Town taxes could rise to offset deficit

It’s not set in stone yet, but as of Wednesday night’s special Town Board meeting it looks like the Town of Highlands 2008-2009 budget is up to about $140.2 million.

Thanks to healthy sales tax proceeds, which generated more than anticipated in the 2007-2008 budget, and continued ad valorem property tax revenues, the town’s general fund revenues are healthy.

For 2007-2008, $750,000 in anticipated sales tax proceeds were budgeted — as of April 30, 2008, $780,210 has come in with $90,000 anticipated by year’s end. At the end of 2006-2007, $802,249 in sales tax was realized.

To be safe, Town Administrator Richard Betz has budgeted $800,000 in potential sales tax revenue. Despite healthy revenues, expenditures are expected to increase due to rising fuel costs and fuel.

Highlands School art students present designs for Pine Street Park

On Wednesday, May 28 students in Ms. Taylor’s Art II class at Highlands School presented models of Pine Street Park to members of the Pine Street Committee, Commissioners Hank Ross and Dennis DeWolf, King and Janet Young and Selwyn Chalker as well as Town Planner Joe Cooley. Four groups of students rendered different versions of the park – two utilizing the street with no or minimal parking, two without the street. Each piped the creek and covered it with trees or a water feature, used lots of trees and native plants, walkways, sculptures, ground lighting and more. Each model included elements of Highlands’ history or character with two incorporating a Christmas tree for town lightings. The Pine Street Committee met later that day to discuss incorporating some of the students ideas in hopes of consolidating a design for presentation to the Town Board the second week in June.

Officer on foot-patrol gets tip from citizen

On May 21 around 2 p.m., Highlands Police officer Erika Olvera was patrolling the downtown area when she was approached by a citizen about suspicious activity in a nearby neighborhood.

Officer Olvera learned that a vehicle and driver unknown to the residents in the neighborhood was on Shelby Place Circle.

She responded to the lead and while calling in the vehicle and requesting backup, a white male carrying a backpack came down a wooded embankment toward the car.

When Officer Fish arrived, he and Olvera approached Mark Wells. Upon a routine “pat down” frisk for weapons, officers found marijuana, drug paraphernalia and a pipe.

After placing Wells, 50, of Greenville, S.C., under arrest for possession of drugs and drug paraphernalia, officers searched his vehicle and his backpack and found multiple controlled substances.

Approximately 12 ounces of marijuana and three grams of meth were found and seized. Drug paraphernalia included multiple pipes, grinders and plastic baggies with both drugs and residue of drugs in the bags.

All the seized items have been turned over to the Highlands County Sheriff’s Office.

Improving AYP scores top priority for Macon County Schools

At the May 27 Macon County School Board meeting held at Nantahala, the board accepted school improvement plans for all 11 schools in the county’s system for the upcoming school year.

The two-year plan spans the 2008-2010 school year with the ultimate goal being improved student performance as evidenced by Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) scores.

The AYP scores are based on student achievement in 13 areas tested by end-of-course and end-of-grade tests.

Action steps for Highlands School included semester benchmark exams given to all third through eighth grade students.

Teachers analyzed results based upon the passing percentage for individual students, the passing percentage on individual questions, and the passing percentage on each goal.

For the record

Dear Editor,

The article in the May 22 issue about the Town Board budget & nonprofit requests states that the Highlands Community Child Development Center (HCCDC) plans “to resurface its parking lot which was constructed with pervious pavers that have not held up as well hoped.” Though this is what was likely said at the meeting, it doesn’t tell the whole story.

In addition, the $10,000 grant request covered several other HCCDC facility projects and is not the cost for refurbishing the paver system alone. HCCDC installed three different types of permeable (or pervious) pavers in the parking lots in 2004 using an Upper Cullasaja Watershed Association/EPA grant to provide a voluntary, civic demonstration site for the public and contractors to be able to observe different paver products installed in the mountain environment.

The grant paid for the additional technology costs for the paver products and proper design and installation. I am not aware of what was said during the meeting, but all three paver products have worked well - actually, better than predicted by some agencies because permeable pavers are nominally rated for almost perfectly flat surfaces. HCCDC’s pavers had to be installed on varying slopes between 0% - 10% grade. Therefore, HCCDC is providing a real test of the pavers under high rainfall conditions and for gentle slopes.

HCCDC is not resurfacing its parking lot to replace the permeable pavers. We are planning to perform maintenance on the pavers to restore a higher rate of permeability. Periodic maintenance is a requirement of essentially all erosion control and stormwater practices if the owner intends to maintain the original function and performance. None of the Best Management Practices are “install and forget” items. I personally consider three years of operations following initial construction of the entire site to be good performance for these pavers and HCCDC’s traffic. I anticipate more than three years between major maintenance on the pavers following this initial cleanout and re-filling the porous areas with new, washed gravel chips.

HCCDC’s pavers feature a deep gravel under-layer and stormwater collection piping buried beneath the gravel bed. The design function of the paver pattern is to allow rain water to infiltrate the parking surface and for the water to be collected underground by the pavers and routed to HCCDC’s rain garden. The rain garden holds the excess runoff for less than 24 hours and removes most, if not all, of the pollutants, eg., oils and greases, by filtering the runoff using the plant root systems and the engineered soil mix installed in the garden. High volumes of runoff are held in the rain garden and released slowly into the town’s storm water sewer system after a rain event.

Periodic maintenance is required when the porous areas between the concrete pavers becomes plugged with soil, ground-up leaves, or small particles of trash. Several lessons have been learned at HCCDC since the original installation. For example, some post-construction work like landscaping created earlier-than-anticipated plugging problems for the pavers. Also, heavy winter leaf falls typical of the mountains must be removed quickly to minimize plugging by cars driving over the leaves daily. Both the HCCDC board and UCWA would appreciate a clarification in your next issue so that the public will not draw the wrong conclusion about permeable pavers and their potential value as a stormwater runoff management practice here in Highlands. Further, please extend our invitation to everyone to come by HCCDC to see the pavers for themselves.

I will be pleased to give them a personal tour of the site and the several imaginative and environmentally-friendly stormwater management practices installed at HCCDC. I can be reached at 371-2086 (cell) or 526-8905 (HCCDC).

Important barriers were broken

Dear Editor,

As many of you have heard “The Dave Linn Foundation” has come to the end of its mission of promoting an active lifestyle among the physically challenged. The foundation started in the fall of 2001 and went on to help many physically challenged individuals throughout Western North Carolina and North Georgia during its years of existence.

DLP was able to help break the barriers of the physically challenged with help of the loving and caring citizens of Western North Carolina and throughout...

Smith listed other than The Highlander failed over the last 50 years. Highlands' Newspaper hasn’t. In fact, year six begins July 18, 2008.

NeSmith wrote how thankful he is for the readers, subscribers and advertisers of The Highlander Newspaper over the years. Clearly, every publisher should be extremely thankful for community support. But what NeSmith should really be thankful for is the backing of his family’s million-dollar corporation that will likely support his endeavors far into the future.

Conversely, Highlands’ Newspaper is a local business in the old Highlands tradition, run by a family without a treasure chest who has called Highlands home for 11 years. We are truly, truly thankful for our readers, local columnists and advertisers because without them, the paper absolutely would not exist.

