PB hammers out parking regulations

At a special meeting Monday, Feb. 11, the Planning Board solidified a proposed amendment to the town's parking ordinance.

Town Planner Joe Cooley presented draft amendments to the ordinance for two scenarios – Credit of On-Street Parking or Public Parking Lots and Credit for Dual-Use Parking.

Because setting up Dual-Use Parking contracts between two private entities and the town would involve a lot of work and require the services of a certified traffic engineer whose report could take up to a year to compile, Planning Board members focused on businesses sharing public parking instead.

At two previous meetings, both at the Town Board and last month's Planning Board, Cooley

Jury awards Northland damages

HCG says it will appeal

After hearing five days of testimony and arguments in Northland Cable TV versus Highlands Cable Group LP (HCG) in Macon County civil court last week, a jury ruled in favor of Northland Cable.

The jury ruled that the plaintiff, Northland Cable was entitled to recover $379,376 in damages due to trespassing by HCG on Northland's property. "Property" is considered the space on poles Northland is entitled to occupy as per its pole attachment agreement with Duke Power, as well as its "physical" lines and other equipment.

The jury was asked to rule on two questions – what amount of damages the plaintiff was entitled and whether Northland trespassed on HCG property. The jury ruled Northland didn't trespass.

Prior to the jury's verdict, HCG attorney Zeke Sossomon, of Highlands, objected to the questions put to the jury prior to entering the jury room.

He argued that Northland's request for an injunction to stop further interfering by HCG had been granted so damages shouldn't come into the scenario. Judge Dennis Winner said the injunction had nothing to do with repair costs Northland will incur when it repairs damage to its property.

Sossomon also said there is

School facilities plan attacked at MC Commission meeting

During the public session portion of Monday's Macon County Commission meeting, commissioners learned of the formation of a new grassroots organization called "Citizens for Community Schools and Quality Education."

Guy Gooder, founder of the organization, said the purpose will be to investigate the need to close and expand area schools.

"In keeping with the Macon County School Board's interest in building partnerships with stakeholders in the school system, all community members are invited to join in expressing their views about the future of our schools," reads the flyer he distributed. "All of us want the best education for

TDCs to dole out room tax proceeds

The county commission accepted the Occupancy Tax Committee's recommendation Monday night, but acknowledged there is still work to do.

"I think we should accept these recommendations in concept but we still need to discuss how to form the Tourism Development Commissions (TDCs)," said Commissioner Brian McClellan.

Commissioner Bob Simpson, who chaired the Occupancy Tax Committee with McClellan, said there were a lot of legal issues County Attorney Lesley Moxley must also address.

Occupancy Tax Committee member Mike Gruberman, Franklin town planner, represented the committee and presented its recommendations to the board.

As of July 1, 2008, three separate TDCs representing Highlands, Franklin and Nantahala, respectively, will be the agencies through which occupancy tax proceeds will be disbursed.

Currently, the chambers of commerce in Highlands and Franklin receive all the money.

"That will change," said Commissioner Simpson. "No longer will the chambers of commerce be responsible for the money," he said. "Now the chambers and anyone else promoting tourism can go to the TDCs for money."

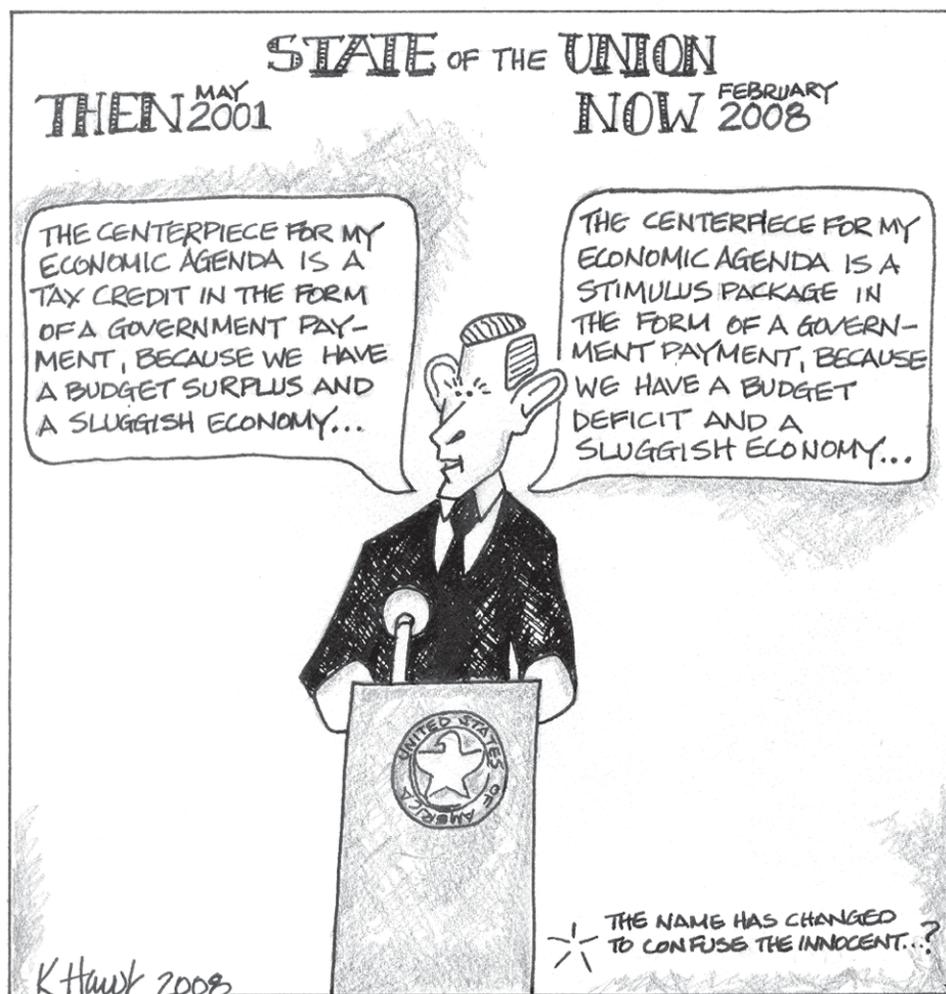

Gruberman said the committee agreed that local control, in

Shuler solution not sensible

Dear Editor,

We The International Friendship Center writes to voice our strong concerns with H.R. 4088 and S. 2368, the Secure America through Verification and Enforcement Act ("SAVE" Act). However, The International Friendship Center advocates for sensible reform of our nation's immigration laws to better serve both the economic and national security needs of the United States.

This legislation, introduced by Representative Heath Shuler and others, does not provide the appropriate framework. We support enforcement and a fast, accurate and reliable employment verification system within the context of comprehensive immigration reform.

Representative Shuler's recent mailing states his position on increased enforcement and expanded employee verification without mentioning the full impact this law would have on local businesses.

The status quo is clearly unacceptable, exposing employers to unfair liability and worker shortages under a dysfunctional system and a growing patchwork of state and local laws. The SAVE Act addresses only the enforcement side of the immigration equation and, with respect to work-site enforcement provisions, we have serious concerns including:

- Immediate addition of at least one million employers and about a third of the workforce into the Basic Pilot/E-Verify program no later than one year after enactment (this includes federal contractors, federal agencies, and employers with over 250 employees), without any testing or revamping of the program.
- Re-verification of entire existing workforce within four years of enactment, which will be an enormous administrative burden on employers and employees. These employees have already been found to be authorized to work under current law.
- A new requirement that the Social Security Administration (SSA) must issue a "no match" letter to every employer with one or more employees that have provided information which does not correspond with information in the SSA database. Upon receipt of an SSA no-match letter, employees only have 10 business days to resolve issues before the employer must terminate the worker — even the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) final rule gave 90 days after receipt to correct a problem. This provision presumes the employee guilty before innocent despite the well-known inaccuracies that have been documented in the SSA database, and the common reasons for a no-match letter such as a typo, name change, or mistake.
- There are no benchmarking provisions to ensure that DHS and SSA assess the accuracy of their databases and correct problems before or even during the rollout out of the program.
- There is no timeframe given for DHS to give a final non-confirmation/confirmation.

Church demolition and construction to take up 25 parking spots this year

Very soon 25 parking spaces on Church and Fifth streets will be blocked to traffic for about 12 months.

At the Feb. 6 Town Board meeting, commissioners quickly OK'd McCarroll Construction's request to fence off parking spots adjacent to the First Presbyterian Church property on Church and Fifth streets for staging and safety purposes.

Crews are about to demolish the old Fellowship Hall and will build a new building in its place.

Terry Davis, with McCarroll, said a chain-link fence will be erected around the site along the parking areas.

He said over the course of a year and depending on the construction stages, 5-30 workers will be on site. "We hope any out-of-town workers will come in one vehicle but we plan on using as many local workers as we can," he said.

He said he expects the construction workers to park within the blocked off areas with overflow parking on Pine Street.

He also asked permission for a construction trailer to be housed on several of the spots. There was no mention for the need of a temporary encroachment right-of-way permit from the town.

Commissioners Dennis DeWolf and Hank Ross admitted to being architects on the project and Mayor Don Mullen is the associate pastor of First Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Carlton Cuyler Hunt

Dr. Carlton Cuyler Hunt, died in Highlands, on February 8, 2008 at the age of 89. Born in Waterbury, Connecticut, the son of Adele and Carlton Hunt, he was educated at Columbia University and received his M.D. from Cornell University Medical College in 1942. After completing an internship in medicine at New York Hospital, Dr. Hunt served three years during W.W.II as an army medical officer in Europe. On returning to New York in 1946, he continued his medical training and then entered the field of medical research. After a fellowship at John Hopkins, he was invited to join the Rockefeller Institute in 1952. Three years later, Dr. Hunt was appointed professor of physiology at the Albert Einstein School of Medicine.

In 1957, he became head of Physiology at the University of Utah where he attracted an outstanding faculty of young scientists. Seven years later, he accepted the chair of physiology at the Yale School of Medicine. In 1967, he became head of the Department of Physiology at Washington University and served in that position for 16 years. More than a dozen of his recruits later became department chairmen in their own right.

Dr. Hunt's major research contributions were the first clear demonstration of the motor innervation of muscle spindles and subsequent studies on the spinal cord and the motor and sensory innervation of muscle. On retiring as department head in 1983, he spent four years doing research in Paris at the College de France. He was professor emeritus of physiology at the University of North Carolina and a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Dr. Hunt is survived by sons Carl, Steve (Jeanne), and Marc (Carrie); wife Marion, son Nicholas (Lisa) and daughter Amanda; six grandchildren, Frances, Dana, Rebekah, John, James, and Emily; and two great-grandchildren, Elyse and Ava.

