great county but commissioners have to be careful not to tax the people to death.

"We should pay as we go instead of going into debt," he said. "I know you have a hard job ahead of you but consider the cost and consider who will be paying for this.”

He said historically in Macon County don’t value education and obviously there is a parent problem as well,” he said. "You’re trying to provide facilities which won’t help the mind of one child. The best we can give them is something for their minds not something to sit their innings on."

He said everyone wants the things the bond referendum will fund, and they would be nice to have. “But where does it stop?” he asked.

Most everyone who spoke to the recreation part of the bond focused on the swimming component.

All the students on swim teams from Franklin High School, Macon Middle School and the county’s amateur league spoke in favor of the recreation facility urging everyone to vote “yes.” They said their teams suffer at competitions simply because members can’t practice year-round like the teams from other schools.

They and their coaches spoke of the grind of traveling to Asheville YMCA and to Western Carolina University to use indoor swimming pools, because swimming pools in the county are outdoor which close when the weather turns.

Franklin High School swimming coach Dwayne Picon said his team performs well, but can’t out-perform those who can swim year-round and the county’s dollars spent could affect the future of its students. “Think of the scholarships we’re giving up,” he said.

Bill Crawford, a retired school teacher, a school bus driver and a participant in the county’s senior games, was against the recreation center.

“There isn’t much demand for racquet ball, inflatable domes over area outdoor pools would solve the pool problem and county-funded facilities that replace private programs is just a bad idea,” he said. "There are several private enterprises in Franklin that will be threatened by the county’s facility."

Speaking to that were the Barbara and Ed Morris, owners of the Franklin Health and Fitness Center. They said they support

East Franklin achieved 12 out of 13 of their targeted areas under the federal accountability model. The target area for improvement is mathematics among economically disadvantaged students is:

• Mathematics - Economically Disadvantaged (students receiving free or reduced lunch) students.

No Child Left Behind is an all or none accountability model with increasing performance requirements year after year until all students are performing at or above grade level. We have until 2012-13 to have all students proficient in all academic cells and subgroups.

As required by federal law, school choice must be offered when schools fail to meet all annual targets for two consecutive years. At East Franklin and Macon Middle school, we have expedited parent notification of these results as required by federal law. In response to the results, parents and guardians must be informed about school choice requirements and options for school choice in Macon County.

For students at East Franklin Elementary School, school choice has been expedited for attendance at Cowee Elementary School or Iotla Elementary School. Students who attend Macon Middle School may choose to attend Nantahala School as we satisfy this federal requirement. The staff and administration at East Franklin Elementary School have established goals and strategies for the area of improvement identified under NCLB.

Macon Middle School is also striving for continuous improvement with focused interventions to address all areas of performance that did not make the federal accountability standards.

For more details about the No Child Left Behind legislation, go to the following website: www.nochildleftbehind.gov.

The annual report reflected a decrease in the percentage of schools that met requirements of the federal No Child Left Behind law.

In 2006-07, 44.7 percent of North Carolina schools met federal standards, down from 45.2 percent the prior year. Schools are evaluated on the performance of students in various subgroups based on race, ethnicity, income and disability.

For a school to pass, all subgroups must meet its targeted goals. Across the state 91 schools received the designation of School of Excellence compared with 69 in 2005-06. This recognition is earned by schools where at least 90 percent of the scores are passing and students meet expectations for academic growth.

Schools where at least 80 percent of the scores are passing and students meet growth expectations are designated as Schools of Distinction; the number of which also rose statewide from 305 to 462.

Under the North Carolina ABCs, one school in Macon County made high growth in the 2006-07 school year. We commend the staff, students, parents, and administration at Highlands School for its outstanding achievement.

The following seven schools met expected growth: Cartoogechaye Elementary School, Cowee Elementary School; Cullasaja Elementary School, Franklin High School, Iotla Elementary School, and Nantahala School.