Accolades concerning the birth, growth and success of Highlands’ Newspaper were certainly not expected from NeSmith in his article. However, when a newspaper that considers itself the “newspaper of record” leaves out a very important part of Highlands’ history – a story which will undoubtedly be archived in The Hudson Library – a shadow of doubt is cast on every claim found on its pages.

So beware. Last week by its omission, The Highlander declared Highlands’ Newspaper nonexistent. Next week it could be your business, your family, maybe even you.
sent to the state lab for identification.

"Based on the lab test results, other charges may be forthcoming," said Police Chief Bill Harrell.

The Highlands Magistrate set Wells' bond at $35,000. He is currently in the Macon County jail. Wells' vehicle has been impounded and $300 in cash was also seized.

"This incident points to the importance of having officers both on bike and foot patrol," said Chief Harrell. "Foot and bike patrol makes officers much more approachable versus in a vehicle. In this case, information led directly to a drug arrest."

Harrell said he's been told this is the biggest controlled substance drug arrest ever made in the town limits of Highlands. - Kim Lewicki

LAUGHING AT LIFE

Liar, liar, pants on fire!

Did I ever tell you I once fixed bayonets in Korea?

"You were in the Korean War?"

"No, I owned a little repair shop in downtown Seoul. Soldiers would bring in their broken bayonets and I would fix them."

Ah, yes, the skillful art of lying. Sometimes every politician and satirist must do to succeed on planet Earth.

Did I tell you that when the lil’ missus and I landed in Dubai this past winter, we were under sniper fire?

OK, stop right there. If you accept that statement and don’t ask questions, then have I ever gotten you to think we were under sniper fire without actually telling you we were or weren’t? I was merely asking a question.

If you’re like most Americans who walk around with “duh” looks on their faces and never ask questions, then I have successfully lied to you without actually lying to you. You deserve it! Of course, in reality, the sniper I’m referring to was 859 miles away in Baghdad, but, if caught lying, I could pay him to swear he was aiming in our direction.

I’m almost ashamed to tell you (The key word here is almost.) I was once an awesome liar. But wait…let me tell you what separates me from the politicians who, of course, have no shame. Having worked as an undercover narcotics officer for years required me to look drugdealers square in the eye and lie through my teeth. The better the lie, the better chance I had of staying alive. I confess I have lied to many, many dope peddlers. So sue me!

Oh, here’s another major difference between myself and politicians. If I got caught telling a bald-faced lie, I couldn’t tell the dope peddler I misspoke and lie would go on. Nope you can bet the caca was about to hit the electrically controlled whirling device and something not good was about to happen. I once got caught in a serious misspeak and wound up having to throw a huge living room chair through a giant plate glass window to escape. Would I lie? Of course not ‘cause who could make that up? Thank goodness storm windows had not been invented yet.

I love the term misspeak. Is that a fun word, or what? What’s even more amazing is that if you look up the word misspeak, the lie word is nowhere in the definition. Ta da, satire writers and politicians are off the hook when caught. We simply misspoke.

Carefully watch a politician when being interviewed. They practically never answer the question asked. They want to get through the interview without having to misspeak. If the question does not support their position, they simply say something unrelated. Our current president is famous for that. We also have a candidate who can talk and talk and never misspeak because he doesn’t say anything. Now that’s smart and everyone loves it.

Here’s an example of an interview of me questioning one of the presidential candidates. I won’t give his name so I don’t embarrass him.

“Excuse me for asking, sir, but can’t you help noticing your smokin’ hot, blond bombshell trophy wife whose daddy owns an entire booze conglomerate. Do you still beat her…yes or no?”

“Thank you for inviting me to this interview. As you are aware, I am a smokin’ hot, attractive retired Navy fighter pilot jock who wants the same in a life partner.”

“Yeah, yeah, I know but do you still beat her? Answer carefully, yes or no.”

“Thank you, again, for allowing me to answer that question. It would depend on what your definition of beat is. She allows me to beat every political opponent that comes my way. She also allows me to beat off other women, har, har, har.” At this point you may have forgotten the question, have a blank expression with drool running out the corner of your mouth.

As you are aware, Americans have little say in picking their president. This is done by delegates who have also mastered misspeak.

Hillary is toast because she is a Pinocchio extraordinaire. She should have lied less and misspoke more. Funny, she is currently trying to pry her foot out of her mouth for speaking the truth. Since all politicians lie, oops, I mean misspeak, the selection for the delegates boils down to picking the one who misspoke the least…we hope. Good luck, only your life depends on it and I ain’t lying.

I want to thank my generous readers for their contributions to Partners in Health. You are now partners in health. I’ll wait another few days for any additional checks, and then bundle up the donations and send them to Boston. The current total, with my matching donation, will be $1,330. Thanks. I looked at the PIH web site and found how our money might be used. We gave enough to buy mosquito nets to protect 400 families from malaria.

Partners in Health might buy enough AIDS drugs for 10 patients, or treat malnutrition in a dozen kids. I hope you feel as good as I do, Partners.

The long Memorial Day weekend is nearing an end. I’ve paused to recall my family’s contribution in World War II. My Dad Bill, and all his brothers, Bob, Frank, Al, Ray, and Mark served. Ray died at Midway, piloting General Tinker’s plane. Bob, also a pilot, was shot down over Germany and imprisoned at Slagag Luft III until the end of the war. Frank, a journalist and infantry officer was transferred days before his platoon was destroyed at the battle of the Bulge. Al and my Dad, Bill, were both officers. Dad served as a communications officer aboard a destroyer in the Pacific. Mark, the youngest, and last surviving brother, enlisted at age 17.

My grandfather insisted that Dad serve, although as a married father of two young children, he could have stayed home. It was years later that I became aware of the struggle between my mother, who felt Dad’s role was to care for his family, and my grandfather, who wanted all his sons to repay the debt that he felt we owed to this great country.

Grandfather ultimately won the battle for Dad’s soul, and drove a wedge between my parents that never healed.

My parents’ love was a casualty of the war that was not measured in battle field deaths and injuries. I am certain that Mom never forgave either my Dad or my grandfather. They’re all dead now, all but Mark. Gone too, are Red and Blackie, who were married to Dad’s sisters, Anne and Mary. They also served. Mom took her anger to the grave. I’m sure Dad carried his dismay to his. Ray’s son, Ray Jr, graduated from the Air Force Academy and was killed in Viet Nam. My brother was a naval officer; my sister, an Army attorney and I am an Army doctor. I guess we were the last of the family to feel the need to serve our country. Unfortunately, the immigrant mentality doesn’t last.

Frances Elise Chastain

Frances Elise Chastain, 80, died Tuesday, May 27, 2008 at a Highlands-Cashiers Hospital. She was a native of Macon County, the daughter of the late Edward and Ada Bryson Chastain. She was a homemaker and a member of Clear Creek Baptist Church.

She is survived by two sisters, Mildred Neely and Carrie Crain of Highlands, NC. She is also survived by a number of nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by two sisters, Osa Beck and Estelle Talley; three brothers, Earl (Buck), Clyde, and Carl Chastain.

Funeral services will be held Friday, May 30 at 2 p.m. at Clear Creek Baptist Church with Rev. Oliver Rice, Rev. Walter Wilson, Rev. Everett Brewer and Rev. Gary McCall officiating. Burial will be held at Clear Creek Community Cemetery. Lamar Nix, Vaughn Neely, Stacey Houston, Leslie Neely, Edison Neely and Scott Houston will serve as pallbearers.

