Citizens on town water got a “scary” notice with their utility bills this month, but officials say the notice was procedural and nothing more.

The notice said that the town had committed a Monitoring Violation for failing to conduct a Synthetic Organic Compound (SOC) test at the water plant two quarters in a row in 2005.

“’There is no problem with our water quality and SOCs have never been found, but since we didn’t test for them two quarters in a row that one year we got a slap on the wrist from the state,” said Public Service Administrator Lamar Nix.

SOCs are contaminants that are by-products of fuel, gasoline and hundreds of other things, said Water Plant Operator Wade Wilson.

“This is not a health issue for Highlands,” said Wilson. “It’s a testing schedule issue. Every three years, the water has to be tested for SOCs two quarters in a row. In 2005 we tested in June but forgot to test in October.”

In June and October of 2008, however, the water was tested for SOCs and nothing was detected.

Airport Authority explains stance on runway extension

Citizens against the extension of the airport runway in Franklin packed the boardroom during Monday night’s Macon County Commission meeting, urging commissioners to stop or at least mitigate the matter.

Some accused the Airport Authority of moving ahead on the project without the proper permits; others took the historical-heritage routinesaying one destroyed lot and

Town meets Obama’s grant deadline

Timing is everything particularly when it comes to grant deadlines, and from the looks of it Highlands will have its bases covered when it comes to time to be on the receiving end of President Obama’s stimulus package.

At the March 4 Town Board meeting, Town Manager Jim Fatland presented a report outlining the grants town is applying for to finance infrastructure projects and programs.

Recently, Fatland, Mayor Don Mullen, Police Chief Bill Harrel and Public Service Administrator Lamar Nix attended an economic stimulus workshop in Asheville organized by McGill Associates and the Southwestern Commission, also attended by Rep. Heath Shuler and other state and federal officials.

The use of stimulus funds and steps to obtain them was discussed at length.

“I felt sorry for several representatives from other municipalities who learned that for certain projects, grant requests and plans had to be submitted by the next day after the meeting,” said Fatland. “There was no way they could be ready, but thankfully, we were.”

On Friday, February 27, Fatland and staff submitted grant applications for four water supply projects which will hopefully be completed.
Earth Hour is March 28, 8:30-9:30 p.m.

Dear Editor,

The Sierra Club is helping to promote Earth Hour 2009 with an idea that originated in Sydney, Australia in 2007 and is now being promoted by the Sierra Club. The idea is simple and involves each household making an effort or pledge to turn off all lights from 8:30-9:30 p.m. on March 28.

On that 2007 Earth Hour, the city's carbon consumption dropped more than 10%. In 2009, more than 50 million people in 35 countries turned off their lights for 60 minutes.

Although some may not agree with all policies of the Sierra Club, surely most can agree this is a worthy idea. Maybe we can even strive to have "Lights Out" once a month.

In such difficult times when so many are jobless and homeless, this is a small sacrifice to make.

To make a pledge of participation go to www.earthhour.org.

The Sierra Club was founded in 1892 and its motto is: Explore, enjoy and protect the planet.

National Forests in North Carolina approve non-native invasive species control project

Dear Editor,

Forest Supervisor, Marisue Hilliard, has approved a strategy to control non-native invasive plants on the Nantahala and Pisgah National Forests. Native plants can be overrun by invading non-native plants. It is this group of plants that managers are attempting to control with the approval of this project.

The project will annually treat up to 1,100 acres of non-native invasive plants using a variety of methods. Manual or mechanical methods may include the use of shovels, hoes and saws. Where appropriate, herbicides will be directly applied to target plants using spot treatment methods. Areas to be targeted will include legally designated rare species, rare plant communities, and/or areas including unique habitats. "It is estimated there are over 25,000 infested acres across the Pisgah and Nantahala National Forests" stated Gary Kauffman, Forest Botanist.

The decision to implement this project provides managers with the flexibility to quickly respond to non-native plant infestations that pose a direct threat to the Forest's native ecosystems. Though the rate of spread is not yet known for these relatively new species to our forests, they spread several times faster than the species they are out-competing, and in some cases, the rate of spread is not yet known for these relatively new species to our forests.