Each of these schools is to be commended for their efforts and for meeting expected state performance standards for the NC ABCs accountability model. Four of our schools, East Franklin Elementary School, South Macon Elementary School, Macon Early College, and Macon Middle School did not meet expected growth and have developed action plans to address the areas of improvement within these schools.

For more information regarding our district and each school's performance on the North Carolina ABCs accountability model, please visit www.ncpublicschools.org. Final results for the 2006-07 academic year have not been posted and will be added to the web site once the state finalizes all results sometime after October 15, 2007.

Effectively meeting the standards of two rigorous accountability models will require high expectations for all students, teachers, and parents as we meet the needs of a more diverse student population throughout Macon County.

We are excited about the changes that have already occurred to address our areas for improvement and anticipate each will have a tremendous impact on teaching and learning. Thank you to each parent, guardian, volunteer, and community member for your ongoing support and efforts to make each school a great place for teaching and learning.

Oliver thought that the dental clinic could be open in approximately two weeks. "We want to see people who are in pain, and eliminate dental illness," he said. As soon as a secretary is hired and the rest of the office equipment and furnishings are in place Oliver hopes to begin calling patients currently on a call list and start getting them in.

Anne Hyder, Assistant Health Director, added that the seniors at Britthaven "are in tremendous need of these services." However, many are not ambulatory and this could pose a problem while the Molar Roller is still out of commission.

effects of the alternatives, including the effects on aesthetic values (solitude, remoteness, wildness, political, etc.) and social values (encounters, user conflicts, interference with activities such as angling, bird watching, wildlife viewing, the rights of others to solitude, etc.).

The North Fork’s recreational Outstandingly Remarkable Values (ORV) includes aesthetic and social values in a foot travel only backcountry setting.

Woody debris
• Limited woody debris removal is allowed in Alternatives 4, 5 & 6. This is a standard that can result in biophysical degradation in Wilderness and wild segments of the North Fork and its tributaries. ecological importance: Large woody debris (LWD) has incredible ecological importance in river systems. A variety of aquatic species depends on natural accumulations of trees, branches, and root wads known as LWD. For decades a few insensitive but otherwise skilled boaters have made a practice of removing the LWD that hinders their passage in headwater streams, such as the Chattooga’s West Fork / Overflow Creek headwaters. Alternatives 4, 5 & 6 add boating recreation.

Compliance with the Wilderness Act: There is no credible evidence that adding boating recreation to the North Fork will protect and enhance its backcountry ORVs of solitude and remoteness for present and future generations as required by the Act.

Compliance with the Decision for Appeal: Diverse whitewater boating opportunities exist on 63% of the length of the Chattooga and all other streams on all surrounding National Forests. However, the North Fork is the only segment of a backcountry Forest Service stream in the southeast zoned for foot travel only, a unique resource deserving of protection for present and future generations. There is absolutely nothing in the Wilderness Act and/or the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act that says all activities must be permitted in all segments of the river.

Stewardship: Zoning ensures that different types of users are physically separated. Zoning of conflicting activities is good stewardship. Stewardship encompasses far more than picking up litter; it includes the protection of the aesthetic values of natural resources such as remoteness and wildness, the proper regard for the rights of others to solitude, and the responsibility of preserving these values intact for future generations.

Alternatives #1, #2, and #3 do exactly that. Some elements of Alternatives 2 or 3 would be beneficial, but alternatives 4, 5 and 6 will have adverse impacts on the North Fork’s recreational Outstandingly Remarkable Values (ORV) includes aesthetic and social values. Alternative #3 or a blended strategy incorporating portions of Alternatives 1, 2 and 3 appear to provide the best long term protection for the North Fork.