Services will be held at the Church of the Incarnation in Highlands, N.C. on Feb. 16 at 2 p.m. Bryant-Grant Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Summer of 1962:

Prior to Dade County taking over many municipal functions, my police department had its own jail facility on the third floor of the police building. Inmates were mostly vagrants, drunks and petty thieves because felons were shipped to county jail. Officers too old for the street or those who were being punished for minor misconduct, along with volunteer officers, were assigned to work in the jail.

Darryl Jenkins was a not so bright officer who was always in trouble. He was working the midnight shift in the jail and fell asleep at his desk around 5 a.m. One of the jail's trustees swiped the jail keys from his desk and opened all the cells, releasing 22 prisoners. They quietly snuck down the fire escape and ole Darryl never woke up until the morning sun shown in his eyes.

You can imagine his surprise when he found every jail cell open and not a prisoner in sight. He looked at his watch and knew civilian employees would be delivering breakfast at any moment. Darryl raced down the hallway to the fire extinguisher and unscrewed the large brass nozzle from the fire hose. He grabbed a spare set of keys from his desk drawer and ran into an open jail cell, locking himself in. Then he threw the jail keys down the hallway and started hitting himself over the head with the fire nozzle, drawing blood. (Could I make this up?) Then he threw the nozzle down the hall just as the elevator door opened and breakfast arrived. Darryl dropped to the floor and pretended to be unconscious.

It would have all worked with everyone feeling sorry for Darryl being overpowered by the trustees except when we began to round up the 22 prisoners, they all told the exact same story. How do I know all the details of this event? Ole dumb Darryl confessed.

On going: I am an usher for Our Lady of the Mountains Catholic Church and, as part of my duties, I take the collection baskets to the church office. Sometimes the office door is locked and

I can't get in. I have been instructed to hide the money in the church's kitchen freezer but I hate doing that because I feel like such a Democrat. I could stuff the money in my pocket, but then I'd feel like a Republican.

Thanksgiving Day:

Our entire family had gathered for a Thanksgiving celebration. In the hustle and bustle of getting food on the table, someone noticed one of two large baskets of warm sesame rolls left sitting on a small side table was now empty. A search for the rolls turned up nothing and the grandkids swore they knew nothing. My youngest son accused Alex, my daughter's Cocker Spaniel, of eating the rolls. My daughter was insulted and said, "Alex is a retired show dog and is so disciplined I could sit a plate of food on the floor in front of him and he would wait for permission to eat it. Alex most definitely did not eat the rolls."

After dinner and dessert, my son approached my daughter again, this time holding Alex in his arms. He lifted the dog's floppy lips revealing several sesame seeds still glued to his jowls; so much for disciplined show dogs.

Hurricane season in the old days:

Years ago, police managers were not as sharp as they are today. For example, they made us ride around in our squad cars in the thick of the hurricane and, in a matter of hours, our tires were flat. Duh! We just cruised the streets with flat tires.

Once, during a severe hurricane, a plate glass window from Burdine's Department Store blew out and a gorgeous blond mannequin with long flowing hair and wearing an evening gown sailed across the street, hitting our windshield, startling my partner and I.

We scooped her up, sat her in the front seat between us and paraded her in front of our fellow officers who did double takes as we passed. Finally, we were pulled over by our sergeant and made to throw her out into the stormy night. Aaaaa, I still remember that plunging neckline and those ruby red lips. She was a cutie!

Senator Clinton recently described herself as a workhorse, not a show horse. OK, so I get mail from both Democrats and equestrians on this one.

I have no problem with the Senator's self description. I think she intended that I imagine a focused, dedicated public servant, straining against the harness, hairy ankles buried in mud, dragging a mountain of timber from a logging operation.

Plain, sensible, reliable, task oriented, gallant in a mundane way. Work horses pull the sled, or the plow, or the beer wagon. Knights once rode big burly work horses, and I wonder if Bill is trying to ride Hillary to a third term.

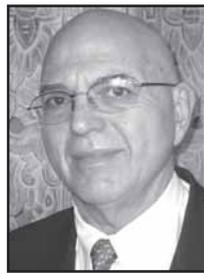

She intended the metaphor to reinforce what she has been telling us along, that she is experienced and tested, that while she may not be flashy, and she most definitely is not, she can be trusted to lead the nation without throwing a shoe, or whatever unsavory behavior characterizes show horses.

Hillary apparently dismisses show horses as frivolous, pampered, high strung, unpredictable. Show horses have shiny coats and braided mane. Based on my experience, that's a pretty accurate description, but it sounds more like John Edwards than Barack Obama.

A show horse doesn't have much utility unless being paraded around a ring. A show horse is all show. That's how the Senator would have us think of Senator Obama, flipping his head nervously, dreaming dreams and thinking thoughts that an old war horse has no time to contemplate.

Hillary portrays herself as born to the harness, safe, trustworthy, honest, reliable. Maybe she can pull a load, but those other characteristics don't match my image of Senator Clinton. Has anyone ever seen a clever, ambitious, devious work horse?

Look. There is Hillary, promising us leadership and stability over the long haul. Over there is that gadfly, the opponent, promising a new way and a fresh vision of America, a show horse who calls for reconciliation and participation, social justice and prosperity for the lesser of us, as well as the greater, a partnership between the deeply religious and those who cherish similar values but with a secular or humanistic perspective.

The work horse metaphor just doesn't evoke in me the comfort that Senator Clinton intended.

Now that show horse over there, that Obama is a horse I could get behind without worrying about getting my teeth kicked out. Now that her blanket of inevitability is showing some gaping holes, I suspect that Senator Clinton will throw all the mud in the paddock. I just don't expect it to stick.

stead of county control was necessary because though all three areas have scenic drives, hiking and waterfalls, there are significant differences in reasons why tourists visit the particular areas. "With local TDCs we can get the best bang for the buck in the county," he said.

Each TDC in Highlands, Franklin and Nantahala will receive the occupancy tax generated within its designated area, less the historically collected 5% withheld for administrative overhead by the county.

The make-up of each TDC will be appointed by the Macon County Commissioners and will be composed of a chamber of commerce director, who will be a nonvoting member; a chamber of commerce board member, a county commissioner from the TDC district - McClellan, Davis and Leatherman; a town representative; a small accommodations representative with 10 rooms or less; a large accommodations representative with 10 rooms or more; and two representative from tourist-driven businesses for a total of seven voting members.

Commissioner Simpson requested the county commission be supplied three candidates for each category.

Furthermore, periodically, all three TDCs will meet to discuss ways to promote Macon County as a whole.

Each TDC, which will be under contract with the county, must present an annual plan of work and a financial audit performed by a certified public accountant which will be presented to the county commission.

Assuming all the legalities are worked out in time, the three new TDCs will become effective July 1, 2008.

It's Dangerous Out There

Ever since I heard about the woman who died from exposure after a hike on Whiteside I can't get her out of my mind. I love to hike by myself and I am about her age. I somehow felt so close to her; as if she could have been me.

I like to hike alone because I feel like the woods are a sacred place and to talk would be like talking in church. Other people are way too noisy.

I like to hike alone because I find that being quiet outdoors is the best way to solve problems. I don't even have to think about the problem (actually it's better if I don't); I just have to be outside and the answer presents itself.

Hiking is also a natural high. I always feel better after I have been on a long walk across a mountainside.

I have been thinking about this because I recently read a book given to me by Betty Fisher called Last Child in the Woods: Saving our Children from Nature-deficit Disorder.

The author, Richard Louv, defines his term this way: "Nature-deficit disorder describes the human costs of alienation from nature, among them: diminished use of the senses, attention difficulties, and high rates of physical and emotional illnesses. The disorder can be detected in individuals, families, and communities."

Louv suggests that many of our modern problems — depression, stress, ADHD — can be connected to our disconnection from the natural world.

Until very recently almost everyone knew someone who lived on a farm. My father's parents were farmers in Wisconsin and the times I, a city girl, spent on their farm were very special for me. But the farm population has dwindled from 40 percent of U.S. households in 1900 to just 1.9 percent in 1990. Children today have no link to a farm.

Sometime in the last year the world population became predominantly urban: now over 50% of people live in cities, according to the Economist magazine.

Even the little bit of nature people see in cities is artificial and gives children a warped understanding of natural processes. Barbara Kingsolver warned in her book Animal Vegetable Miracle [641.0973K] that children are losing any understanding of the progression in plants from bud to flower to seed or fruit: flowerbeds are planted when the plants are flowering and every withered flower is cut before it can set seed or the whole plant is pulled out and replaced.

In another column I will talk more about Louv's discussion of the problems this nature-deficit poses to children and our collective future, because there is too much in this excellent book to fit in one column.

I found plenty of evidence in the book to explain why I feel better after a hike. For example: "Roger Ulrich, a Texas A&M researcher, has shown that people who watch images of natural landscapes after a stressful experience calm markedly in only five minutes: their muscle tension, pulse, and skin-conductance readings plummet."

I also found an explanation for why hikes help me solve problems: when I am concentrated on a problem for too long I get what psychologists call "directed-attention fatigue." "As Stephen Kaplan explained in the journal Monitor on Psychology, 'If you can find an environment where the attention is automatic, you allow directed attention to rest. And that means an environment that's strong on fascination.' The fascination factor associated with nature is restorative, and it helps relieve people from directed-attention fatigue."

If being outdoors is so good for us, why are so many of us suffering from nature-deficit? Obviously one reason is that so many people live in cities. Louv describes some new ideas to bring nature and cities together. In particular he cites a book by Timothy Beatley, Green Urban- ism: Learning from European Cities: "He describes an astonishing array of European green-city designs: cities with half the land areas devoted to forest, green space, and agriculture; cities that have not only preserved nearby nature, but reclaimed some inner-city areas for woods, meadows, and streams. These neighborhoods are both denser and more livable than our own. Nature, even a suggestion of wildness, is within walking distance of most residences. In contrast to the 'historic opposition of things urban and natural,' he writes, green cities 'are fundamentally embedded in a natural environment. They can, moreover, be re-envisioned to operate and function in natural ways — they can be restorative, re-nourishing and replenishing of nature.'"

Another reason many of us spend less time outdoors is fear. Louv spends a lot of time talking about how children aren't allowed to play outside anymore because of the fear of child abductions which is, like most crime in this country, greatly exaggerated by the media. The Justice Department sponsored a National Incidents Study of Missing Children in 1990 that found "First, most of the abductors weren't strangers, but family members or someone the family knew. Second, the actual annual figure of stranger abductions was two hundred to three hundred and it still is."

The Hudson Library has a new book by Chris Bolgiano, The Eastern Cougar (599.75E), documenting evidence that mountain lions are returning to these mountains. People are being killed in urban California areas by mountain lions — should I be afraid? Should I be afraid of coyotes when I am alone?