The family will receive friends Thursday, May 29 from 6-8 p.m. at Bryant-Grant Funeral Home in Highlands.

To all who have served ...

I want to thank all who have served, those who died and those who survived, those who fought in WWII and those who served in later wars and in the lulls between wars. Some 16 million Americans served in World War II. More than 400,000 died. I am indebted to your family as well as to my own.

Lizzie asked that I thank her Mom, an Army nurse in England and Germany during and after the War. Thanks, Helen. My Dad and each of his brothers achieved considerable success after the war, but each felt that military service was his greatest accomplishment, his proudest moment. They were of a generation who believed that country was greater than self, greater than family, greater even than life. We owe them much. If only we could share their sense of duty, their willingness to sacrifice for the common good.

Today we live in a very different world, one in which magnetic ribbons and American flag lapel pins pass for patriotism. We are engaged in wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, wars which are fought by the military rather than by the country. As the sun sets on this Memorial Day, I thank those who served then and those who serve today.

The Problem of Suffering

Here's a theological puzzler for you: Start with the basic premise that God is all-powerful and all-loving. Then why do humans suffer? Why didn't God intervene to stop catastrophes, both natural and man-made? Why did an all-powerful, loving God allow hundreds of thousands of people to suffer from the loss of their lives or their loved ones' lives this year in Burma and China? Why didn't God intervene to stop the Holocaust, or the genocides in Cambodia and Rwanda?

These are the questions that haunt the author of a new book, God’s Problem: How the Bible Fails to Answer our Most Important Question — Why we Suffer (231.85). For most of his life Bart Ehrman was a devout Christian: he was an altar boy at an Episcopal church all through his teen-age years, he went to a fundamentalist Bible College, then to Princeton Theological Seminary and received both a master of divinity degree — to be a minister — and a Ph.D. in New Testament Studies. He currently teaches the New Testament and early Christianity at University of North Carolina Chapel Hill.

While he was teaching at Princeton a decade ago he was asked to teach a course about “the problem of suffering in the biblical tradition.” After contemplating this problem for a few years he lost his faith completely. Now he is an agnostic, not really believing in God but unwilling to be so bold as to declare categorically there is no God. (It’s kind of strange to think of him continuing to teach classes in Christianity!)

This book is an outgrowth of his research into the problem of human suffering and how it is addressed in the Bible. Mr. Ehrman moves through the Bible from Genesis to Revelation, and through the generous quotation of passages illustrates the following biblical explanations for human suffering:

1. suffering is a test to see if your faith is true — trials of Job, Abraham told to sacrifice Isaac
2. suffering can be redemptive, that is, good can come from evil, a good that could not have happened if the evil had not existed

Mr. Ehrman asserts that the idea that suffering is atonement for sins is central to Christian theology. “This entire view of atonement is rooted in the classical understanding of suffering: sin requires suffering as punishment. Otherwise, God could simply forgive people whenever he wished, and there would be no reason for Christ to die. The Christian doctrine of atonement, and salvation for eternal life, is rooted in the prophetic view that people suffer because God is punishing them for disobedience.”

Many people have sent him their ideas of what the Bible says about suffering, and chief among them is that “God gave us free will.” He says that he didn’t address this because it is not an argument made by Biblical authors so didn’t fit into the theme of his book, but he also has plenty of arguments against the idea that free will is the root of the problem.

Other people think that somehow in the end, maybe after death, we’ll understand why there was suffering. Then everything will stand explained and be justified. I have to admit I am one of those people — I love the song “Farther Along” (author unknown): “When death has come and taken our loved ones, leaving our home so lonely and drear, then do we wonder why others prosper, living so wicked year after year. Farther along we’ll know all about it; farther along we’ll understand why, cheer up my sister, live in the sunshine, we’ll understand it all by and by.”

Mr. Ehrman approvingly quotes Ivan Karamazov from Fyodor Dostoyevsky’s Brothers Karamazov, who rejects the possibility that there can be any explanation good enough to justify the suffering he has seen: “I have a childlike conviction that the sufferings will be healed and smoothed over, and...that ultimately, at the world’s finale, in the moment of eternal harmony, there will occur and be revealed something so precious that it will suffice for all hearts, to allay all indignation, to redeem all human villainy, all bloodshed; it will suffice not only to make forgiveness possible, but also to justify everything.

Weddings, like wars, bring out the best and the worst in people. That famous list of stressful life events puts marriage at 50, on a scale where the highest score (the death of a spouse) is 100, and things like vacations and Christmas rank in the low teens. I look at TV programs like “Bridezillas,” and sigh with envy. It amazes me how certain brides go so far off the handle, and get away with it. I’m trying hard to be polite and gracious, but there are times when I’d love to sneak off behind the barn and wall like a banshee. There’s no such thing as perfection, but you can really drive yourself nuts aching for it.

Speaking of wedding preparations, we recently found ourselves in a different part of town, and decided to try the other dry cleaners for John’s wedding suit. Upon entering, we saw a huge pile of laundry, which probably contained about 20 items. They belonged to a rather attractive blonde woman in expensive jeans. We must have waited about ten minutes, during which a second woman arrived, and anticipating a long wait, took off. Two other women also came in, and no time did the first woman look in the direction of any of the other clients, or apologize for taking up so much time, or apologize for waiting, or make eye contact with any of the people she kept waiting. I am trying hard to be polite about it, and have inconvenienced everyone else in the store.

We are in the process of deciding on the wedding location, a major catering rethink, a new florist, and a change of soloist. It’s meant a lot of rethinking, and a fair amount of stress and tension. The nice lady at the florist shop consoled me with the very wise comment that weddings come together during the last 48 hours, and it certainly seems that ours is going that way. What I find particularly touching is how much people are willing to step up to the plate, to make sure your wedding day is a wonderful, special one. The kindness of many folks – even perfect strangers – is amazing, and we are deeply grateful.

One thing I’d never suspected was so complicated was compiling our invitation list. Just the immediate family wound up being about 25 people, a considerable chunk of our planned ballpark figure of 100. After that, it was a real Sophie’s Choice. Did we invite this friend, or that friend? If we invited one person, and not another, would we hurt someone’s feelings? Couples are particularly tricky. When you announce you are getting married, someone always quips, “But do you honestly know any happily-married couples?” Actually, we do. We know several remarkable couples. When you see the way that these people look at each other after decades of marriage, the way they love, respect and support each other, it’s an inspiration. Unfortunately, there’s also a flip side. Do you have a dear male friend, who is an absolute doll, but whose wife is a complete dragon? Or a sweet female friend, whose husband is grumpy and permanently disagreeable? It puts you in an awkward position. Do you ignore the good friend, or invite the couple, comprised of one nice person, and one person who probably hasn’t even really felt they should be on the guest list. If we could, we’d invite 500 people, not 100, and hope folks understand our constraints. To top it all, we ran out of printed invitations, in spite of all our planning.

Wedding presents were tricky, too. Since I moved to Highlands from New York, we have had a duplication of toasters, blenders, televisions, etc., by combining our two households. We don’t really need much in the way of house wares, so I came up with what I hope is a good solution. Our yard is almost completely devoid of flowers and shrubbery. With that in mind, we’ve put together a list of plants which would make our home a more welcoming and colorful place. Hopefully, this will seem like a good idea to others, too. Without sounding corny, the best present of all is the good will and warm wishes of our friends. I only hope they know how much their friendship is a joy to us!