The following are brief descriptions of the 6 management alternatives:
• Alternative #1: Maintain Current Management, foot travel only. No boating above the Highway 28 Bridge.
• Alternative #2: Primary objective is to manage encounters among existing users; foot travel only. No boating above the Highway 28 Bridge.
• Alternative #3: Primary objective is to manage biophysical impacts on natural resources; foot travel only. Emphasis is on trail and campsite mitigation. No boating above the Highway 28 Bridge.
• Alternative #4: Primary objectives are to manage biophysical impacts on natural resources and encounters between users. Emphasis is on trail and campsite mitigation. Limited woody debris removal allowed. Year-round any level boating on USFS lands upstream of Bull Pen Bridge and limited boating in the wilderness to ½ mile above Burrell’s Ford Bridge (4 winter months & 2.4 ft level and higher). Alternatives 2 or 3 would be beneficial, but alternatives 4, 5 and 6 will have adverse impacts on the North Fork’s recreational Outstandingly Remarkable Values (ORV) includes aesthetic and social values. Alternative #3 or a blended strategy incorporating portions of Alternatives 1, 2 and 3 appear to provide the best long term protection for the North Fork.
• Alternative #5: Primary objectives are to manage biophysical impacts on natural resources and encounters between users. Emphasis is on trail and campsite mitigation. Limited woody debris removal allowed. Boating allowed between Grimshawes Bridge and Lick Log Creek (year-round at 2.3 ft level or higher).
• Alternative #6: Primary objectives are to manage biophysical impacts on natural resources and encounters between users. Emphasis is on trail and campsite mitigation. Unlimited boating allowed on entire river and tributaries upstream of Highway 28 Bridge (year-round, any time, any water level, any number of floats per day). For more details of these alternatives and a side-by-side comparison table, go to: http://www.fs.fed.us/r8/fms/documents/Chattoogascopingpackagefinal08142007.pdf
For more background, go to: http://www.fs.fed.us/r8/fms/
Even if people have commented previously, still take time to share views specifically on these six alternatives.

Boating on the lower Chattooga has displaced other visitors wishing to avoid conflicts and interference while seeking solitude and quietness. Some people sought sanctuary on the North Fork. Have you experienced user conflict or interference from whitewater boating on a mountain trout stream? Is it worse now than it was 20 years ago? What’s it going to be like in another 20 years? Do we need more stream sections zoned like the North Fork of the Upper Chattooga, for “foot travel only”? Help protect for present and future generations the only section of the Chattooga not damaged by allowing access for too many user groups.

Comment on the preliminary management alternatives, urging the Forest Service to protect and enhance the unique ORVs, which caused the North Fork to be designated a National Wild and Scenic River.

For one Highlands family, funding the covered bridge entrance at the Bascom-Louise Gallery's new fine arts center means more than just the chance to see something beautiful and historic mark the town they so love. It's about connections: between the old and the new, between Highlands and New Orleans, between the community and the new art center, and between the art world and Will Henry Stevens.

The 19th century bridge was originally constructed in 1807 in Warner, New Hampshire. In 1966, the crumbling bridge was disassembled and purchased from the Town of Warner for $1 by the Graton family, and it has been stored in a New Hampshire barn ever since. But now, thanks to Dorothy and Jimmy Coleman and Dian and Tom Winingder, that bridge will be coming to Highlands to serve as the signature entry feature of the new fine arts center. The bridge will be reassembled over the entrance creek as the Will Henry Stevens Bridge in honor of the New Orleans Academy of Fine Arts, which Dorothy Coleman helped found.

For the Winingder-Coleman family, the bridge has come to represent something very personal and significant. And that is why they have chosen to make its presence in Highlands possible.

Dian Winingder is Dorothy Coleman's daughter. The family has been coming to Highlands for many years; in fact, the Colemans honeymooned in Highlands 68 years ago when they first married, and now the family has a second home here.

Winingder said that when she heard about the new fine arts center, she immediately wanted to do something to help. And it seemed appropriate to do something with art, to honor her mother and what she has done.

"I went to my mother and father and told them of my interest," Winingder said. "I was interested in the bridge. I kept getting drawn to it. It was something that captured my heart in connecting us with New Orleans to Highlands, the New Orleans Academy of Fine Arts to the fine art center here — and the bridge kept haunting me as the amazing way to make this connection. My mother immediately said to me, 'It must be the Will Henry Stevens Bridge.'"