In the same newspaper with the woman who died on Whiteside was the report that the body of a hiker had been found here in Macon County, the husband of a woman whose body had been found last fall in Pisgah Forest. Not only do we have to be afraid of the elements and wild animals that could kill us, there are now serial killers stalking our forests. It's dangerous out there — better not to leave the house; better depressed in front of the TV than dead in the forest.

Of course I don't mean that. I'll be out in the woods at the next opportunity — in fact, I'm looking forward to a particular hike I have planned. I'll be rejuvenated and renewed, and I recommend it to everyone.

Stealing delegates, stealing nominations

The first state results to be reported on Super Tuesday came from the Republican Caucus in West Virginia. The result was that Mike Huckabee got all the delegates from that state to the Republican Convention. What makes the story really interesting is, HOW he got those delegates.

From the report I have, here's how the delegates voted in round one:

- * Romney 464
- * Huckabee 375
- * McCain 176
- * Paul 118

Ron Paul, who got the fewest votes, was dropped from the ballot for the next round of voting. The results then became:

- * Huckabee 524
- * Romney 479
- * McCain 11

Anyone who can count to twenty without removing his socks can see what happened. McCain's operatives saw that they were going nowhere in West Virginia. So they instructed their people to give the state to Huckabee. And most of their delegates obeyed that order.

The Pittsburgh Tribune-Review ran this title on the story: "Wild and Wonderful Win for Huckabee." That title is false. This was a "Down and Dirty Win for McCain." Huckabee is going nowhere. Eventually, at the Republican Convention if not before, Huckabee's candidacy will fold like a cheap lawn chair. At that point, who will get those West Virginia delegates?

If you guessed Mitt Romney, I'll allow you another guess. John McCain has just stolen the votes of West Virginia by giving them, temporarily, to his ally in the theft, Mike Huckabee. By the way, national convention delegates must vote as they were pledged when elected, depending on state laws. I understand that none remain bound beyond the third roll-call vote.

As the saying goes, politics ain't beanbag. What was just done in West Virginia is entirely legal. But it smells as bad as a dumpster full of day-old crab shells behind Phillips Crab House in Ocean City, Maryland, in mid-July. Believe you me, that is REALLY rank.

If the delegates from West Virginia are enough to put McCain over the top, then McCain has just stolen the nomination. Right in front of God and everybody.

Well, has anything similar happening among the Democrats? Just by coincidence, it has.

In order to preserve the special status of the Iowa caucuses and the New Hampshire primary, the Democratic National Committee required that no other state conduct its Democrat primaries before a certain date in 2008. Democrats in Florida and Michigan decided to move their primaries up in violation of that limit.

The DNC then "stripped" the delegates from both states for the Convention. No delegates were then elected in the "beauty contest primaries" in those two states. Democrat candidates had also pledged not to campaign in those states, and in Michigan, Hillary Clinton was the only major candidate to leave her name on the state ballot.

Well, Hillary Clinton won both of those states. After those non-delegate elections, she wrote a letter to the DNC demanding that delegates for her from those states be seated at the Convention. The rest of this discussion is somewhat obscure, but I guarantee it is correct. I speak as the former Parliamentarian for a national political convention. (The convention was for Ross Perot's Reform Party. But the principles of operating a convention are the same, regardless of the candidate's chance of winning the coming election.)

When the Democrats meet in Convention in the summer, initially no delegates from Florida or Michigan will be seated. But let's say at that point that Hillary Clinton has a majority of the seated delegates, but not the absolute majority of all authorized delegates which is required for nomination. You with me so far?

Who gets to decide whether Hillary Clinton delegates from Florida and Michigan get seated? Why, it's the delegates who are already seated, that's who. In that circumstance, Hillary can use her plurality on the floor to steal the delegates from those two states. Having done that, she will have stolen the nomination. Right in front of God and everybody.

In short, there is a possibility that the 2008 presidential election may be unique

Town Board finalizes several ordinance amendments

Amendments to several ordinances which have plagued the town's various boards for some time were dealt with last Wednesday night at the Town Board meeting.

Discussion still took place, and a final answer wasn't arrived at for every ordinance, but a dent was put in the pile of work.

Discussed were the Road Width and Grades for Subdivisions; Extension of Prohibition of Big Boxes, Setbacks on Town Hall Property, Outdoor Display of Merchandise, amendments to the zoning amendments for Perennial Streams, zoning amendments for the Highlands Greenway, Landscape Requirements for buffers and screenings, and the Pole Attachment ordinance and fee schedule.

Commissioners couldn't agree on the subdivision road width and grade amendment.

To maintain green space and save trees, commissioners considered increasing allowable grades and decreasing width requirements for one-lane paved roads in small subdivisions and to allow alternatives to cul-de-sacs on an individual review basis.

By increasing the maximum grade from 14% to 18% and requiring the portion of the road over 14% to be paved, less cut and fill would be required. Also, one-way loop roads and roads 300-feet or less in length and serving no more than five lots were considered. Commissioners reached a stalemate over the definition of lots, fearing a two-acre lot could someday be subdivided with access allowed via a one-way road or a road less than 18-feet wide.

Town Engineer Lamar Nix suggested adding "under no circumstance shall a road be extended past 300 feet if more than five lots were in the subdivision.

Commissioner Amy Patterson said if a narrow loop road continues to only serve five lots it would be OK, but "If any of the lots are subdivided in the future, there is the potential of more than five lots which would cause problems if the road becomes inadequate."

She suggested including "the lots can't be subdivided unless the road is widened," but no consensus could be reached.

Concerning big boxes, the Town Board killed the proposed amendment to the zoning ordinance.

The planning board recommended prohibiting big box buildings in the ETJ-Mixed Use district not to exceed 15,000 sq. ft. and that buildings in the B1, B2, B3, or B4 zoning districts be allowed to exceed 15,000 sq. ft., only with the issuance of a Special Use Permit and only up to a maximum of 25% of the existing footprint.

"I think 15,000 sq. ft. is really small," said Commissioner Hank Ross. "I've worked on some houses approaching this size."

Furthermore, the amendment would put several existing buildings in town out of compliance.

As to the setbacks on Town Hall property, commissioners decided against the planning board's recommendation which was to require the 25-foot setback on Oak and Maple streets but not Fourth Street.

"I see no visual harm in not requiring a setback on Oak Street as well as Maple Street," said Commissioner Dennis DeWolf.

The setback pardon applies only to the Town Hall property circumscribed by Oak, Maple and Fourth streets.

"The idea behind doing away with the setback requirements was to make room for more parking on the site," said Commissioner Amy Patterson.

The Outdoor Display of Merchandise is back to where it first began only less wordy and it applies to all five zoning districts -- B1, B2, B3, B4 and B5 (ETJ). Without the verbiage "such as" only the four categories listed are allowed -- produce, fire wood, fertilizers and plants. Merchants who want to display something other than those items listed, must apply for permission from the Planning Board and ultimately the Town Board and if accepted an amendment must be made to the ordinance.

Ex-commissioner Alan Marsh was in the audience and was able to sway the board concerning the issue.

"This is Highlands and we have come here because of the way it looks and we just don't need to change that," he said.

Commissioner Amy Patterson has been against the outdoor display of merchandise all along.

"Philosophically, why are we allowing this?" she asked. "Some people have space to display and some don't so they can't do it so, it's discriminatory. Plus, over the years we have made a point of dealing with the appearance of Highlands -- colors, siding, signage. We're trying to, in a general way, make Highlands have an appearance. What are we trying to do and why are we changing this? Let's clean up the definition instead of changing the philosophy."

Proposed amendments for perennial streams were tabled until a more detailed GIS study can be completed showing impacts of various scenarios and to allow time for the planning board to review preliminary findings.

The board agreed unanimously to adopt proposed amendments to the zoning ordinance pertaining to Greenways as follows:

- Adopt the Town of Highlands Greenway Plan Map -- Phase I dated Nov. 6, 2007;
- Require the dedication of passive recreation easement for conditional rezoning along identified greenway corridors ranging from 25-ft. to 50-ft. based on the Town our children in settings that preserve our values and our communities. Let's look forward and develop this vision to share with the school board and school officials."

He said anyone who believes in the American public school system is urged to attend. "We need your knowledge and your experience in putting together a vision to guide our schools."

An organizational meeting is set for Tuesday, Feb. 26 at 7 p.m. at the Macon County Community Facilities Building on U.S. 441 south, across from the Whistle Stop Mall.

Gooder introduced himself as a "parent of two children in the school system and a former member of the Macon County School Board" and said upon taking the wheel, the new superintendent proceeded to advocate the closing of schools and the building of new ones without proper planning.

"This was done without a feasibility study as required by General Statute 115C-521," said Gooder. "Before you can make any plan to close a school, you must do a study and compare new costs against the costs of renovation. This study must be turned into the State Superintendent who sends it to a historical committee."

The school facilities plan includes closing three elementary schools — Cullasaja, Cowee and Iolta — expanding East Franklin; building a new 5-6 school across the street from Macon Middle School and building a grades K-4 school on the current site of Iotla School to absorb and combine populations.

"Small schools do better. That's a national fact," said Gooder. "Large schools breed more social problems. In Chicago, officials are currently closing three mega high schools and moving into 15-16 small schools to ensure their students a quality education."

Gooder said he went to elementary school at Cullasaja and there was nothing wrong with it.

"We have a quality system here, now. Closing schools means isolating students, bussing them to an area where no one knows them. This plan will damage our school system," he said. "We should look some, "not a lot, but some," evidence to damages incurred by HCG particularly 2,000 feet of line which costs 28 cents a foot.

During arguments, McDevitt admitted to the jury that some of the equipment and lines it claimed in damages weren't Northland's. He asked the jury to take that into consideration if it awarded damages to Northland and to decrease the award, accordingly. The jury did so.

Nin Bond, the primary partner in HCG, spent much of Thursday on the stand explaining industry jargon and verifying when asked by Northland attorney Larry McDevitt, with Van Winkle Law Firm of Asheville, that HCG had filed bankruptcy a little over a week prior to his scheduled deposition.

"Wasn't one reason you filed bankruptcy was to try to avoid the deposition and subsequently show up in court?" asked McDevitt.

Under oath, Bond maintained that the two incidents had nothing to do with each other.

McDevitt said his firm had to file a motion of relief for stay so the bankruptcy could be lifted and Bond could be deposed.

McDevitt said as a "creditor" on the bankruptcy papers Bond indicated the outcome of the present case as a possible liability with the monetary amount listed as "unknown."

Under Sossomon's examination, Bond said he filed bankruptcy because he's been fighting with Northland in court since 2003 and has incurred significant legal expenses. "My back was against the wall," he said. "I have incurred huge fees defending a claim I believe to be frivolous. I have been unable to pay my lawyers. I couldn't even afford the expense of filing for bankruptcy. I had to ask my partners to pay for that."