At no time did the first woman look in the direction of any of the other clients, or apologize for taking up so much time, or suggest that any of us go ahead of her. No, she fussed and fiddled, going over the cleaning instructions on the labels of her clothes in great detail, totally consumed by her own desires and concerns. Finally, she picked up armloads of clean clothes on hangers, and sailed out of the dry cleaners. Not once did she stop by people whose comments implied that they really felt they should be on the guest list. If we could, we’d invite 500 people, not 100, and hope folks understand our constraints. This past Memorial Day weekend marked the official beginning of the summer season. Many people have already returned and we expect the remainder of our seasonal residents to return over the next couple of weeks.

It is always great to see not only that group but also those people who travel to Highlands on the weekends to enjoy the clean atmosphere and cool temperatures of summer at 4,000 feet along with the incredibly fine restaurants, hiking, fishing, golf and shops we are blessed with on the plateau.

For some it is simply a time to unwind and sit in a comfortable chair and read great books. Whatever your desires, we welcome you all in your return to join what we think is one of the finest places on earth year-round.

This past week I attended an important meeting of the Southwestern Commission. This organization of elected officials and managers supports the political and financial activities of the seven counties in southwestern North Carolina. One of the concerns of all of us is the assessed values on the fair market value of real property, and it pertains to the Machinery Act of North Carolina which was made permanent in 1937 but has undergone only minimal reform to meet changing circumstances since that time. This has resulted in very rapid rises in taxable values for non-present-use valued properties along with the extraordinary appreciation in real property values on owner-occupied residential properties.

Despite double-digit increases in property values, local governments such as Highlands are finding it more difficult to offset these increases by reduction in tax millage rates because of mounting infrastructure needs stemming from growth.

Therefore, it was resolved by us at this Southwestern Commission meeting “that the Board of western North Carolina officials respectfully requests the General Assembly to establish a Joint Committee of the House and Senate to work with the Department of Revenue, professional associations, government associations, local governments and citizens to study the state’s property tax structure and analyze the impact on owner-occupied residential properties, the effectiveness of the current homestead exemption program, and replacement alternatives to property taxation favored by citizens to fund local government needs.”

This is a process which has been needed in North Carolina for some years and let us hope our representatives in Raleigh listen to our request.

In our budget discussions last Wednesday the Town of Highlands Commissioners were more generous to charitable organizations than we have ever been. The amount was increased from $52,000 last year to $62,000 this coming year. We have many fine organizations in Highlands who certainly deserve assistance in their capital spending for which to improve the quality of life of all our people. The budget process continued this Wednesday night as we completed the approval process for fiscal ’08-’09. This may mean a slight increase in the millage but we will not know until the final numbers are calculated.

The Board is also in the process of reviewing the Town’s current charter and...

You Heard It Here First

One of the most dramatic images that sticks in my mind is a satellite photo of the Korean Peninsula. I think it was in conjunction of an advertisement but I can’t remember what it was advertising. The shot was taken at night; North Korea was pitch black, South Korea was lit up like a Christmas tree. The difference was so graphic I thought it must be doctored, but, as I recall, the advertiser was very credible and I had to believe it.

What would account for such a black and white difference? Let’s explore. For about 4,000 years, Korea was a unified country. One people, one government, one language, one currency, one country. When the Japanese were defeated in Sept. 1945, the U.S. and Russia were unable to agree on a government suitable to both, so they split the country at the 38th parallel, and installed governments of their choice, Russia in the North, the U.S. in the South.

The North has a somewhat greater landmass than the South, while the South has more than twice as many people. I can’t find what the relative populations were in 1945, but I’m certain the difference was much smaller. As the effects of their socialist government took hold, the birth rate of North Korea plunged. All sorts of catastrophes have challenged their government including the collapse of the Communist block and a famine that forced them to accept contributions of food from the U.S. and others.

The Gross Domestic Product of South Korea, with a republic form of government and a capitalist economy, is $1.276 trillion, or $26,277 per capita. In North Korea, with their socialist economy the Gross Domestic Product is $22.85 billion, or $1,007 per capita. I can’t imagine a better demonstration of the difference between the two economic philosophies.

While the U.S. is busy shipping food to the still starving people of North Korea, Kim Jong-il threatens the region with nuclear aggression. For years, he has used his nuclear ambitions to extract food and oil from peace-loving nations. Meanwhile, the South Korean leadership has created an economic powerhouse that has become a model for developing countries. It has a very advanced and modern infrastructure, it is a world leader in science and information technology. It is the world’s largest shipbuilder and is large in automobile manufacturing, steel production, biotechnology and robotics.

Could the difference be more dramatic? South Korea’s star is obviously rising. How about ours? Frankly, I’m seeing signs of slippage here. Take automobiles.

Recently, Frank Luntz, big-time political consultant and Fox News contributor, was interviewing a focus group in either Michigan or Ohio. I can’t remember which. He was taking the temperature of a focus group of folks previously employed in the auto industry. He asked a fellow, “I’ll bet you didn’t take your usual vacation to Florida last winter and you probably don’t have a new car in the driveway like you have each year in the past, do you?” Mournfully, the answer was no. That’s what making $15,000 per year working on an assembly line will do to an industry. Shortsighted labor unions and gutless managers made vital employers seek opportunities elsewhere.

You know my opinion of the National Education Association. To give you a second opinion, let me quote from Wikipedia on the subject: “Substantial criticism has been leveled against the NEA and other teachers’ unions for allegedly putting the interests of teachers ahead of students and for consistently opposing reforms that critics claim would help students but harm union interests.

The NEA has supported class size reductions and across-the-board salary increases for teachers; two measures that increase the number and compensation of NEA teachers. On the other hand, the NEA has often opposed measures such as merit pay, school vouchers, reforms to teacher tenure… and many accountability reforms.

What’s the point? The current Democrat campaign is being contested by two politicians who have strong socialist tendencies. For starters, both want to institute socialized medicine and make no bones about it. Both say they will raise taxes, another step toward socialism. And both strongly support a labor movement that would continue to damage our Giving the Devil Rays their due.

Fifty games into the Major League Baseball season, the team with the best record in baseball is not the defending champion Boston Red Sox. It is also not the Chicago Cubs, New York Yankees (who are not worthy of expletive deleted status any longer) or New York Mets. (And it sure as heck isn’t my Pirates.) Nope, the team with the best record in baseball after 50 games is the Tampa Bay Rays (having dropped the devil from their name last season...coincidence...we’ll have to ask the Church Lady for confirmation on that one).

When most people think of Florida, they immediately think of sunny beaches and old people (a winning combination). However, the Rays are a team built primarily on youth, with just the right touch of experience (or “oldness” as John McCain would say). The Rays’ starting rotation has an average age of 24, and their lineup contains six starters under the age of 30. The experience for the Rays comes in the form of designated hitter Cliff Floyd, and also in their bullpen, which has several veteran relievers in addition to a rejuvenated Troy Percival closing out ballgames. This particular version of the Rays has been built through solid drafting and savvy front office moves, particularly the acquisition of first baseman Carlos Pena and the aforementioned Percival. The signing of young position players such as BJ Upton and Evan Longoria to good contracts has also allowed the Rays to have quality play up and down their lineup, which is a necessity in the American League.