With that, the plan was set.

It is important to the Winingder-Coleman family that Will Henry Stevens be honored. Stevens (1881-1949) was an abstract modernist Southern painter who taught for many years at Newcomb College in New Orleans. He was also Dorothy Coleman's teacher and mentor, and he had a profound impact not only on Coleman's own artistic creations, but on her life, as well.

Stevens was caught between the Depression and World War Two, a time when many people were not collecting art. Still, he kept painting, and that is why, today, so much of his work is still available. The Bascom-Louise Gallery has four of Stevens' paintings.

"He painted beautiful abstracts," Winingder said of Stevens, whose work often features glorious landscapes depicting nature in her finery, lit with vivid, vibrant colors. "He would condense the essence of what he saw. It is a very different style from modern abstracts. He was very influenced...

Highlands’ stars to shine at PAC
‘Star Night’ performance Saturday

Highlands’ version of American Idol and America’s Got Talent takes place Saturday night at the Martin Lipscomb Performing Arts Center (PAC) on Chestnut Street.

‘Star Night’ is a showcase of area talent. Performers will vie for prize money. $200.00 will be awarded to the Best Student performer, the Best Non-Student performer and for the Best Over-All.

A student will be regarded as those performers age 18 and under. A Non-Student performer will be those over the age of 18.

As in American Idol and America’s Got Talent there will be judges similar to the irascible Simon Cowell, the lovely Paula Abdul and likeable David Hasselhoff. However…critiques will not be given!!

Acts include tenors, singers, storytellers, acting, a magic act, a harpist and singer and guitar pickin’ and singin’!

‘Star Night’ begins at 7:30 p.m. at PAC. Tickets are $10 and are available at the door.

But, during the day come and tour the new renovations at PAC and enjoy a complimentary Bar-B-Que lunch (served by the Highlands School Cheerleaders).

The renovations include a new freight elevator, expanded backstage area, new dressing rooms and a backstage restroom, and expanded downstairs reception area. Come see what goes on in PAC! The tours and lunch begin at 11:30 a.m. and continue until 1:30 p.m. The day’s events are sponsored by Summit One Gallery.

Participants in the talent show are:

- Michelle Hott: singing – Christian Contemporary
- Virginia Talbot and Dean Zuch – Old Time Radio Show
- Austin Vinson, Kalyn Billingsley, & Skier Billingsley – Magic Act
- Ann Doggett – Storyteller
- Keith Hardy – Singer “To Where You Are” by Josh Groban
- Jessica Bryant – singer
- Buddy Mix – Singer/Tenor
- Jim Gordon – Singin’ & pickin’…guitar
- Matt McClellan – Singer/songwriter. Wrote & will sing “Born”
- Johnathon & Margaret McAllister – Margaret wrote a piece which her brother, Johnathon will sing as she accompanies him on the harp. She takes lessons from Valerie Whitcup.

Coleman and Winingder families, with long ties to the tradition of art in Highlands and in New Orleans, have made this donation in honor of this important New Orleans and Highlands artist,” Fisher said. “Making the donation in honor of the New Orleans Academy of Fine Arts also creates an important tie between the Bascom-Louise Gallery and that facility. One of our important assets in the Highlands-Cashiers area is wonderful people like the Winingders and the Colemans who are deeply involved in the visual art institutions across the Southeast, and we have an opportunity to develop relationships with these sister institutions that will help us in our mission and also help these other institutions to expose themselves to the important populations that visit Highlands seasonally.”

The bridge is slated to be reassembled in Highlands this fall by Arnold Milton Gratton, a fourth-generation bridge writer and the son of the very man who bought and moved the bridge and for the Best Over-All.

The bridge is slated to be reassembled in Highlands this fall by Arnold Milton Gratton, a fourth-generation bridge writer and the son of the very man who bought and moved the bridge and for the Best Over-All.