Jenkins going strong in USA G Junior Olympic Gymnastic Competition

Highlands School senior, Casey Jenkins, began her USAG Junior Olympic Gymnastic Competitive season January 31st at the Frostbite Invitational in Hickory. Casey placed first on floor and second on beam, uneven bars, vault and all-around. In the 2009 Tiger Paw Classic at the Littlejohn Coliseum at Clemson University on February 28, 2009, Jenkins took gold placing first on the balance beam with a score of 9.550 and finished with third place all-around. She has qualified to State Competition in Winston-Salem in late March.

New officers elected to Highlands Democrat Precinct

On Thursday, March 5 at 5:30 p.m., the Highlands Democrat Precinct held 2009 elections at the Highlands Civic Center.

Chairman Ricky Bryson said the turnout was the best in years and thanked the Highlands Democrat committee for its fundraising efforts in 2008 which helped Macon County Commissioner Bobby Kuppers get elected.

Monica Bomengen thanked Ricky Bryson for sending her as the Highlands precinct representative to a fundraiser for Rep. Heath Shuler on January 28, 2009 in Raleigh where President Bill Clinton spoke.

At the precinct meeting, the practice of nominations and elections by secret-ballot was resurrected and Chairman Ricky Bryson, who has held the office for two years, took nominations from the floor.

Nominated were Lee Hodges, chairman, Robert Smith, vice chairman, Faviola Olvera, secretary, and incumbent Ralph Stevens, treasurer. During the previous year, Bryson was chairman, Hodges was vice-chair, Smith was secretary and Stevens was treasurer.

With no other nominations, those nominated were voted into office.

Hodges encouraged the group to check the “fair campaign” box on tax returns and offered the www.democracy-nc.org website for more information.

She also referred people to Governor Bev Perdue’s site to track Obama’s stimulus spending in North Carolina at www.NCRecovery.gov.

Hodges informed the group of upcoming Democrat meetings both county- and statewide and suggested websites for keeping up to date on President Obama’s policies.

On Thursday, March 12 there will be a Democratic discussion group at 6 p.m. at the Civic Center. This is so Obama supporters of Highlands can stay involved and provide community service as requested by Obama. “We also keep an eye on how his agenda is going and discuss matters at hand,” said Hodges. “I hope this group will grow.”

The Macon County Democrat Convention is April 25 at the Macon Courthouse in Franklin from 9 a.m. until noon. Macon County Democrat officers are elected and members vote on referendums to be put on the docket for the district convention.

On May 16, the Democrat District Convention, which is usually held in Haywood County at the community college, is an all-day affair with elections of officers and review of referendums to be sent to the state. “This is where it really gets interesting politically,” said Hodges.

On Oct 3 the Vance-Aycock Dinner is in the Raleigh/Durham area.

For more information contact Chairman Hodges at eeljah@Hodges.net.

Dubai

Actualy, we decided to scratch all our outdoor activitiesfor the day, complete our tow-mile walk in the Mall of the Emirates and see “Slumdog Millionaire.” We bought our tickets early after being warned the theater would be full. They were right, again.

Since Dubai’s weekends are Friday and Saturday, the mall was packed with shoppers. We told theresa flat economy but it’s hard to see.

I could spend an entire day on a bench in the mall and people-watching. To say Dubai is an amazing place is an understatement. Every nationality would eventually pass my bench.

Eighty percent of the population of Dubai is not native to Dubai and most foreigners are here on work or holiday visas. The city is alive with construction. Two Aussie teenage girls passed my bench wearing shorts. They’ll not be harmed but will receive many dirty looks and maybe even a few insults.

Some Islamic women celebrate the weekend by removing the black veil from their abayas. Many are stunningly beautiful. Why am I surprised? Some Muslim men, mostly teenagers and young men, shed their traditional head dress and don baseball caps, causing the elders to frown at such disrespect.

On our way home from the mall, Lisa drove into an open gate at a walled mansion only a block from her home. She killed the engine and waited. Momentarily, a guard arrived to question our unexpected arrival.

Lisa spoke. “Hi, you remember me? I’m the lady with the big black dog who walks by here all the time.” Not waiting for an answer, she continued, “Since the owner is away, could I bring my parents in to see the grounds?” It was a bold move.