Despite having a terrific start to the season, the Rays are currently only a half game ahead of the Boston Red Sox in the AL East, which suggests that the margin of error for Tampa Bay is relatively small. At this point, many baseball columnists and insiders see Tampa Bay as a nice surprise that will eventually come back to reality before the season is complete. However, Tampa Bay has learned something from their neighbors in Miami, and that is that young pitching and speed can equal big time success in the postseason. The Florida Marlins have won two World Series titles in the past fifteen years by committing to youth and the right free agent pickups. This Rays team is actually built perfectly for a long playoff run, with two young flamethrowers at the top of the rotation in Kazmir and Edwin Jackson to complement a veteran bullpen and a speedy lineup that can manufacture runs.

Unfortunately for the Rays, the challenge is going to be actually making the playoffs in a brutal AL East. It is unlikely that the Rays will be able to keep pace with a deeper and more talented Red Sox squad intent on defending their World Series Championship. Thus, the Rays are going to have to aim for the Wild Card spot in the playoffs and hope to get the Red Sox in a short series where their two studs could pitch them to victory. There remains a long way to go in the long Major League Baseball season, and with injuries and fatigue always being a factor for young teams, it is possible that the Rays could wither as the season moves along. Regardless of the outcome of the season, it is always great to see a young franchise that has been down have success. It gives hope to fans of small market teams like myself that through the right combination of personnel moves and good drafting that success is a possibility and not the pipe dream that many small market teams face on a yearly basis.

I am an American soldier, I serve in the forces that guard my country and my way of life. I am prepared to give my life in its defense.” That is the First General Order for all soldiers in the United States Army. I memorized that in 1973, and I remembered it as well today as I did the day I learned it — and I believe it today as well.

While I served until 1992, it was always clear to me as a soldier what my duty was and I suspect it is the same for those serving today. As a soldier it was not my choice where I served or what I had to do. As a young officer I commanded many soldiers and as it is with the army, lost a few brave souls. I can also remember many a night being afraid; whether on the deck of a small watercraft pitching in rough seas, rappelling from a sheer cliff or hovering helicopter, or sitting in a hole in the ground with another soldier watching in the darkness for some unforeseen foe. It was all very traumatic to say the least.

War is an awful thing for anyone who serves. So many brilliant minds have had equally brilliant thoughts about its futility yet few seem to heed and it still goes on. American was born of Revolutionary War. We have continued in war with our Civil War, the two World Wars, Korea, and Vietnam. In all those wars the American people were intensely involved.

In the Revolution, the war was on our door steps and the ‘civilians’ were literally in the war. That also was true in the Civil War. During the World Wars our civilians lived the war every day. Serving in war-time jobs, conducting war-bond drives, scrap drives of all sorts, struggling with short supply of just about everything and the daily news of the loss of loved ones, friends and neighbors in battle. During Vietnam our streets filled with demonstrators to end the war; if you did not see it yourself in the streets then the images filled the TV screens every night.

This war, or whatever it is, has not reached out to the general American public as those wars before reached us. There are no scrap drives — I guess American is still the land of plenty. There are no war bond campaigns — the government just gets loans from China. And there are no mothers marching in the streets to end a draft to keep their sons home from war. I believe if there were a draft, and the unwilling were compelled to fight in this war, the streets would have been filled with people protesting this war and it would be over by now.

One thing is the same today as in all wars; the rivers of tears shed by the families of those soldiers who are not coming home. In all wars we have lost members of the military in battle, but this is the first time we have asked our military to endure returning to the war zone three and now four times. Can you imagine standing at a checkpoint everyday and wondering if the next one is the one that is going to blow up and kill or maim you? I can’t imagine the mental stress they are undergoing every day. If they survive it physically, mentally it stills takes its toll. The suicide rate among our soldiers is at record highs and one out of every eight of our soldiers suffers from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD). Is it real? Think of the worst event of your life and how it affected you the next day and the day after that. Try to imagine living with that event reoccurring every day for a year, then, just when you thought it was over you had to go back to wherever that was and face it again. Now maybe we can understand what these soldiers go through in their three and four tours of duty.

As for the end of this ‘War’ more and more Americans are becoming frustrated, concerned and just plain outraged with the cost of the war, and more and more are saying, ‘Enough is enough.’ I fear however we have not seen the final cost of this war; nor in dollars and not in human cost. I fear the impact of the billions in loans made to foreign governments will have on our economy, but more so I worry how our soldiers will survive post Iraq. If you remember post Vietnam, you will remember the answer was not well.

The Senate has passed a bill by a vote of 75-22 for a new GI benefit plan that the we now await the House vote and the President said he will Veto the bill. One opponent of the bill said, “It (the Bill) is too generous and will encourage soldiers to leave the service too soon.” Too generous? I can not imagine how we can be too generous to those who served so well.

This country has a debt to pay. Next week I will express Another POV.
Girl Scouts donate cookies and money to ‘The Pantry’

Highlands Girl Scouts Junior Troop #219 donated 23 boxes of Girl Scout Cookies and $100 to the Food Pantry of Highlands. Pictured is the Troop giving a check to Barbara Landwehr, co-director of the Food Pantry and Mary Heffington who gave the Girl Scouts a tour of Pantry.

related costs plus interest on investments has decreased.

“The average rate has dropped below 3% on local Certificates of Deposit,” wrote Betz in his budget message.

“General fund expenditures are projected to increase dramatically this year,” said Betz. “The cost of fuel is anticipated to increase by 50%, health insurance by 10% and salaries by 5%. With those projections there is expected to be a deficit of $350,000 in general fund revenues, assuming the town wants to continue funding the Town Hall Reserve Fund, the Lake Remediation Fund, stormwater projects and the Greenway Trail.”

The town has budgeted $115,000 per year for the Town Hall Reserve, $150,000 for Lake Remediation, $100,000 for stormwater projects and the creation of an ordinance and $100,000 for the Greenway.

At last week’s budget work session, commissioners agreed to raise the tax rate from .135 per $100 valuation to .155 which would generate an additional $377,934 alleviating the projected deficit in the general fund revenues.

The property revaluation that went into effect last year increased the tax base in the Macon County portion of the town limits from about $1.11 billion to $1.73 billion—a 56% increase.

Betz said Richard Lightner, the county tax supervisor, reports that the tax base will increase by about $20 million this year, for a total of about $1.825 billion up from about $1.805 billion last year. Those figures are based on a 98% tax collection rate and includes Jackson County tax revenue and Macon County personal property.

Due to the cost of living expenses and the rising cost of gasoline, commissioners are rethinking the 5% salary increase which would include a cost of living increase of 4% and merit increases of about 1%.

Commissioner Larry Rogers said cheap workers don’t work and good workers aren’t cheap. To keep and recruit good employees, both he and Commissioner Hank Ross suggested more than a 4% increase. They asked Betz to calculate how an increase of 5% with a merit increase of 1% and a cost of living increase of 6% with a merit of 1% would impact the budget.

To foot that bill, commissioners discussed the possibility of increasing the tax rate to .160 which would generate an additional $467,384 which could offset both salary increases over 5% and take care of the projected revenue deficit.

Since landfill rates have increased due to new state mandates, Betz suggested an increase in residential solid waste fees from $14 per month to $16 per month. “This would generate $48,000 and would only mean an additional $24 annual per residential,” he said.