Bond said HCG has filed Chapter 11 bankruptcy to have time to reorganize the company and pay creditors.

Trying to point to Bond's credibility, McDevitt brought up HCG's relationship with the town of Highlands even though the issue before the court regarded Duke Power poles outside the town limits with just some "clean up" in the Mirror Lake area.

Sossomon objected to the line of questioning on the grounds that the case pertained to Duke Power poles outside the town limits and had nothing to do with the town of Highlands.

However, Judge Winner allowed it.

"Wasn't your franchise with the town of Highlands revoked in Feb. 2004?" asked McDevitt. Bond said yes.

McDevitt asked Bond if after receiving three "cease and desist letters" from the town he continued to attach wire. Bond said no.

McDevitt said after two letters, the town cut his lines and Bond re-attached them. But again, Bond said no. He then explained the industry definition of the word "attach" as evidence that he hadn't done so.

"You reconnected them by splicing them or whatever," said McDevitt. "You reconnected the system even after the town cut your lines, didn't you?"

Bond then admitted that he made a connection on private property using a temporary drop line from one pole to another by attaching to the tails of two lines.

"I was on private property, I didn't need permission from the town of Highlands," said Bond.

"Isn't it true, that by unanimous vote the Town Board ruled that you flagrantly disregarded its pole attachment ordinance and didn't have permission to be on their poles and it revoked your franchise?"

Bond said that it's true the franchise was revoked but he didn't remember the particulars.

Under Sossomon's examination, Bond said after his lines were cut by the town, he ran the temporary line along the ground from one pole to the next which was

EDC outlines ways to attract businesses to Macon County

By Sally Hansen
Reporter

The Macon County Economic Development Commission (EDC) hopes to bring more employers to Macon County through several methods discussed at last week's EDC meeting. With the help of the Certified Entrepreneurial Committee, the EDC is working on a brochure spotlighting the strengths of the county.

County Manager Jack Horton was in attendance, and the committee presented its plan for improving both business and employment opportunities in Macon County.

Commission member Gary Dills said the purpose of the EDC is to promote entrepreneurship and economic growth, and he proposed that this be done with six steps. First, he said an awareness has to be established in the community, and then an assessment should be taken to determine what resources are present and what types of businesses the county should cater to.

The commission also agreed that the county's established businesses should be looked at and evaluated. Then it would be prudent to figure out how to promote small businesses in the future.

"We also need to define our region," Dills said. He said the 7-county area of "Region A" which includes the seven western North Carolina counties and even Rabun County in Georgia, should be considered.

Also discussed was consulting with an Economic Development Authority Director to find out if current efforts are helping promote economic growth and development in other areas.

To meet these goals, Dills has had extensive help working on a brochure for the past four months to showcase the assets of Macon County to help attract prospective businesspeople and entrepreneurs to the area. These brochures will be placed in banks, libraries, schools, and other places where a businessperson might be looking for resources in starting a business.

Dills said community involvement is very helpful and Horton said the media can be a positive force in informing prospective businesses about our area. "The press needs to know what's good that's going on in our county," he said.

Macon County Commissioner Jim Davis also applauded the many volunteers the county already has, and mentioned that there is a tremendous pool of talent here that could get involved in this project. "Many retirees are not ready to sit on a porch and die; they want to have something to do, and we could put them to good use," Davis said.

The commission also discussed the future use of the Business Development Center at the Macon County Industrial Park, also known as the "incubator." This facility is owned by the county, and it is intended to help new business get off the ground by offering a low-cost space from which to operate a business. Currently, the NC Driver's License Office occupies a portion of the building.

Member Mark West suggested that tenants be given a few years to use the facility, but that they not be allowed to stay more than three years. Horton said that if the business hasn't learned how to stay in operation by that amount of time, then the commission isn't maintaining a good relationship with the tenants, which is also supposed to be part of the incubator concept.

Entrepreneurs with something to offer are given a space to grow as businesspeople, with the help of others who are more experienced in developing a small business plan. After a few years, they are expected to leave the incubator and move into the private sector.

It was decided that a nominal fee should be charged per square foot for the use of the incubator building to help the county to maintain the facility. Dills also suggested that the vacant space be marketed so that more of the rooms can be put to good use.

The next EDC meeting is scheduled to be Feb. 12 at 5:30 p.m. in the Commissioner's Board Room at the Macon County Courthouse.

Commission members are Thomas Craig, Ed Shatley, Roger Plemens, Mark West, Gary Dills, Commissioners Charlie Leatherman, Jim Davis and representatives from the Franklin Chamber of Commerce, the Franklin Town Board, Southwestern Community College, the regional representative of NC DOT and the chairman of the WCIP.

New road to pumping station off Oak Lane a possibility

With an expanded Town Hall complex a possibility, the ABC Store will soon need a new home.

At the Feb. 6 Town Board meeting, David Wilkes, director of the ABC Board, asked commissioners for permission to develop preliminary plans for construction of a ABC store on the town's lot adjacent the Old Jail on Maple Street.

"We would like permission to explore the use of the Old Jail property," said Wilkes. "It will fit the building size and parking we need. We just need to draw up a plan to see how it will all fit."

Wilkes suggested the same relationship the ABC Store now has with the town which is the ABC Board paying to build the structure and then leasing it back to the town for $1 a year for 30 years. "That will give us the time we need to pay back the 30-year financing," he said.

Old deeds on record at the county don't delineate the town property on Maple Street as separate parcels "It shows it as all one piece of property so we need to research the deeds and prepare a survey," said Town Administrator Richard Betz.

"We just wanted to get a general blessing from you before we get too deep into this and start spending money," said Wilkes.

The proposed building would sit on the parking area and road that now leads to the Greenway Trail and the town's pumping station. If built there, it would block vehicular access.

Commissioner Larry Rogers suggested putting a new road to the pumping station at the crook of Oak Lane instead.

Town Engineer Lamar Nix said he didn't see a problem with that scenario as long as town crews can continue to access and maintain the pumping station and clean the sewer which is done twice a year.

Commissioner Hank Ross said impact to the Greenway Trail needed to be considered, too.

"That is recreation land and erecting the store there will impact that. We need to think about the impact before you spend a lot of time and money working on this," he said. "The Greenway is one concern, the other is general access going down to that area. If this building is built, the route will still have to be maintained and we need to determine how much impact it will have."

Commissioner Dennis DeWolf said he didn't want to stand in the way of making this happen but needed more information, too.

Commissioner Amy Patterson agreed. "I need to see this on paper and there are concerns we need to take into account so we can make a reasonable judgment based on the pros and cons," she said.

In the end commissioners suggested the town get a survey done since there isn't one on file because the information would benefit the town not just the ABC Store.

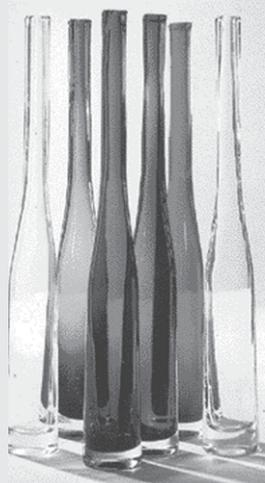

Mayor Don Mullen asked Hillrie Quin, of the Greenway Committee, Nix and Wilkes to look at the whole situation and to return to the board with a formal recommendation.

County adopts flood and watershed ordinance amendments

Much of Monday night's Macon County Commission meeting was spent hearing comments from citizens both for and against amendments to the Flood Damage Prevention Ordinance and the Watershed Protection Ordinance.

In the end, there was little the commission could do about either ordinance and they were adopted 4 to 1.

"If the county doesn't adopt an amended Flood Damage Prevention Ordinance by July 1, 2008, Macon County residents will no longer be eligible for flood insurance which will affect federally insured mortgages," said County Planner Stacy Guffey. "Nor will the county be eligible for FEMA disaster relief."

The state sent a boiler-plate flood damage prevention ordinance to Macon County after the latest flood plain maps were released in 2007 which show an increase in the county's flood plain by one percent – currently 3% of county land is considered in the flood plain.

Guffey said the state has delegated local governments to adopt regulations designed to promote public health, safety and general welfare because the flood prone areas in the county are subject to inundation resulting in loss of life and property. Flood disasters cause safety hazards, disrupt commerce and governmental services, and are responsible for extraordinary public expenditures for relief and protection which ultimately impairs the tax base, tion of employment eligibility to employers. Employers could find out a year or more after the hire date that their employee is unauthorized after training and investing in them, and would have to immediately fire them.

- No liability protection is included from discrimination lawsuits for an employer who relies on E-Verify information and does not hire or fires a current employee, in the event that the future or current employee is later found eligible to work in the United States.

- Preemption is not addressed in the legislation, except in terms of not allowing states to opt out of E-Verify. Immigration is a federal issue and business cannot work successfully in a country with patchwork state and local laws that can often contradict each other.

The failure of Congress to fix our immigration system or to recognize the ongoing need of the American economy for workers, and to separate those who wish to harm our nation from those who wish to help build it should not be solved by making criminals of American business owners. The current system does not work for anyone, and Congress needs to address the issue in a coherent, comprehensive manner that serves our national security and economic interests rather than taking a piecemeal approach.

Hillrie Quin
Chairman, International
Friendship Center

he said.

Since flood losses are caused by the cumulative effect of obstructions in the flood plains causing flood heights and velocities to increase, the changes in the ordinance dealt mainly with building in the floodway or non-encroachment area and putting restrictions on building in the actual flood plain.

"What people must understand is there is nothing in this ordinance that prevents a person from building in the flood plain," said Bob Wright with the Macon County Watershed Commission. "It just shows ways to make it safer."

If building in the flood plain, the Planning Board recommended building three feet above the 100 year flood line – FEMA's minimum is two feet – and that buildings be on piers so water can flow around the foundation rather than be obstructed.

"Surveys used to create the new flood plain map are already out of date because it doesn't take into account development that has occurred in flood plains, floodways and non-encroachment areas since 2006," said Wright. "Development has changed the map since then. Flood levels only go up, they don't go down."

The development of a RV park along a river in Franklin caused the board to issue a moratorium on the development until the flood plain ordinance could be amended. It was lifted after the board adopted the amended Flood Damage Prevention Ordinance and the Watershed Ordinance which dealt with built-upon percentage requirements concerning RV parks in the flood plain and flood prone areas.

Many people spoke for the ordinance changes citing citizen safety and property protection of people downstream.

"This shouldn't be about one man's right to step on thousands of people's rights to enjoy their property," said Ginney Sanders with the Little Tennessee Watershed Authority. "The flood plain is a place for water to go when waterways fill up. If you fill it up with stuff, the water has no place to go."

Susan Irwin, whose father has built in the flood plain and been flooded out countless times, said the flood plain serves an environmental and biological function. "This is not an onerous ordinance. It's about ensuring as little damage as possible to your neighbors downstream. Whitewater through your living room is no fun," she said.