The guard put up an index finger and said, “Wait, onemoment, please.” When he returned, he invited us to look around but apologized he couldn’t allow us inside the mansion.

Unloaded gun found in student backpack

Around 10:45 a.m., Monday, March 9, the School Resources Officer and principal at Franklin High School were notified that a student had a weapon on campus in his book bag. The student was interviewed and a search revealed an unloaded pistol and no ammunition. The student explained that the intent for bringing it was to sell the pistol, not to harm self or others.

At this time the investigation into this incident continues and the student is being disciplined according to state and federal guidelines.

I would like to thank the students and teachers involved for their quick actions to alert the administration about the incident. The administration and School Resource Office are also to be commended for their immediate actions to ensure our high school campus remains safe and secure.

There was a day when a person could go for days without a phone call. Today people talk all the time. They talk while driving. They chat during meetings. There may be water resistant models for chatting in the shower. At least some of that talk must be unnecessary.

Several years ago Lizzie and I were having dinner with a friend of hers, a dentist. Dentists don’t have a lot of emergencies, so I was surprised when she pulled a phone from her purse and engaged in a lengthy conversation, a conversation which had nothing to do with teeth.

I panic if I forget my phone, become catalytic if the battery fails. I have friends who carry several different communication devices on their belts. E-mail and the Internet are within reach from anywhere.

I just have a nagging feeling that I really don’t matter, in fact I’m sure of it. Not that I expect anything to change except the emergence of more toys. I asked a friend what “a couple of old farts like us” are doing on Facebook. He actually attempted an explanation, which I must confess, left me feeling very alone and very old.

The first time I saw a Bluetooth was in Atlanta. A guy was walking down the street talking to himself, or so it seemed. He was well dressed and carried a brief case and didn’t look anything like a homeless schizophrenic. I’m not saying that schizophrenia is a precondition for homelessness. Lots of sane people find themselves on the street through no fault of their own. But most folks who walk down the street talking to themselves are all a little off, and most don’t look overly prosperous. It was a long time before I realized that the oversized hearing aid he was wearing was a Bluetooth.

Why do multi-billion dollar companies have iconic device names like Google, Yahoo, BlackBerry and Bluetooth instead of serious names like General Motors or United States Steel?

I’ve heard that some kids and young adults send and receive thousands of texts every month. They must be a lot quicker than I. A few years ago, I tested a friend. He said that it was the first time that he had received a text from an adult. I didn’t send another for years. Who would have believed that “text” would become a verb? The major evolutionary trend in the English language seems to be creating verbs from nouns. A woman friend once asked, “Do you use BlackBerry?” I responded, “Do what?” With great disappointment she said, “I guess you don’t.” I chuckled months later when I learned that BlackBerry was a personal communication device.

One of the most valuable purposes of the American educational system is to teach students the reasons for the success of our governmental system. However, as most of you can remember from your days of high school, civics class was usually spent filling out worksheets and daydreaming about the weekend.

Fortunately, for those who spent the majority of their time daydreaming, local author John C. Armor has created a “user’s guide” for the United States government titled America’s Owner’s Manual.

The premise of Armor’s book on CD is two-fold. The first is to provide the “owners” of the United States... We the People, with the knowledge that as owners of the U.S. Government we are entitled to specific rights under law.

The second is to present in plain English the essential points of the Constitution not just for lawyers, but for laymen, to understand how the Constitution was designed to work, and why it is important, even in the 21st century, for us to understand, respect, and follow that document. (That second point is taken straight from the American Civil Rights Union website)

From the standpoint of content, Armor’s pamphlet is a clear, concise exploration of the U.S. Constitution and the manner in which it has been interpreted since the original 13 colonies.

The language is neither flowery nor oversimplified for the audience, and is suitable for both the high school classroom and the living room recliner.

Broken into a series of short essays on both the various articles of the Constitution as well as their interpretation, the pamphlet can be read over time or taken as a whole.

America’s Owner’s Manual looks at the Constitution article by article, and examines how the interpretation of the document is responsible for the current state of government in the United States today.

The Owner’s Manual describes how each branch of government has infringed on the specified powers of the other branches, and the damage that this can do to our nation if continued.