However, Commissioner Buz Dotson suggested raising commercial solid waste fees rather than residential rates since commercial entities can take the cost of business off their taxes.

No money has been budgeted for Pine Street Park improvements or stormwater improvements associated with the park.

Commissioner Hank Ross, who is on the Pine Street Park committee, suggested the board consider funding stormwater improvements as they apply in the park for the 2008-2009 budget.

Though fixing stormwater problems in the general area of the park, the Episcopal Church, Fifth, Pine and Fourth streets is estimated to be several hundred thousand dollars, commissioners think the $100,000 currently budgeted for stormwater projects would be enough to remediate stormwater problems in the park proper.

Betz will return on June 4 with a new budget scenario. Once approved, the budget is set to be accepted at the June 25 meeting. The June 18 meeting has been cancelled.

Camping trip marks start of Highlands tradition

On April 25 and 26, Highlands Police Officer Richard Davis had 13 students, including his son and nephew, to his residence for a weekend camping trip.

The purpose of the outing was to create a closer connection between young people and law enforcement.

Over the weekend students enjoyed riding their personal ATVs, dirt bikes, live music and a cook out. These trips will continue throughout the summer for those students interested.

“I believe the camping, four-wheeling, and guitar picking extravaganza was an excellent opportunity to bridge the gap and relate with the young people in our community about the lives officers lead out of uniform and the four marked sides of a steel cruiser that typically robes them,” said Highlands Police Chief Bill Harrell. “I am convinced that the actions of our officers involved in such activities are prime examples of the community policing philosophy at its best, specifically as it relates to young people.”

Officers in the Highlands Police Department also participate in Big Brothers & Big Sisters, Highlands School Read-a-thon, Rotary, Shop-with-a-Cop, Community Seat Belt Safety Projects, and the most eagerly anticipated inception of Highlands first Law Enforcement Explorer Post for teens!

“Participation in these activities make a difference in the community and keep lines of communication open,” said Chief Harrell. “I am extremely proud to be a part of the efforts these men and women are tirelessly giving toward raising the bar at the Highlands Police Department and the quality of life in our community.

The Highlands Police will soon be implementing a Law Enforcement Explorer Program in the Highlands community and more camping trips are planned for the summer for any students interested in participating.
The greatest sermon I ever heard preached was while I sat on a cold concrete bench on a bright fall day. No words were spoken. In the silence broken only by the breeze rustling the stiffened leaves of autumn, I listened to a message given through the creak of heels and the sound of a rifle being shifted from right arm to left arm by a guard walking his post at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, Arlington National Cemetery, Arlington, VA.

That sermon echoed throughout the hills in Virginia and around the world that Abraham Lincoln was correct when he said, "We highly resolve these dead shall not have died in vain." It was on yet another battlefield in Virginia, Gettysburg 1863. But he was wrong in saying, "the world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here;" but oh, so right, "it can never forget what they did here."

Jesus speaks often about forgiveness and joy and responsibility, about caring and commitment; but rarely does he speak about love. When he does speak about love, he speaks to us in utter simplicity — not rarely does he speak about love. When he does speak about love, he speaks to us in utter simplicity — not about warm feelings, not about candlelight dinners, or moonlight walks on the beach, but about the nitty-gritty of our lives.

Such are the words of the gospel: "Greater love has no one than this, that he lay down his life for his friends."

I think, were Jesus in the pulpit last Sunday morning, he would hold up a military uniform and click of heels and the sound of a rifle being shifted from right arm to left arm by a guard walking his post at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, Arlington National Cemetery, Arlington, VA.

I listened to a message given through the creak of heels and the sound of a rifle being shifted from right arm to left arm by a guard walking his post at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, Arlington National Cemetery, Arlington, VA.

Heavenly Father, through the strength of those who have served in our armed forces, we pray that peace will be restored in this world; and through our own witness, that we may serve you in our own humble way. Amen.

Buckle Down coach materials were purchased in preparation for the end-of-grade testing practice and for reteaching in class, group and individual settings.

The test results for 2007-2008 haven't been released yet, but end-of-grade tests for 2006-2007 indicate reading scores for third through eighth grade ranged from 95.23% to 100% and 2006-2007 math scores ranged from 76.19% to 96% across the grades.

With improvement always possible, steps have been taken as of January 2008 to raise scores school-wide.

School-wide learning labs are being offered to focus on makeup work and attendance as well as academic remediation. Elementary ESL students are offered tutoring two mornings a week and elementary, middle and high school students can participate in the accelerated reader programs.

Afterschool tutoring has been available for elementary and middle school students since March with students invited to participate based on semester examination results.

Next year, two weeks before the end-of-grade tests, all elementary and middle school students will be invited to participate in intensive after-school tutoring sessions.

Over the past year, teachers have been using a variety of instructional technology strategies to enhance academic performance including various software programs, LCD projectors and the new ActivBoards.

Next year, the middle school will implement the Merit System to reward excellent conduct.

In the elementary school, the Highlander Pride creed will be fully implemented: Do the right thing, learn something new everyday, treat others the way you want to be treated and take responsibility for your own actions.

Another priority for Highlands School is fostering continued strong family, community and business support.

This is achieved through participation by parent and community volunteers, tutors, PTO as evidenced through the number of volunteer hours, the amount of financial support the school receives from the PTO and business groups, the number of community groups that support the school, the number of students recognized by community groups and the number of scholarships awarded to graduates.

Principal Brian Jetter said Highlands School will continue to facilitate effective transition-communication between preschool and kindergarten and between other school levels.

"We do this by communicating between school and day-care centers, by having pre-school visits the school before school starts in August and by holding open houses for all grades and initiating student-parent meetings when transitioning between middle and high school."

New for 2008-2009, Agenda Books will be provided for grades 3-8 which should make communicating between home and school easier, he said.

Financially, Jetter plans to maximize the use of state funds and local flexibility to improve student achievement.

"We will convert vacant teacher assistant positions to teacher positions; convert non-instructional support positions to teacher positions; utilize teacher assistants in grades other than K-3 for a part of the day; utilize vacant months of employment for other staff positions or for instructional supplies; transfer state funds allotted for textbooks to classroom materials, instructional supplies and equipment; and use state textbook funds for the purchase of textbooks not on the NC Textbook Adoption List," he said.

In addition he plans to use waivers for maximum flexibility to exceed class sizes in grades 4-12 and to exceed the 150 student contacts per teachers.

School Improvement Team members include Principal Brian Jetter, Media Specialist Carol Chalker, Great Beginnings Teacher Jane Chalker, Assistant Principal Jim Draheim, Guidance Secretary and Receptionist, Annette Jenkins, Middle School Language Arts Teacher Michelle Lane, Middle School Social Studies Teacher, Steve Massey, High School English Teacher Cathy McIntyre-Ross, Elementary Teacher’s Aid, Judy Mouchet and Fourth Grade Teacher, Denise West.
Another group of students from Summit Charter School in Cashiers recently got the chance for a close-up look at inner workings of Highlands-Cashiers Hospital. Above Teri Core, RN, demonstrates how a cardiac monitor reads a patient’s heart beat and other vital signs during a tour of the emergency room. Younsters are always eager to see their own heartbeat appear on the screen, but they also got to spend a few minutes with Dr. John Baumrucker, who was the ER physician on duty that day, looking at x-rays and other medical imagery. And during their tour of other departments, students got to see how sound ways are used to produce “live” images of blood vessels inside the body, and what goes on in the test tubes and Petri dishes at the hospital’s laboratory. This was the third group of Summit students to get a “behind the scenes” look at what makes the hospital tick.