Many folks spoke to property rights. "We ask the board not add more than what is required. Don't do anything that will prohibit property owners from using their land," said Guy Bower. "You don't want the result to be that no one can build or use their property."

Commissioner Ronnie Beale said unfortunately people have real short memories. "If Peek's Creek had happened yesterday we wouldn't be having this discussion."

Commissioner Jim Davis said he understood the property rights angle, and said the county was trying to do good things in regard to flood damage prevention but through language there are a lot of unintended consequences.

Amendments to both ordinances were adopted contingent upon some language changes which ultimately must be OK'd by FEMA.

Commissioner Beale made the motion to adopt the amendments contingent upon the definition of fill being changed; the size of RVs be adjusted up, that the tethering of RVs be eliminated, to allow building two feet above the 100-year flood line; to define storage areas in the flood plain as commercial endeavors; and to change the name of the ordinance to Flood Ordinance of Macon County.

Commissioner Davis said the 400 sq. ft. reference to RVs should be increased because RVs owned by the folks buying RV lots in the proposed development are closer to 500 sq. ft. and the title of the ordinance is misleading because it doesn't prevent floods or damage.

Commissioner Bob Simpson voted against both ordinances on the grounds that there isn't any mechanism in place to compensate property owners for the inability to use all of their land along a waterway.

County Manager Jack Horton said citizens can appeal to the tax assessor to have their tax value decreased or the property value adjusted to take into account the amount of land they can't use.

Simpson was also concerned about the inability of a citizen with a commercial entity in the flood plain to build back should a flood occur.

County Building Inspector Jack Morgan said commercial entities don't have to be elevated in the flood plain like residential buildings they just have to be flood proof.

Rep. Shuler secures more than $70,000 for Macon County Sheriff

Funding to be used to fight Meth and other illegal drugs

Macon County will soon be receiving more than $70,000 from the federal government to fight methamphetamine and other illegal drugs due to the efforts of Representative Heath Shuler.

Rep. Shuler secured a federal appropriation of $493,500 Multiple Agency Narcotics Unit (MANU) to fight drug use, production, and distribution. MANU will then distribute the funding to the Sheriff's Offices in the seven westernmost counties of North Carolina: Cherokee, Clay, Graham, Haywood, Jackson, Macon, and Swain.

"The fight against methamphetamine is critically important to the safety of our families and our communities. We need to be doing everything in our power on the local, state, and federal level to stop this use and sale of this drug. This funding will allow the Macon County Sheriff's Office to invest in training, equipment, and other resources they need to fight meth," said Rep. Shuler. "I applaud the efforts of Sheriff Holland and the entire Macon County Sheriff's Office, and I know they will continue protecting our communities."

Sheriff Holland said, "Hometown security is as important as homeland security. We appreciate the fact that Congressman Shuler is taking care of the law enforcement officers in his district and this community. This money will be utilized to continue our efforts in the war on drugs."

The funding that Rep. Shuler secured was a part of the FY 2008 Omnibus Appropriations bill.

... PARKING continued from page 1 explained the pros and cons of "shared" parking – whether it be between private entities or municipalities.

"Sharing parking in some way allows existing parking to be more efficiently used, reduces the amount of impervious surface that would be otherwise required, and helps to improve the aesthetics of the town," he said. "Furthermore, there is a substantial need to address this issue as it relates to public, health, safety and welfare."

"Credit for On-Street Parking Spaces and Public Parking Lots" was discussed at length suggesting businesses and restaurants, in particular, be allowed to use public parking – on public streets or in public lots – to satisfy parking requirements.

The board got hung up on the percentage-credit of a public spot that could be used to satisfy the parking space-to-seat ratio, as well as the distance of the public parking spaces from an establishment.

Co-chair Ginger Slaughter made a motion of 50% credit and the use of public spaces up to 400 feet away, but Linda Clark proposed 100% credit.

"This would be a way to help small restaurants that could be started in locations like on Carolina Way that only have three spots in front of their establishment but could use public parking," she said. "We could use more restaurants in Highlands and we could help them."

To compromise, Chairman Griffin Bell suggested 80%.

Mike Bryson questioned putting a distance limit on public spaces at all.

"The distance shouldn't matter," he said. "Why can't it be 1,000 feet? It shouldn't matter where it is because in the end it's based on a percentage of use anyway," he said.

In the end, Slaughter amended her motion and the board voted unanimously to recommend an 80% credit and use of space up to 400 feet away.

For instance, if a restaurant has five parking spaces which enables it to have 15 seats, and it is within 400 feet of public parking, it could use 80% of their five spaces to get four additional public spaces which could mean 12 more seats for that restaurant.

Remote parking was discussed but the issue of crossing public streets came into play.

The board discussed requiring remote lots to be adjoined to the business in need of parking, but questions arose.

Mike Bryson said if he leases a lot away from his business, he should be able to use it to satisfy his parking needs "because it's still mine," he said.

Bell said if crossing a public street becomes an issue, then Fireside Restaurant wouldn't be able to use its lot off Helen's Barn Avenue to satisfy parking requirements. "That would make Fireside out of compliance because the lot it uses is across a road," he said.

Ricky Bryson verified that Helen's Barn Avenue is a town road and not part of Wright Square property.

Because of all the different scenarios, at one point the board considered tabling all the amendments until a comprehensive parking study could be completed as suggested by Commissioner Hank Ross at the previous Town Board meeting. However, Bell nixed that suggestion.

"We have businesses that need answers now," he said.

Though thoughts about reworking the town's parking regulations were initiated by restaurants whose seating capacity is directly related to the number of parking spaces they have, whichever parking scenario adopted by the Town Board will apply to all businesses for which parking is required in all four business districts – B2, B3, B4 and B5 (ETJ).

The Town Board will hear the Planning Board's "credit for public space" recommendation at the March 5 Town Board meeting.

More on the Planning Board meeting At its last meeting, the Town Board disregarded the Planning Board's suggestions concerning "Big Boxes" and setbacks on Town Hall property – see story on page 8.

Bell said it's clear the Town Board isn't getting the information it needs concerning the reasons the Planning Board makes its recommendations.

He said the way the board arrives at its decisions and the comments made by members per the issues aren't being passed on to the Town Board.

He said comments made at meetings show up in newspaper articles, but he's not sure commissioners see them.

He asked that more comprehensive minutes be compiled by the Planning Director and his staff.

ACT ONE ground breaking

Smoky Mountain Center for the Performing Arts

Phil and Sharon Drake cordially invite the public to the ceremonial ground breaking of the 150-pluss seat Smoky Mountain Center for the Performing Arts on February 25, at 9:30 a.m.

Providence Builders is the primary contractor for the new arts center. Construction is estimated to take fourteen months, with an opening date in the spring of 2009.

The Center will be constructed next to the Fun Factory in the Smokies (a 56,000 SF Family Entertainment Center) at 1024 Georgia Road in Franklin, NC. It will be capable of hosting musicals, plays, concerts, music festivals, and community events. The Performing Arts Center will attempt to showcase national, regional, and local talent in various events.

The Performing Arts Center has been designed to make it attractive both to the performers and the patrons. The stage will have a full 60 foot opening, with ample dressing rooms and off stage storage.

The primary goal will be to have various forms and styles of entertainment showcased in the mountains: Comedic Performances, Concerts (Gospel, Country, Bluegrass, Oldies), Drama, Recitals, Passion Plays, and Christmas Concerts. A secondary goal is to bring tourism and visitors to Franklin and the Western North Carolina area and give them a reason to visit and to stay.

WNS Fungus could be killing bats

The endangered Indiana bat saw a 9.4% population increase between 2005 and 2007, continuing a 12-year rise in bat numbers, though a mysterious illness in the Northeast poses a threat to this success.

According to figures released by the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, in 2007 the number of Indiana bats rose to more than 513,000, up from 469,000 in 2005, the last time a comprehensive population estimate was completed.

"While that seems like a lot of bats, every winter they come together in massive numbers in a few caves and mines to hibernate, making them extremely vulnerable. In the past, human disturbance of major Indiana bat hibernation sites significantly contributed to the bat's decline and was a main factor leading to its addition to the Federal list of endangered species. Now the bat's habit of aggregating in large numbers at hibernation sites may make them more vulnerable to the rapid spread of this new disease," said Robert Currie, a bat biologist in the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service's Asheville Field Office.

Biologists in New York documented the death of thousands of bats, including several hundred Indiana bats, all apparently infected by a fungus which often forms white tufts on the bats' muzzles, giving the name white nose syndrome, or WNS. In addition to the white muzzle, dead bats appear to have used up their winter fat stores and have congregated much closer to cave entrances than usual. Researchers are trying to determine if the fungus itself is responsible for the deaths or if its presence is symptomatic of another problem.

Although they occur in greatest numbers in the Midwest, Indiana bats have been known to hibernate in Western North Carolina, and more commonly, migrate to the region in the warmer months.

• CONSERVATIVE POV •

And then there were three...

My, what a week. At the same time multiple tornados were wreaking havoc over the central part of the country, voters all over were shaping our future. While the Democrat candidates broke even, McCain did well enough to encourage Mitt Romney to suspend his campaign. This makes McCain the odds-on favorite to be the Republican's choice.

At the same time Obama was announcing that he received $7.2 million in donations the two days following Super Tuesday, Mrs. Clinton reported she lent her campaign $5 million. If the Democrat nomination depends on the ability to raise money, and it usually does, it looks like advantage Obama.

The Romney story shows the vagaries of political campaigns. He started his campaign early, worked hard, and seemed to have gotten past the Mormon issue, yet he just couldn't get much traction. His poll numbers hovered between 15-20% while Rudy's popularity soared and then fell back. Poor campaign strategy. Fred Thompson's long-awaited entry went nowhere fast. Poor campaign execution.

Conservatives, while bashing McCain ceaselessly, kept looking for Ronald Reagan reincarnated. Rather than take the positive approach and determine and support the best name available, the anti-McCain rhetoric droned on. Mike Huckabee picked up expected support from Southern states, largely from evangelicals, but not enough to be a serious threat.

So, as the primaries and caucuses got underway, conservatives knew who they didn't want, but not who they did. Some said they'd vote for Hillary before they'd vote for McCain. That's crazy. Others said they'd just stay home on Election Day.

That's stupid. But they didn't say they'd vote for Romney until the damage had been done. Meanwhile, McCain attracted moderate Republicans, independents and some Democrats, where crossover voting was allowed. By the time conservatives realized that Romney was the real deal, it was too late. McCain had accumulated too many delegates to overcome.

Romney announced his withdrawal at the Conservative Political Action Conference in a speech that I thought was the best I'd heard since Reagan.