“Making the donation in honor of this important New Orleans and Highlands artist,” Fisher said. “Making the donation in honor of the New Orleans Academy of Fine Arts also creates an important tie between the Bascom-Louise Gallery and that facility. One of our important assets in the Highlands-Cashiers area is wonderful people like the Winingders and the Colemans who are deeply involved in the visual art institutions across the Southeast, and we have an opportunity to develop relationships with these sister institutions that will help us in our mission and also help these other institutions to expose themselves to the important populations that visit Highlands seasonally.”
Highlands Community Players lines up four productions for season

The play itself centers on three generations of a mountain family faced with the difficult decision of how best to care for their aging grandmother. In flashback scenes narrated by her grandson, we learn of past joys and sorrows of Agnes's life.

The bittersweet tale is softened with humor and love, and sensitively depicts the characters and the mountain culture in which they live. Oct. 18-21 and Oct. 25-28.

Lend me a Tenor by Ken Ludwig and directed by Annette Coleman is a clever and wildly entertaining contemporary comedy in which confusion, mistaken identity, innuendo and slapstick are key elements. Set in Cleveland, Ohio, the Cleveland Grand Opera is celebrating its biggest night in history. World famous Tito Merelli is scheduled to sing the lead in OTELLO, produced as a gala fundraiser. Chaos sets in when a "Dear John" letter is mistaken for a suicide note and Tito's appearance seems unlikely. But for the GM of the Opera, "the show must go on!" But how? How? Feb. 28 & 29, March 1,2,7, 8, 9, 2008.

The Last Night of Ballyhoo by Alfred Uhry and directed by Mary Adair Leslie, winner of the 1997 Tony Award for Best Play takes place in Atlanta, in December 1939. Gone With the Wind is having its world premiere and Hitler is invading Poland, but Atlanta's elitist German Jews are much more concerned with who is going to Ballyhoo, the social event of the season; a last chance for the dreamy and unpopular Lala to find a socially acceptable husband. The Freitag family gets pulled apart and then mended together with plenty of comedy, romance and revelations along the way. May 8-11 and May 15-18, 2008.

A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, music and lyrics by Stephen Sondheim, book written by Burt Shevelove and Larry Gilbert, and directed by Ronnie Spilton. This hysterically funny Sondheim classic is filled with unforgettable characters and wonderful light-hearted, satirical and melodious songs. Set in ancient Rome, the plot involves a young man of respectable family who falls in love with a beautiful young virgin. The slave Psuedolus (the role originally played by Zero Mostel) is promised his freedom if he can acquire the virgin for his lovesick master. Thus ensures the riotous romp promised by the opening number "Comedy Tonight"— old situations, new complications, this time it all turns out all right.

HCP also announces with the beginning of the 2007-2008 season the acceptance of MC/VISA for donations and ticket purchases. Season subscriptions are $55.00. Four plays for the price of one. All performances are in the Martin Lipscomb Performing Arts Center, Chestnut Street. Evening performances: 7:30 pm, Sunday matinees: 2:30 pm.

For more information please call: 828-526-8084

When the husband does these things for his wife and the wife submits to her husband they show those who are watching the glory of God’s plan for this world and its people. It is a beautiful picture of peace and harmony that reflects the life in heaven all who hear and believe this gospel message shall have.

Wives don’t forsake the place of honor God has given you. Husbands do not mistreat the most precious gift you have been given. Seek his grace and live your lives in the way he calls you to live them that the world around you may see the joy and blessing that obedience can bring.

This year’s 15th Anniversary Bel Canto Recital will be hard to beat. Opera singers Stella Zambalis, Phyllis Pancella, Mark Thomsen and Kelly Anderson and pianist Stephen Dubberly brought the audience of 200 to its feet numerous times.

The cast quickly followed Mark Thomsen’s lead and engaged the audience like never before. After Thomsen ventured into the audience, sat on the edge of the stage and borrowed personal items to enhance his performance, the rest followed suit which blew the performance wide open. Opera with this type of comraderie has never been performed like this before – at least not in Highlands.