Highlands-Cashiers Hospital recently hosted a mini-summit for the CEOs and chief financial officers, and chief nursing officers from critical access designation hospitals across Western North Carolina. The hospital here is one of eight hospitals in this end of the state that have been given critical access status by the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services. To qualify, hospitals have to have 25 beds or less, and be located a certain distance from a neighboring hospital. Critical access hospitals are reimbursed differently from larger hospitals for treating Medicare or Medicaid patients, which is generally to their benefit. But that system of special treatment presents challenges and obstacles of its own, many of which were the topics of those who gathered here. A representative for the North Carolina Office of Rural Health was also in attendance. Six of the eight critical access hospitals in WNC sent representatives – the award for traveling the farthest going to Ashe Memorial Hospital in Jefferson, NC.

or unborn children, and budding careers, to protect their country, our country. All did, in one way or another, lay down their lives for their country. We used to welcome our military returning from war with honors and great enthusiasm. But that has not happened much in recent years. As a result, we have lost part of our soul.

So let us be grateful for the men and women among us who have served in the armed forces of our country. Let us honor them, respect them and thank God for their bravery, their courage and their self-sacrifice.

We in this country are desperate for heroes and heroines, men and women who can remind us of the deep truths of what it means to be human. But what we have been handed are Donald Trump, Barry Bonds and Brittany Spears.

How sad. How very, very sad, especially when we are surrounded by names and faces and people sitting next to us who have made great sacrifices who have exhibited such courage and bravery not for their own gain or fame or fortune or adulation, but for their neighbors, their children and their children’s children. Greater love we have not been given. Remembering this, let us pray that we can regain that lost part of our soul.

preparing to approve a “resolution of intent” before setting a public hearing on our intent to change from a mayor-council to a manager-council form of government. This change does not affect the position of Mayor. The public hearing must be held within 45 days of the approval of the resolution of intent. We hope to get response from our citizens on this proposal at that time. In the meantime, we are going ahead with the search for a manager since our town administrator, Richard Betz, will be retiring next year.

Town Administrator Richard Betz has agreed to help us in this process with the transition it requires. We are all certainly highly indebted to the tremendous work that Richard Betz has done over the years to make our town efficient and financially viable. His first position as zoning manager in the ‘80s and early ‘90s put the town in a position to control our future more effectively and his work as town administrator for the past thirteen years has been untiring in his efforts to provide the town with outstanding leadership in leading us in obtaining a workforce in the town which is second to none. We are grateful that Richard has agreed to stay on until March of next year. His institutional knowledge is invaluable and a smooth transition depends on his help in this major transition process.

shop. Should there ever be a Miss Piggy Award, I have a nominee. Normally, something like this would be a minor annoyance. These days, steam comes out of my ears.

Okay, okay. I’m a little on edge right now, and not as patient as I should be. Let me apologize in advance for any slights or missteps which I may make in the next few weeks. I am not in my right mind. While I may not actually be a Bridezilla, John says I am having my moments.

that has happened...Let all of this come true and be revealed, but do not accept it and do not want to accept it...I’d rather remain with my unrequited suffering and my unquenched indignation, even if I am wrong.

When I read this passage I thought of a fantastic film entitled The Rapture (1991, directed by Michael Tolkin). I don’t want to give too much away because I highly recommend this film, but it is a powerful story of someone rejecting God for exactly the reason Ivan Karamazov did.

Mr. Ehrman agrees with the author of Ecclesiastes that there is no explanation for suffering. He is an existentialist (although he never calls himself that): “The solution to life is to enjoy it while we can, because it is fleeting. This world, and everything in it, is temporary, transient, and soon to be over... And so we should enjoy life to the fullest, as much as we can, as long as we can.”

I have my own ideas about why there is suffering (of course). If you’re interested, I suggest you check out my husband’s and my book, The Game of God (171.3H) from the Hudson Library. You can read the introduction online at www.gameofgod.com and see how we answer this problem of God’s.

Lakeside Restaurant welcomes Laura Harison

Lakeside Restaurant is excited to welcome new hire, Laura Harison, to their Management Team. Laura was most recently Membership Coordinator for the Highlands Chamber of Commerce. During her tenure, she was a dedicated advocate and planner for the First Annual Culinary Weekend. Her fascination for culinary arts and fine wines brought her back into the restaurant business.

“We are thrilled to have Laura join the Lakeside staff. Her experience and passion for good food, wine and service is certainly what we want for our team,” said Donna Woods, owner of Lakeside Restaurant. “We're looking forward to her bringing fresh ideas and enthusiasm to her new position.”

Lakeside Restaurant is located on charming Harris Lake at S31 Smallwood Avenue.

Open for dinner, Tuesday through Saturday from 5:30 p.m. Call Laura at Lakeside to make your reservation. A warm welcome and a delicious meal await you.

Last chance for tickets to Collective Spirits Wine Festival

A few tickets remain for Collective Spirits Wine Festival, a benefit event for The Bascom. Call (828) 526-4949, ext. 2 #.

In this last chance this season to enjoy a top-level wine festival right here in Highlands, this season to enjoy a top-level wine festival right here in Highlands, said Donna Woods, The Bascom’s events director. “From a domestic and international wine tasting on Thursday night to a live wine auction and brunch on Friday, we have pulled out all the stops.”

The festival begins at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday with an international food and wine tasting. More than 90 wineries will offer a vast array of wines to taste, with a lavish spread of food to complement. A silent auction and piano music will round out the evening’s festivities.

The festival continues at 11 a.m. on Friday with a champagne and sparkling wine brunch, a live auction with auctioneer Dennis Hall, and a short but lively lecture with keynote speakers Delia Viader, Michael DeLoach and Martin Kolk. Auction items include trips, dinners, rare and large-format wines, and much more. Cost is $125 for the Thursday event, $100 for Friday and $200 for a combination ticket to both events.

Horse Rescuer at Cyrano’s Bookshop on Saturday, May 31

Famed horse-rescuer Melanie Sue Bowles, author of "The Horses of Proud Spirit," will be in Highlands to sign copies of her new book, "Hoof Prints," on Saturday, May 31, from 1:00 to 3:00 p.m. In "Hoof Prints: More Stories From Proud Spirit," Bowles continues the remarkable account of her—and husband Jim’s—efforts to save elderly, abused and unwanted equines. From a handful of horses located on just five acres in Florida, the Proud Spirit Horse Sanctuary has now grown into a beautiful, 300-acre spread set amidst the rolling hills of Mena, Arkansas, where the Bowles have made it possible for more than 150 of these formerly neglected creatures to live out their lives in peace and happiness. The horses have been kept in stables, but rather get to run free as a herd, without any horse fencing. At Proud Spirit, Jim and Melanie Sue place just as much emphasis on the horses’ emotional well-being as on their physical needs. The newspaper Florida Today called “The Horses of Proud Spirit” "...a remarkable book by a remarkable person." Melanie Sue and her sanctuary are also the subject of a PBS documentary.