Even though he led Huckabee in delegates secured, Romney felt to continue would further fractionalize the party and by suspending his campaign he would win the favor of Republican leadership. I believe he also felt to continue would mean throwing good money after bad and he's saving the rest of his fortune for a run in 2012.

So, what are we left with? We pretty well know what we would be getting if Hillary were to be elected. Her "35 years of experience" have exposed her to be a ruthless, devious shrew, who will stop at nothing to accomplish her aims. She put up with continuous humiliation when hubby Bill embarrassed himself and the Country with his non-stop indiscretions. Why would any self-respecting woman put up with his crap? To become President of the United States, of course. Ironically, her meal ticket is now a liability on the campaign tour, sticking his foot in his mouth at every opportunity. Way to go, Bill.

Barack Obama. What do we know about him? A couple of years into his first term as senator of Illinois, he has earned the rating as the most liberal member of the Senate. While I'll be dipped if I can see it, he has been called an accomplished inspirational speaker. He has been compared to Jack Kennedy. All I hear are platitudes and clichés without any substance. While I wasn't a big fan, JFK spoke with meaning.

John McCain is the presumptive Republican nominee. It would take a miracle and 83% of the remaining available delegates for Mike Huckabee to overtake McCain's lead. Ain't gonna happen. I pointed out some of McCain's poor legislative choices last week but he does have some redeeming qualities. He certainly would take a more hawkish stand on national defense and the Iraq war than the Democrats would. He has been a fiscal conservative and his voting record proves it. That would be nice for a change. His right-to life stand has been admirable. So, while he isn't the poster boy of conservative politics, it could be worse.

Getting back to Hillary, as Mrs. President, she tried to take over the nation's health care system. She showed her style by lying to Congress, working in secrecy and failing in her effort. As President, she had vowed to try to do it again, and make it mandatory. She has admitted that nonparticipants could have their wages garnished, and possibly jailed. And, of course, she would wreck our healthcare system. Then where would Canadians and the worlds' wealthy go for first-class medical treatment?

It's time to get serious about who gets your vote.

A night at the Community Care Clinic on Aunt Dora Lane

It was a dark and stormy night. The snow was falling and the roads were slick with an icy film. That Thursday night, Jan. 17, patients and volunteers could not safely get to Aunt Dora Lane and the Community Care Clinic, and medical needs went quietly unaddressed.

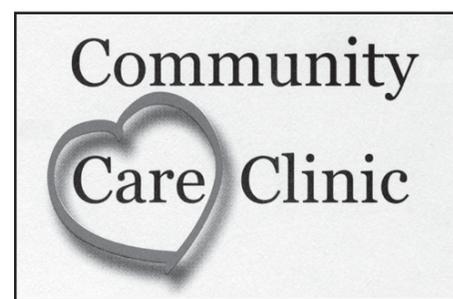

The winter weather continued the following Thursday, but the roads were clear - and the patients and the volunteers came. That evening, Jan. 24, they came in droves, the greatest numbers since the Clinic had opened two years ago! The Clinic treated a record 48 patients that night (and over 45 the following Thursday).

Dr. John Baumrucker was the volunteer doctor for the night, and Richard Wayne, the PA, was there as well. Dr. Mark Heffington dropped by to bring some supplies and give a hand before he went to his son's basketball game, and seeing the commotion, found himself staying to help. Earlier in the day, Dr. Patti Wheeler had called to check in and was told that she wouldn't be needed that night. Little did anyone know!

That night, patients of all ages were seen - from little ones on up the scale, people from all over these mountains. The doctors treated skin problems, stomach problems, sore throats and runny noses, strained muscles, fevers, and aching bones. Those requiring medications were given prescriptions that they could take to Cashiers Valley Pharmacy or to Highlands Pharmacy to be filled for free. (These businesses will bill the Clinic later at a discounted rate. Patients who need medicines on a regular basis work with the Medical Assistance Program to get them directly from the pharmaceutical companies.) On the night of Jan. 24, the Clinic did not lock its doors until well after 10:30.

Our fourth volunteer doctor, Dr. Toby Lindsay, had the night off on Jan. 24. When Doctor Lindsay first signed on to volunteer, he stopped by on a Thursday just to observe the process. As with our other dedicated volunteer doctors, he walked in, saw an immediate need, and went to work.

We at the Community Care Clinic are so fortunate to have doctors who work hard at their own offices all day, and then are willing to give of their time and expertise after-hours to help those less fortunate. As the number of patients continues to grow, so will our need for more medical people, more translators, more assistance. If you are willing to give of yourself and your talents to those in need, please call Jerry Hermanson at the Community Care Clinic, 526-1991.

We can find a job for you!

The Community Care Clinic (CCC) provides free medical care to those who cannot otherwise afford it. Located at 52 Aunt Dora Drive in Highlands, the Clinic is open each Thursday night from 5:00 until 9:00. Appointments can be made by calling 526-1991, but they are not required; the Clinic stays open until all patients are seen.

of Highlands Greenway Plan Map and conditional use zoning shall not be granted without the dedication to the Town of Highlands an easement for passive recreation, etc., and the dedication of a conservation easement to a qualified land trust to be held in perpetuity by said land trust and allowing all uses consistent with the purpose of the Highlands Greenways;

- Create exceptions for minimum lot sizes for properties with greenway easements;
- Require setbacks will be from property lines and roadways, not greenway easements;
- Modify buffer requirements so any path or trail within land dedicated to the Greenway will be a minimum of 20-ft. from a perennial stream and,

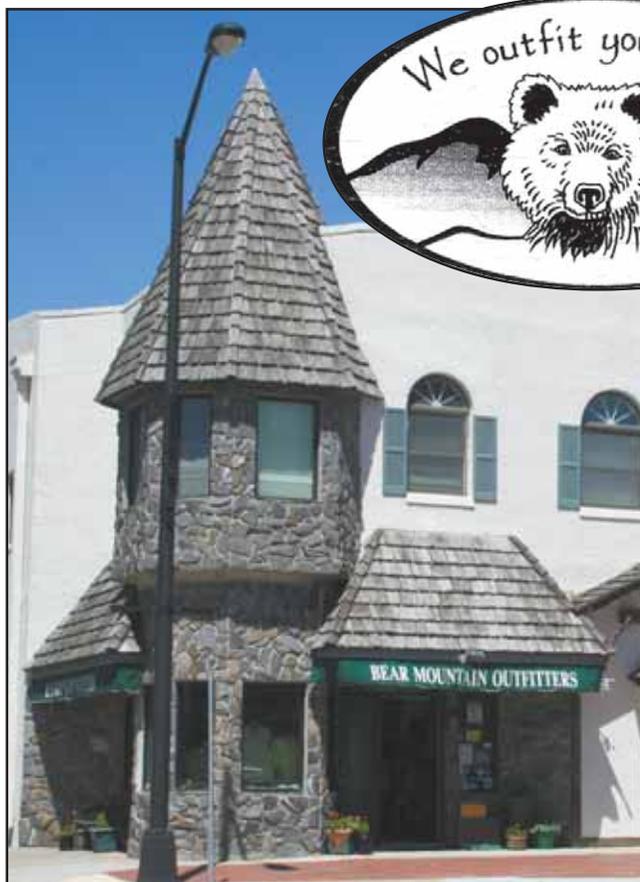

It provides design characteristics of paths and trails allowed within the Greenway located within conditional zoning districts.

The board deferred adoption of the landscape ordinance pending the inclusion of an extensive list of recommended species for landscaping and buffers where plant materials are identified by botanical names. Commissioners did agree on the list of plants, however.

The pole attachment ordinance has gone back and forth between Nix's office and Town Attorney Bill Coward. The 47-point amendment was ready for adoption Wednesday night and includes precise regulations concerning the use of the town's utility poles by entities providing cable television, telephone or similar services within the town to provide safe and orderly use of its poles. There had been some talk on increasing the town's pole attachment fee, but the board agreed to leave it a $10 per attachment.

at the options and look at the cost of renovations. We should save our schools instead of tearing them down.”

Commissioner Jim Davis took particular offense to Gooder's comments.

“A feasibility study was done 10 years ago and that started us down the road to where we are now. I was part of the committee that did that,” he said. “The statistics you cite in Chicago don't apply here. If you're going to try to sell people on keeping us from doing what we started 10 years ago you better have your facts right.”

Later in the meeting, which lasted a record 5 ½ hours, Superintendent Dan Brigman addressed Gooder's claims calling them false and deserving of clarification.

“If I ever leave Macon County, I hope to leave the school system in better shape than I found it in Nov. 2006,” said Brigman to the commissioners. “When I got here the subject of facilities was an on-going discussion. Macon Middle School is in distress and renovations to East Franklin Elementary were being considered.

“To deal with the complex issues ahead of us we began meeting with Commissioners Jim Davis and Ronnie Beale and have done so consistently from Feb. 12 2007 until now to review priorities, capacity and aging facilities.

“The expansions planned will actually make existing schools smaller not bigger, reducing the student population while eliminating 28 portable buildings on our campuses.”

Brigman said prior to embarking on the facilities program, the school system held 10 public forums in each area of the county so citizens could see the facility plan – to beat it up and ask questions, he said.

“The turn out was decent, but I wish it had been packed to the walls. Had we had a packed house each time, people would understand what's going on now,” he said.

In rebuttal to Gooder's claim, Brigman said he has personally been in contact with the State Superintendent June Atkinson to discuss Macon County Schools facilities plan. “Extreme attention has been given to these measures,” he said. “Our plan will mean new modern classrooms for each student.”

He said classroom standards and requirements are different than they were 20 years ago. In the past, elementary classrooms could be 700-900 sq. ft. Now a kindergarten room has to be 1,200 sq. ft with restrooms in each of them.

On Tuesday, Brigman verified that per state statute, a feasibility study is required by all districts to assess capital plans and needs every five years. “This process serves as a benchmark for the State of North Carolina Department of Public Instruction to aid in planning capital needs throughout the state.

“To the contrary of statements made by a parent and coordinator of the Citizens for Community Schools at the beginning of the county commission meeting last evening, the Macon County School District has submitted a feasibility plan titled Macon County Schools Capacity Summary & Plan in accordance with G.S. 115C-521.”

He said the plan is a working document and may be amended by the Macon County Board of Education at any time to meet the changing needs within the district after submission to the state.

“This plan was presented to the State of North Carolina in 2006 and includes the district's plan for closing Cowee Elementary School, Iotla Elementary School, and Cullasaja Elementary School,” he said. “These buildings should be replaced due to age of these facilities, economies of scale, and classroom requirements.”

Also included in the plan is the construction of North Macon Elementary School on the current Iotla site. At the Young team playing hard 2007-2008

Highlands vs. Hiwassee Dam

The boys played a tight game against Hiwassee Dam on Friday, Feb. 8 at Hiwassee Dam. The score was 70 Highlands, 87 Hiwassee Dam.