At intermission, Bob Fisher, director of the Bascom-Louise Fine Art Center board, Kay Goreki, artistic director of the center and Stell Huie, incoming director of the Bel Canto board, thanked outgoing Bel Canto director of 15 years, Richard Joel.

Joel was given a bouquet of flowers and informed that an exhibit room at the new gallery will be named for him where his portrait which will be painted by Julian Davis will hang forever.

Joel brought Bel Canto to Highlands and has been responsible for luring world-class opera performers to the performance year after year.

Proceeds from the concert go to the Bascom-Louise Gallery’s permanent collection and to the Highlands School music program.

“Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord.”

Colossians 3:18.

The women's lib movement has done a lot for women. It has caused many to seek a divorce that left them in poverty. It has given them sexual freedom that left many married with an incurable venereal disease. It has given them a false sense of self-esteem and self-love that has led many into murder through abortion. This is not what God intended for women when He created them.

God made woman to be the crown of a man's life. (Proverbs 12:4). She was created to be his helpmate and companion. She was not to be a second class citizen but the first concern in his wife's life. He was to esteem her above all else and to honor her as the greatest gift God could give him apart from eternal life.

The woman was given instructions also. The command was to submit to her husband. She was to follow his lead and give him respect. God did not give her this role because of her inability to make decisions or understand life. She is quite good at both, but he is a God of order and He created man as the leader of the family, leading, not as a dictator, but as a shepherd.

Have you ever tried to drive sheep? It is a difficult thing to do; sheep are much easier to lead. A shepherd knows his sheep and they respond to his voice and follow him. They will run away from the stranger. The family should be the same way. First, the husband must be an example as one led himself by Christ and following Christ's voice. God made the husband/father the shepherd/leader and his wife and children should know his voice and follow him.

God made the woman for this purpose to help the shepherd lead his family. She is to submit to him as the shepherd of her family, just as she submits to the Lord in her Christian walk. Pastor talks about how this is what made the women of old beautiful.

Don't believe the lie of women's lib. Hear God's Word and adorn yourselves with the beauty of the heart, that your husbands will look upon you as the most beautiful part of God's creation. "For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh. This is a great mystery; but I speak concerning Christ and the church. Nevertheless let every one of you in particular love his wife even as himself, and the wife see that she reverence her husband” Ephesians 5:31-33.

This is a picture of what this world is like. The believer is to submit unto his Lord and Maker. The Lord is...

active lifestyles and sports for students but suggested the county spend money on memberships to their center, or on domes and heaters for outdoor pools instead.

The Morris family suggested the county was building the swimming components of the new recreation facility mainly for student swimmers. “You’re talking about 150 swimmers; that’s .006 of the Macon County population. I understand everyone wants a new facility, but it’s a question of the logistics of building and operating the complex,” said Barbara Morris.

Senior citizens have also expressed interest in being able to swim year-round but Morris said the pool water temperature for seniors is 88 degrees and 81 for students.

“It takes days to alter the temperature,” she said.

Her husband Ed questioned the cost to build the center. He said the original cost at $87 per sq. ft. was questionable and now, according to a draft of a brochure produced by the Recreation Committee, that figure as been decreased to $54.22 sq. ft. “That doesn’t include grading or finishing. There’s no way you can build it for that amount of money,” he said. “I suggest you take a good look at these figures.”

He noted saying the Franklin Health and Fitness Center stands to lose members if the county’s facility opens. “If we lose 50 members, we can’t pay our bills,” he said. “You need to put this in perspective. It’s going to be a private facility competing with a public facility catering to 150 students.”

He said for $75,000 the county could buy every student a membership at Franklin Health and Fitness and students could swim year round.

The last person to speak specifically about the Recreation Bond was Mark Wadewitz, chief medical officer at Angel Medical Center.