In “Hoof Prints,” readers will experience the sanctuary’s removal from Florida to western Arkansas—which involved carrying 40 horses in three, 53-foot semis across half the country. Once settled in their new home, Jim and Melanie Sue and the other dedicated caregivers helping them (especially their veterinarians and a remarkable Romanian orphan named Cosmina), rescued yet more animals, including Ranger, Rosie, Rebel and Gambler, Sammy, Jesse and her foal Riley, not to mention two donkeys. Their stories are sure to make your eyes mist up, just as those about Cody and the horses in Melanie Sue’s earlier book did. For while the Bowles are able to nurse many of their charges back to health, some just don’t make it, and all of them age and eventually die. Parting with each one is difficult, but Melanie Sue’s motto is “The purpose of life is to have a life of purpose;” and hers surely has. All animal lovers will want to read her latest book.

Cyrano’s Bookshop is located at 390 Main Street in Highlands, North Carolina. Books can be reserved for autographing by calling (828) 526-5488 or sending an e-mail to cyranos@ncvt.net; to learn more about our store please visit www.cyranosbooks.com.

Broughton, tenor, to perform a program of spirituals to benefit Highlands Emergency Council

Christ Anglican Church and the Community Bible Church will host tenor Gregory Broughton on Sunday, June 1 at 2:30 p.m. to present the second program in their First Sunday Concert Series. Broughton is an esteemed singer and teacher, currently on the music faculty at the University of Georgia. He has performed with symphonies throughout America and has also had great success on the operatic stage. More recently, he has devoted his performance attentions to the repertoire of the African American Spiritual, with a particular emphasis on those written or arranged by Athens, GA native Hall Johnson. His performance will showcase several of the spirituals that Gregory Broughton has been working with in recent years, and should prove to be an enriching experience for the audience. The event is free, but a goodwill offering will be accepted to benefit the Highlands Emergency Council. For more information, contact David Gresham, Christ Anglican Church’s Director of Sacred Music, at 828-553-4383.

The Zahner Conservation Lecture Series hosts photographer and artist Rosamond Purcell. Rosamond W Purcell is a photographer, writer, artist, curator and collector. Her photographs have been widely exhibited, and she has published eight books and many articles on aspects of natural and cultural history. Her recent detailed recreation of a 17th century “cabinet of curiosities” has been exhibited in museums in California, New England and Denmark. The series is held each Thursday during the summer months at 7 pm at the Highlands Nature Center, 930 Horse Cove Rd. For a complete schedule, visit www.wcu.edu/nhts.

The Inn Keeper’s Tour in Highlands, North Carolina, will take place on Wednesday, June 4, from 1 to 5 pm. Area inns will showcase their rooms and facilities for the public to view. The Bascom to present two art lectures

Art lovers have two opportunities to hear informative lectures in the coming week.

Next Thursday, June 5, at 5 p.m. at the Performing Arts Center, Janet Clanton will present a lecture on the life and work of painter Helen Frankenthaler. Clanton is the associate curator of adult programs at the Orlando Museum of Art. The Bascom is presenting the Clanton lecture to celebrate its acquisition of a dramatic Frankenthaler painting, anonymously donated to the art center’s permanent collection. The free lecture is for Bascom members only and will be followed by a wine and cheese reception; to become a member, call the art center at (828) 526-4949. Annual memberships start at $35, and all members support the art center’s programming.

Then, on Monday, June 9, at 7 p.m., The Bascom will host “The Red Cherry Rocker,” by acclaimed storyteller Anne Doggett and friends. It is an evening of entertaining tall tales and family fables, and the theme is the old red cherry rocker, its mystery and its history. The setting is The Bascom’s “Dove Tail and Nail” exhibition, a collection of fine old Southern furniture and tools dating back to the 1700s.

The lecture will be held at The Bascom (inside the Hudson Library); the cost is $15 ($13.50 for Bascom members). For more information, or to become a member of The Bascom and support these and other events, visit www.thebascom.org or call (828) 526-4949.

The hike, rated moderate, is 6.9 miles in length with a number of ups and downs along the way. Drive 60 miles round trip. The Return of Herbert Bracewell June 11

David Milford costars with Madeleine Davis in “The Return of Herbert Bracewell” opening June 11 at The Instant Theatre Company’s Studio on Main. Milford plays the role of Herbert Bracewell, a lovesick, turn-of-the-twentieth-century, Irish character actor planning a comeback to the stage. Davis appears as Florence, his long-suffering wife, who is an actress with a comeback scheme of her own. At the opening of the play we find that Herbert has retired to the attic of his New York home where he is busily preparing to stage a one-man review of his long, undistinguished, career. He assembles the set, registers for rights to mark a playing area and proceeds to ad-lib ideas for his show, straining to pull down dusty manuscripts from overflowing shelves of vintage souvenirs, using a stunt dummy to play off of, and confronting often with his pet, a stuffed crow. This little known, but superbly realized two-character play, is ideal for theatre lovers. Milford has been a professional actor for more than 40 years, appearing frequently in Atlanta at the Theatre in the Square, the Alliance, Theatrical Outfit, Horizon Theatre and the Jewish Theatre of the South. The Return of Herbert Bracewell marks his fourth production in the ITC’s Studio, and the third time he and Davis have appeared together.

“The Return of Herbert Bracewell” will play June 11-14 and 18-21. For reservations call 828-342-9197. Tickets are $20 with reservations and $25.00 at the door. The Studio on Main is located at 310 Oak Street, Main Street Highlands, NC. This delightful, comedic production is generously sponsored by Jolies of Highlands, Main Street.

PseudoCube©

#AN1F – Level of Difficulty – Difficult

THE SETUP:
The cube has 27 consecutive numbers in it, arranged in three layers with 9 numbers each. These numbers are arranged in a special pattern: For each layer, the sum of the three numbers in each row, column or diagonal, is 3 times its center number. Eight diagonals connect all 3 layers by running through the center number of the middle layer. Each diagonal contains 3 numbers equalling the total of the three center numbers. One of the diagonals is shown with circles.

THE CHALLENGE:
Start with the three center numbers for each layer and the other numbers given. Now pour a cup of coffee, pick up a pencil and eraser and try to figure out where the other numbers belong. Good Luck!

N-Cryptoku©

Object: Assign 9 different letters to each cell of 9 columns and 9 rows. In addition, nine 3 x 3 cells in the layout have the same nine different letters (this is similar to Sudoku but uses nine letters instead of nine numbers). A ‘mystery word or phrase’ using all nine different letters is designated by circled squares (other short words appear when solving, for which a list of meanings is provided). Every puzzle has a different ‘mystery word or phrase’ (no spaces).

How to Solve: Determine the nine different letters among those given. Try to solve the mystery word using the clue given and write it in. Other small words will appear in the puzzle. As in conventional crossword puzzles, a list of meanings for these ACROSS/ DOWN words is given and number positions shown. Doing them will speed up your solution to the puzzle. Using your powers of induction, inference and insight, place missing letters in all blank squares according to the rules noted above. Focus attention where the least number of letters are needed to complete a line, column or 3 x 3 cell. Email: pseudocube8@aol.com. Feedback encouraged!

Mystery Word

“Monarch-free country”

Across
1. Representative (abr.) (3)
2. Prince Edward Island (abr.) (3)
3. Tavern (slang) (3)
4. Southern soldier (slang) (3)
5. Circumference/diameter constant (2)

Down
6. Vertical direction (2)
7. Junk yard dog (3)
8. Knight’s title (3)
9. Ball-point pen (3)
10. Exists (2)