Top scorer was Ezra Herz with 26 points followed by Jake Heffington with 24 points. Mikey Lica was next up with 12 points followed by Michael Baty with 4 and Andrew Billingsley with 2.

The team's strongest quarter was round two with 22 points

Highlands vs. Nantahala

The boys lost to Nantahala 61-86 on Monday, Feb. 11 at Nantahala.

The scoring pack delivered the best they could. Top scorer was Jake Heffington with 28 points, followed by Ezra Herz with 13; Andrew Billingsley with 10 and Michael Shearl with 4 points.

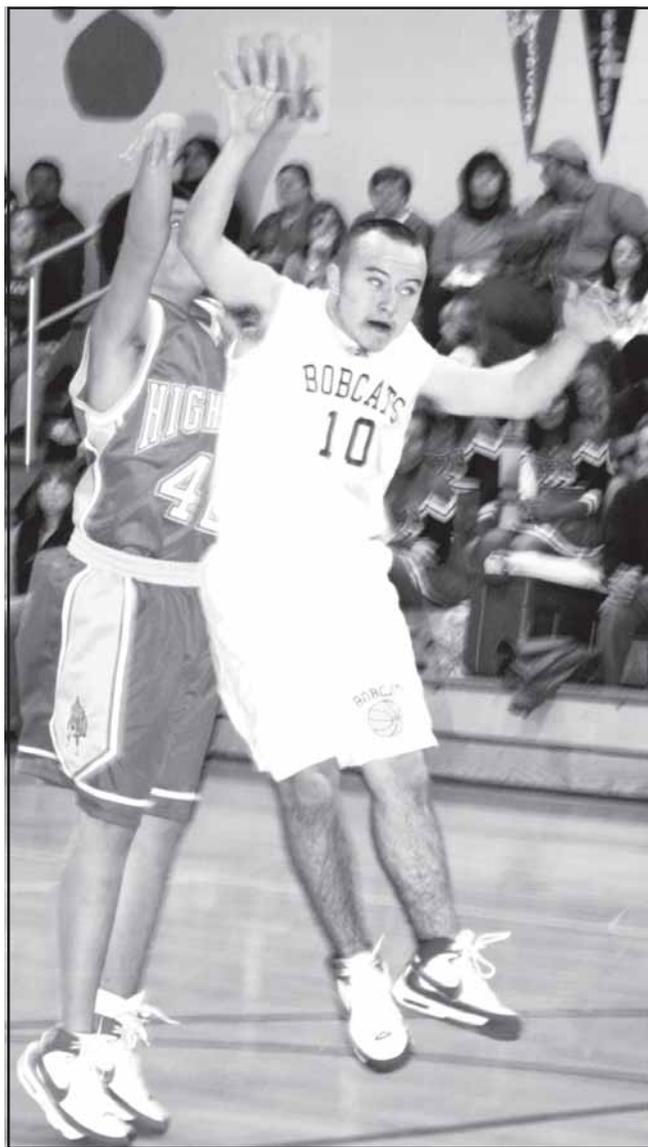

Three other players came through - Michael Baty scored 3 points, Casey Molinary scored 2 points and Mikey Lica scored 1 point. The strongest quarter for both teams was the final quarter with 23 points for Highlands and 24 points for Nantahala.

Highlands vs. Hendersonville

The same players in Highlands carried the game. High scorer was Ezra Herz with 19 points, followed by Jake Heffington with 16, Andrew Billingsley with 8, Casey Molinary with 6, Michael Shearl with 4, three each for Mikey Lica and Michael Baty, two each for Clayton Lassiter and Josh Delacruz and one for Austin Brooks. Though the team lost, players who don't usually get to, saw some court time.

Highlands' season record is 5-22. The conference record is 2-3.

The next game home game: Feb. 15 against Blue Ridge. The girls play at 6:30 p.m. and the boys play at 8 p.m.

A win against the Blue Ridge Bobcats on the cats' turf Jan. 24. The score was 74-37.

Snow delivers on funding for paving

On Monday, Feb. 11, Senator John Snow and Rep. Roger West informed the town that the funding requested to pave Hickory Hill, Chowan, Cullasaja Drive was granted.

"We got the money and are glad we could help," wrote Sen. Snow in an email to Mayor Don Mullen.

At the Thursday, Feb. 7 N.C. Board of Transportation meeting, the project, recommended by Speaker Hackney and President Pro Tempore Basnight was approved by the board, said Donna Langdon with NC DOT Secondary Roads Office.

"For Macon Co., Div. 14 - Highlands funding for the paving of Hickory Hill Road (0.93 mi), Chowan Drive (0.93 mi), and Cullasaja Road (1.89 mi).for $266,925," she wrote.

Town Administrator Richard Betz said work will likely begin in the spring once the paperwork is finalized and the asphalt plant opens.

in American history. Before 2008, nominations have been stolen. Elections have been stolen (recall the Hayes-Tilden race of 1876). But never before have two candidates, both of whom stole their nominations, faced each other in a general election.

If the vote tallies are tight at both the Republican and Democrat national conventions, it is possible we might see that unique circumstance, two election thieves facing each other with one guaranteed to win, between John McCain and Hillary Clinton.

Sorta makes you proud to be an American, don't it?

Cub Scout Pack 207 observes Scout Week 2008

Scout Week is the week Boy and Cub scouts celebrate the anniversary of scouting in the United States. Pack 207 observed the week with a window display at The Little Flower Shop. Scout Sunday, held Feb. 2 and 10, is a tradition where scouts and leaders dress in uniform and play a public role in their church service.

The pack has an annual Pinewood Derby race. This year there were 21 cars participating. Derby winners were Charlie Underwood 1st Place, John Brassard 2nd Place, and Austin Forrester 3rd Place.

time of the planning stage, expansions were also noted to be needed at Macon Middle School, South Macon Elementary and Cartoogechaye elementary schools, ultimately making each of those campuses larger than current capacity.

Due to Gooder's allegations, on Tuesday, Feb. 12, Terry Bell, director of auxiliary services of Macon County Schools, contacted Ken Phelps, school planning consultant for Public School Capital Building Fund, Long Range Plans at the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction to confirm the receipt of this planning document and the status of the Macon County Board of Education being in or out of compliance with G.S. 152C-521.

"According to Mr. Phelps, Macon County has submitted this plan meeting all requirements under state statute for a five-year plan and may continue with current plans for school replacement, closings, renovations and new school construction," said Brigman.

New guy, old guy in HCP's 'Lend Me A Tenor'

There's a new guy in the Highlands Community Players upcoming play, Lend Me a Tenor, and an old guy who's been in 20 HCP plays since the Players came into being in 1995.

The new actor — that is, new to HCP — is Bob Tietze. He has not acted on the stage in more than 30 years, but he brings with him a good deal of acting and theater experience from earlier years. In Largo, FL, he performed with the Footlights Theater from 1966 to 1971 and in 1972 -- '73 for a community theater in Syracuse, NY, mainly in musicals, such as Mame, Oklahoma, and The Pajama Game. He was also a valued backstage worker for these theaters and helped to renovate an old church building in Largo into a workable theater.

His wife Phyllis was also instrumental in the building conversion, selecting the lighting instruments and lighting board, which she operated for most of the productions.

Before moving to Highlands the Tietzes came by way of Columbia and Pendleton, S.C. They bought a house on Flat Mountain Road in 1972 and moved here full time in 1996 when Bob retired from a 30-year career as a salesman, the last 20 with Dow Chemical Company. The couple has a son and a daughter and three grandchildren, all living in South Carolina.

Singer that he is, Bob has joined the Performing Arts Center's Male Chorus in Highlands and sings in the Presbyterian Church choir along with his wife. He also enjoys snow skiing and has plied the slopes all over Europe, Canada, and the U.S., but now skis mainly at Catta-loochee, NC.

And now for the "old guy," Stuart Armor, who is performing with the new guy in Lend Me a Tenor in his 20th play with the Highlands Community Players. Stuart is a versatile, talented actor with a flair for comedy and accents. And no wonder he's so good at accents: he can speak several languages: Spanish, French, Russian, Bulgarian, Lithuanian, Italian, Romanian, Portuguese, British, and American!

Originally from Baltimore, Stuart spent many of his growing-up years in the Highlands area where he now owns and operates The Brick Oven and Movie Stop. In his younger days, he wandered around in Arizona, Kenya, Colorado, Scotland, Virginia and Mexico, learning about various esoteric things, such as dung eating beetles, hyraxes, methane production, medieval shoe manufacturing, the care and feeding of circus animals, yeast breads, kudzu powder production, and how to tell amusing tall tales.

He eventually came back to Highlands just in time to be drafted into one of the Community Players earlier productions, The Farndale Avenue Housing Estate Townswomen's Guild Dramatic Society's Production of A Christmas Carol, in which he appeared, quite fetchingly, he says, in a rather stunning evening gown of blue satin with gold trim.

But that was not his first theatrical adventure. Well-informed sources (his mom) say he was absolutely adorable as a Christmas elf in the kindergarten pageant with little pointy ears made of florist putty. Since then, it hasn't taken much to convince him to get on stage and be a murder victim, General Patton, British doctor, Asian house boy, weeping Spaniard or, many times, the ever popular "not terribly bright boy friend who rarely ever gets the girl."

Along with the rest of the cast, both guys, Bob and Stuart, can be seen in Lend Me a Tenor, opening at the Performing Arts Center in Highlands on Thursday, February 28, and running through Sunday, March 9. Tickets will be available beginning Feb. 23. Call for reservations at 526-8084.

- A Review -

The cast of ITC LIVE! now performing at The Instant Theatre.

Troupe shines at new improv technique at Instant Theatre

The new version of improv going on at the Instant Theatre Friday and Saturday nights, dubbed ITC LIVE!, brings a whole new dimension to ITC offerings.

Jillian Burfete, director of ITC LIVE!, on leave from stints in Chicago where she studied with Second City and Improv Olympic, has taught the ITC group — famous for its "Little Entertainments" — a whole new way to approach and perform improv.

During each performance, which begin at 8 p.m., audiences are treated first to a fascinating monologue by Bonnie Earman which is prompted by a suggestion from the audience. Earman somehow manages to weave the prompt into a true story and based on her story, the cast then jumps into the "long form" of improv.

Outside Chicago, New York and San Francisco, "long form" improv is virtually unknown. However, Highlands' audiences who have attended the ITC's Evenings of Little Entertainments, Little Entertainments, and Cocktail Hour Theatre are familiar with "short form" improv.

The long form is just double the fun.

What happens is the cast of six, which breaks into couples, takes Earman's story and weaves it into three ongoing vignettes which all together last 45 minutes.

However, each couple must be ready to stop and start again when prompted by another couple who can change the vignette at any time simply by making some kind of disturbance as they walk across the stage.