Special attention is paid to the power of the Supreme Court to shape legislation, or judicial review, a power that Armor argues has been abused throughout recent years. Armor notes that the power of the Supreme Court to interpret the Constitution is legitimate, but has been used in unnecessary circumstances and can be particularly dangerous when misused to overturn the will of the people.

America’s Owner’s Manual also bemoans the current size of the Federal Government, and how the misinterpretation of the Constitution by various branches of government has led to a bloated and inefficient federal system.

While America’s Owner’s Manual is an excellent resource for citizens or students wishing to learn more about the federal government, no review of this work would be complete without mentioning that it was fronted by the American Civil Rights Union, which is an organization that is the counter to the American Civil Liberties Union.

America’s Owner’s Manual does not demonstrate any outward partisanship, but there can be found some inherent bias within the author’s rigid interpretation of the Constitution.

The “Strict Constructionist” view of the Constitution is one that was popularized by Thomas Jefferson and other Democratic-Republicans during the Federalist Era, and is certainly a viewpoint shared by Mr. Armor, as well as many other Conservatives.

Depending on the readers’ political leanings, they may or may not be swayed by Mr. Armor’s arguments. However, America’s Owner’s Manual is certainly worth reading or listening to on audiobook regardless of one’s political preference.

To purchase the book, email Armor at John_Armor@aya.yale.edu.

ing height on any building... shall not exceed 48 feet or four stories from the top of the foundation, whichever is less... building height shall mean the vertical distance measured from the top of the foundation to the ‘eve’ of said building.”

Problems arose when Commissioner Bob Simpson suggested that readers of the ordinance might construe it to mean that no structure could be built above the ‘eve’ of the building thereby circumventing the intent of the ordinance.

Though none of the other commissioners read the ordinance that way, they did agree that the reason for the ordinance was safety—that being the height fire departments could easily reach without a hook and ladder truck.

Highlands Town Board member architect Dennis DeWolf was in the audience and the commission sought clarification from him.

“How would you read this?” asked Commission Chair Ronnie Beale.

DeWolf said it depended on the purpose.

John and I recently went to Atlanta, to attend a mini-reunion of his Baltimore prep school, Gilman. Since we rarely go to Atlanta, the traffic tends to drive us crazy. As much as we enjoyed the event, there was a feeling of relief getting back on the road, heading for home. That feeling of relief turned to concern when the car started acting funny, however, and it became difficult to steer. Not being a car person myself, I tend to think of driving as being strapped into a bomb on four wheels anyway. Our return trip from Atlanta just confirmed my worst fears. Had we missed a car check-up? No, we're good about that. Had we run over something, and did we have tire problems? That was much more likely.

I cannot remember having as many flat tires as we have had since I moved to Highlands. We even picked up a nail driving down the Cullasaja Gorge – not the kind of place you want to have anything particularly nasty happen to you and your car.

I asked our tire guru, AJ, about this, and his take is that there is so much construction going on around here that junk just falls off trucks, and onto the road. There are a lot of construction vehicles on the road, and it’s surprising how often they are wide open in the back, and not covered with a tarp to prevent things falling out.

Last year, we were dropping money off to our wonderful cat sitter, Sue, for cat sitting the Beasties. As I got out of the car, my foot landed on the kind of cartridge that goes into a nail gun. In fact, there were a bunch of nails there, just waiting for some poor sod to come rounding the bend, and run over them. I kicked them way onto the side of the road with my foot, and hopefully that was enough.

But, back to Atlanta, John masterfully got our car off to the side, and I jumped out, surveying a flattening back right tire. We decided to drive slowly to the next exit, and phone AAA for help. Back on the highway, things only got worse. It surprised me that such a slight flat was causing the car to act so oddly. We got off a mile later, at the Gainesville exit, and made it in front of the local middle school before we could go no further.

Once again, I hopped out of the car, and checked out the back right tire. Still slightly flat, but not exceptionally so. Just on a hunch, I walked around to the left rear tire, and saw that that puppy was as flat as a pancake, and we were actually riding on the rim. Geez. Who gets two flat tires, for Pete's sake?

John whipped out his cell phone, pulled out the AAA card, and phoned for help. Clever wife smiled to self, remember how just the week before we had received our new AAA cards, and she had popped a check in the mail the next day to renew our membership. AAA told us they would be sending someone to help us out within the hour.