“Angel Medical Center will lend its support in the creation of a state-of-the-art facility,” he said. “All studies indicate that a sedentary lifestyle leads to various health problems including obesity, high blood pressure, and diabetes. Medicine can help but proper diet and exercise can oftentimes do away with the need to take medicine. The staff at Angel sees the results of such lifestyles which cost the county money due to uncompensated care, high insurance rates, and the loss of productivity in the workplace.”

He said it’s more important than ever for Macon County to have a facility with activities and a comprehensive water sports program.

People also urged the commissioners to move forward with renovating and expanding the senior center near Walmart. Renovations for that building would come out of the $6.5 million authorized for Public Buildings Bonds.

Money from the bond will go toward expansion and the addition of bathrooms and a laundry room. “The number of people it serves has grown so the facility isn’t adequate anymore,” said Janet Holt who retired from the center and returned to volunteer.

Susan Norton, whose mother and now mother-in-law use the center, said the fact that the center serves more people translates to more activities and more space so expansion is needed. “I’m not afraid to pay my share of taxes for services needed,” she said.

Commissioner Chairman Charlie Leatherman thanked the citizens for being interested enough to become involved and to take the time to learn what the bond and its issues are all about.

The five bond questions on the ballot will be yes or no for $42.1 million for schools; $6.5 million for public buildings; $3 million for community colleges; $9.4 million for recreation facilities; and $3 million for a Highl- lands library.

— Kim Lewicki

Highlander John Cleaveland was one of a dozen or so people who spoke about the upcoming bond referendum at the public hearing, Monday night prior to the Macon County Commission meeting.

Century 21 Mountain Lifestyles names top producers; announces new agent

The following agents were top producers for their office during the month of August:

In Cashiers the top listing agents were Sharon Dalton and Diane Stumm and the top sales agent was Elizabeth Matej, broker associate. Matej was also awarded the Bronze Producer award for her production in 2006. Bob Shipp was recognized as the “Rookie of the Year” for his office in 2006.

In the Highlands office, the top sales agent was Bob Shipp, broker associate. Century 21 Mountain Lifestyles welcomes new agent Eddie Palmer.

Century 21 Mountain Lifestyles is pleased to announce the following agent has joined its firm as a sales associate specializing in residential sales:

Eddie Palmer in the Cashiers Office.

Originally from Murphy, NC, Eddie previously taught math at Cherokee High School, worked as the Postmaster in Tuckasegee, and served in the U.S. Army. He received his B.S. in Math Education from Western Carolina University and enjoys hunting, fishing and gardening.

Century 21 Mountain Lifestyles is comprised of six Broker/Owners and over 150 agents located in nine offices in Buncombe, Henderson, Jackson, Macon and Transylvania counties. Century 21 Mountain Lifestyles is the number one Century 21® firm in North Carolina and is ranked in the top 50 Century 21® firms nationwide.

The company website, www.c21mountainlifestyles.com, receives over two million home views monthly. (A “home view” is the thumbnail picture and information on a home that is presented on a page when a property search is done.)

Buyers can search almost any property in multiple MLS systems, taking advantage of Free Home Updates that give buyers an automatic email notice as soon as new properties fitting their search criteria are listed in MLS. Exclusive to this website are four area web videos, featuring Cashiers/Highlands, Brevard, Hendersonville and Asheville.

THE SETUP:
The cube has 27 consecutive numbers in it, arranged in three layers with 9 numbers each. These numbers are arranged in a special pattern: For each layer, the sum of the three numbers in each row, column or diagonal, is 3 times its center number. Eight diagonals connect all 3 layers by running through the center number of the middle layer. Each diagonal contains 3 numbers equaling the total of the three center numbers. One of the diagonals is shown with circles.

THE CHALLENGE:
Start with the three center numbers for each layer and the other numbers given. Now pour a cup of coffee, pick up a pencil and eraser and try to figure out where the other numbers belong. Good Luck!

The first correct solution emailed earns a coupon for a FREE cup of coffee from Buck’s Coffee Cafe on Main Street.