What happens is you get completely engrossed with one vignette to have it suddenly stop, but then another equally engrossing vignette starts and then it stops for yet another until you've actually watched three mini-plays with a beginning, a middle and if there's time, an end, before it's all over.

Earman says the process is bewildering because it works. "It's almost telepathy on the part of the actors because there's no script or rehearsal," she said.

As Burfete explains it, "While understanding the rules is very necessary the "long form" is most interested in exploring and developing the relationships of the characters within the scene to produce something beautiful and fluid that, to many, seems to have been written in advance. I usually compare it to a kind of made-up-on-the-spot three act play that develops from a simple audience suggestion. If all goes according to plan, characters are developed, explored and interwoven into a sometimes touching, often hilarious, romp of fun."

ITC LIVE! performs the "long form" in Act I and the "short form" in Act II.

Personally, I preferred the long form because I became engrossed in the three short comedies. That's not to say the short form wasn't good. It was, absolutely. But for obvious reasons, the long form has more substance.

In any case, the job this improv cast does is really good. Each year, the group becomes more polished, the outcome more professional. Under the tutelage of Burfete the cast and the audience have entered a new dimension.

Don't miss, Jillian Burfete, Becky Schilling, Madeleine Davis, Scott R. Paxton, Danny Osbourne, Kaley McCormack and Bonnie Earman in ITC LIVE! Friday and Saturday nights at 8 p.m. in ITC's Studio on Main at 310 Oak Square. Tickets are $20. Call 828-342-9197.

Local chef to demonstrate healthy recipes at Heart Fairs

Cooking healthy doesn't have to mean giving up good tasting food.

Area chef David Sanborn will be demonstrating that fact at two cooking demonstrations later this month as part of activities being held around the area to celebrate American Heart Month. The cooking classes — one in Highlands and one in Cashiers — are part of mini heart fairs being hosted by Highlands-Cashiers Hospital.

Those fairs will also include a chance to talk with local cardiologist Carl M. Curtiss, MD. FACC, get tips on eating healthier, exercise, and partake of a free brunch. The first mini fair will be held Saturday, Feb. 16 at the Highlands Civic Center, from 10:30 a.m. until 1 p.m.. A similar event will take place the following Saturday (Feb. 23) at the Cashiers Community Library in Cashiers. Sanborn's cooking demonstration begins at 11:30 a.m. In each case and the brunch follows at noon, and it's all completely free. No reservations are required.

Until recently, Sanborn owned and operated Sid and Charlie's restaurant at the Mountain Laurel Shoppes in Cashiers. Prior to that he was executive chef at Wade Hampton Country Club in Cashiers for two years. He recently became head chef and kitchen manager at Highlands-Cashiers Hospital as part of a major effort by the hospital to upgrade its food service.

"I'm very happy to now be a part of Highlands-Cashiers Hospital and to be benefiting the communities I love so much," he says.

Sanborn has been working with hospital dietitian Margret Downs, RD, and HealthTracks director Yvonne Smith, RD, MHS, to plan the fare for the cooking demonstrations. They will be assisting Sanborn and offering tips on how to cook heart healthy foods. Those attending the brunch will be able to sample the recipes being demonstrated earlier in the morning, along with a number of other goodies. On the menu are quiches, breakfast casseroles and healthy breads.

Copies of healthy recipes will also be available. In conjunction with Heart Month, area libraries are also featuring displays on healthy cooking books available in their collections.

A native of Florida, Sanborn actually grew up in Highlands and attended Highlands School, where he lettered in basketball and other sports. He graduated in 1986, and later married his wife Dawn, a cheerleader from long-time rival Blue Ridge School, who has worked as a physical therapy assistant at the hospital for the last eight years. The couple has two daughters, Sidney and Erin Charlie.

Sanborn has seen virtually every aspect of the restaurant business during his career, from beginning as a dishwasher, to becoming an executive chef, to being an owner.

"We are really pleased to have David join our team here at the hospital," says hospital President and CEO Ken Shull. "He is already made a tremendous difference in the quality of the hospital's food and in building the pride and morale of the entire dietary department. We appreciate his willingness to share his cooking expertise with the public at our heart fairs."

Each of the two mini-heart fairs opens at 10:30 a.m., when visitors will have the chance to visit several booths and talk with experts such as Curtiss and others on things they can do to reduce their risk factors for coronary artery disease and live healthier.

In addition to the two fairs, HealthTracks, the hospital's fitness and cardiac rehabilitation program, will hold a special open house on Thursday, Feb. 21, featuring a free "light" buffet lunch to kick off its new Heart Smart program.

Similar information will be available at the HealthTracks open house on Feb. 21, but participants will have the opportunity to see the facility, talk with staff, and try out some of its exercise equipment. Several exercise demonstrations are also planned for the "drop-in" event, which begins a noon and lasts until 2 p.m. Staff will also be available to answer questions about the new Heart Smart program, which is especially designed to help those with cardiac risk factors reduce their risk and min-enough to energize a small sector of his plant which enabled him to continue serving six customers and involved using 12-15 town of Highlands poles.

Sossomon also asked if since the termination of the franchise he had been granted a franchise to come back into town and Bond said yes.

The state recently took over the issuance of cable franchises from municipalities. However, cable companies are still subject to a municipality's pole attachment ordinance.

In his closing argument, McDevitt reminded the jury that liability on 74 drops and 418 poles had already been established by a previous court and Northland wanted compensation for the cost of repairing damage done.

He said HCG placed its cables in Northland's licensed space; that it moved the location of Northland's equipment; that it disconnected guy wires and used Northland's anchors; that it cut Northland's drop wire and then connected to its drop wires, tampered with Northland's underground distribution system and used its boxes on sides of houses – the mechanism that houses the lines that come into the houses.

Northland Regional Manager Bill Staley maintained that HCG's tampering with Northland's system which involves spacing intervals of 12-inches, 30-inches and 40-inches depending on the scenario, and other issues has created a potential hazard.

Attorney Sossomon said since Duke Power hasn't technically requested corrections on its poles, Northland's request for damages to fix the system is not necessary. He even suggested that complying with National Electrical Contractor Standards (NECS) isn't required by law and only the pole owner can demand a change.

Judge Winner said he believed adhering to NECS measurements were in most pole attachment agreements.

Sossomon also suggested the amount of $474,976 was speculative because specific costs per repairs on 418 poles weren't submitted.

McDevitt said his firm decided early on to spare the jury and the court a 418 pole-by-pole damage description and repair scenario but has that information.

It took the jury a little over two hours to return with the verdict. It did award less than requested.

Sossomon said it's likely HCG will appeal the verdict. It has 30 days to file an appeal and 10 days to file a motion for a new trial which if granted would be heard by Judge Winner again. Sossomon said in any case, requesting a new trial will extend the time HCG has to file an appeal.

County Facilities Plan, contact the School Planning Section at (919) 807-3557, or see the website at <http://schoolclearinghouse.org>.

Brigman said in addition to meeting the state statute, the Macon County School System, in partnership with the Macon County Commission and Martin-McGill, Inc of Asheville, joined forces in 1998 to develop a School Capital Facilities Program for the School Planning Committee.

"This action occurred following the decision during the fall of 1997 by Macon County officials to engage in a long-range planning process to assess school system capital needs and to evaluate the financial requirement of supporting the renovations and new construction that the process would inevitably recommend," said Brigman.

A copy of this plan is available for public review in at the Macon County Board of Education Office of Superintendent.

Since the submission of the NC School Facility Needs Capacity Summary and Plan in 2006, the Board of Education and county commission have agreed to make all attempts to recognize the goals established in the 1998 long-range plan and to keep schools within the recommended populations to justify "small schools."

In North Carolina small schools are recommended to be between 300-500 students in the elementary grades and 400-600 in the middle grades.

"With our current plan, each of our elementary schools will be at or below the recommended student populations to justify a "small school," including our Macon Middle School which is also a high priority at this time," said Brigman.

"As Superintendent of the Macon County School System, I commend the citizens of Macon County as well as our county commissioners and the Board of Education, both past and present, for their ongoing commitment to long-range planning and their commitment to making our county a great place to live and work," he said.

"I look forward to the construction of our new schools and hope the community will continue to support efforts to provide students and teachers a competitive learning environment in every school.

Brigman also asked commissioners to finance a regulation-size soccer field at Highlands School estimated to cost $268,500 and to fund a new metal roof and bathroom renovations there.

Commissioner Beale made a motion to fund the requests and for the county to reimburse itself with the first initial school improvement package next fiscal year. The motion passed unanimously.

PseudoCube[©]

AN3E – Level of Difficulty – Hard

THE SETUP:

The cube has 27 consecutive numbers in it, arranged in three layers with 9 numbers each. These numbers are arranged in a special pattern: For each layer, the sum of the three numbers in each row, column or diagonal, is 3 times its center number. Eight diagonals connect all 3 layers by running through the center number of the middle layer. Each diagonal contains 3 numbers equaling the total of the three center numbers. One of the diagonals is shown with circles.

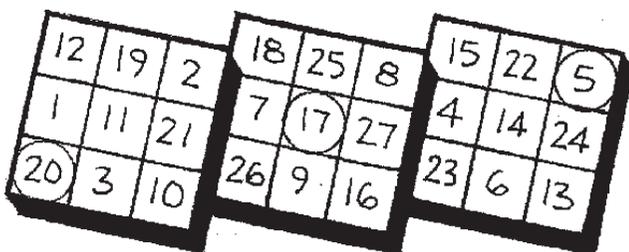

THE CHALLENGE:

Start with the three center numbers for each layer and the other numbers given. Now pour a cup of coffee, pick up a pencil and eraser and try to figure out where the other numbers belong. Good Luck!

The first correct solution emailed earns a coupon for a FREE cup of coffee from Buck's Coffee Cafe on Main Street.

Solution to #DZ1D in Feb. 7 issue

N-Cryptoku[©]

Object: Assign 9 different letters to each cell of 9 columns and 9 rows. In addition, nine 3 x 3 cells in the layout have the same nine different letters (this is similar to Sudoku but uses nine letters instead of nine numbers). A 'mystery word or phrase' using all nine different letters is designated by circled squares (other short words appear when solving, for which a list of meanings is provided). Every puzzle has a different 'mystery word or phrase' (no spaces).

How to Solve: Determine the nine different letters among those given. Try to solve the mystery word using the clue given and write it in. Other small words will appear in the puzzle. As in conventional crossword puzzles, a list of meanings for these ACROSS/ DOWN words is given and number positions shown. Doing them will speed up your solution to the puzzle. Using your powers of induction, inference and insight, place missing letters in all blank squares according to the rules noted above. Focus attention where the least number of letters are needed to complete a line, column or 3 x 3 cell.