We settled down to wait, feeling rather like turkeys with our two matching flats. I don’t know why this made me think of Oscar Wilde’s line in The Importance of Being Earnest: “To lose one parent may be regarded as a misfortune; to lose both looks like carelessness.”

Hmmm. To lose one tire may be regarded as a misfortune; to lose both looks like carelessness. Had we done something to bring this on ourselves?

We hadn’t been sitting there for very long when a charming man in a Kubota jacket pulled up behind us. “What seems to be the problem?” he said pleasantly. “Can I give you folks a hand?” With that, he proceeded to walk around, whistled at his truck, and began to look for something.

“What a reassuring commentary on modern life, that there are still people out there who see a bad situation, and just want to make it better. Finally, our AAA guy pulled up in his truck, Mr. Lester from Curts Detail Shop and Towing. What a sweetheart! Within no time, he changed the worst of the two tires, and

The SOC test – one of scores of tests operators at the water plant are required to continuously perform – tests for about 250 contaminants. Some contaminants include Lindane, Endrin, Methoxychlor, Toxaphenes and more. Nothing has ever been found in Highlands drinking water.

Recently, Nix told the Town Board for safety reasons the water plant would be switching from using chlorine gas to clean the water to chlorine bleach.

“Chlorine bleach is safer for employees and for people in the community, particularly those around the water treatment plant,” he said. “Chlorine gas can be dangerous.”

For now, citizens will continue to smell and even taste chlorine in town drinking water because chlorine is the only thing that kills bacteria.

Nix said using UV treatments for drinking water supplies – as at the Highlands wastewater treatment plant — is in the testing stages but isn’t ready for use.

“Using UVs is OK for wastewater treatment plants because UV rays genetically alter bacteria so it can’t reproduce thereby depleting it, but chlorine actually kills bacteria which is what you want for drinking water,” he said.

When in doubt - punt?

Note: I often have wondered what a writer does when his well runs dry. Now I know.

The bell is not ringing, the light bulb over my head is dim; at best, and I don't seem to be able to come up with an inspiring thought to save my soul. This too will pass, but for now, I am asking the editor to rerun a column first printed on October 23, 2008 titled "The Perfect Storm". I'll be back next week.

...something happens that defies logic, something that seems to be beyond earthly understanding, something that would be described as not a natural occurrence, that would make it supernatural, wouldn't it? I believe it does.

There have been several recent major events/conditions that I believe could be described as supernatural. One is the 9/11 attack on the World Trade Center and other targets. I don't have to recount the horrors of that day. The hole in the ground that remains in lower Manhattan gives silent testimony to the "success" of that heinous effort.

You say there is nothing unexplainable about that. It was planned, executed and resulted in mammoth destruction. That's true. Let's dissect the plan. The five years in which the attack was planned were enabled, to a degree, to the disarray of our intelligence agencies. MSNBC, the liberal news network says, "Attorney General John Ashcroft," while testifying before the 9/11 commission "blamed what he called the refusal of the FBI and the CIA to work together during the Clinton administration for the failure to detect the plot for the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks."

"Ashcroft said that the 10 years before Sept. 11, a snarled web of requirements, restrictions and regulations... prevented decisive action by our men and women in the field. Government erected this wall. Government buttressed this wall. And before Sept. 11, government was blinded by this wall." I thought at the time the condition of our intelligence was beyond understanding, something that would be recalled. An exception to the Shanksville, PA crash, planes into the targets with precision, with minimal training, carried out the condition of our intelligence was beyond understanding, something that would be

The execution. Terrorist pilots, with minimal training, carried out the hijackings nearly flawlessly. They flew the planes into the targets with precision, with the exception of the Shanksville, PA crash, created by the heroic actions of passengers.
The results. Records of conversations among surviving planners indicated that the damage inflicted on the World Trade Complex, the billions in property losses, the nearly catastrophic business disruption far exceeded their fondest expectations, far beyond reason.

Then there was Katrina. Without boring you with the meteorological details, the conditions that existed that allowed Katrina to gain the size and power she did were extremely unusual. Even though Hurricane Rita, which followed Katrina, was slightly more powerful, the damage inflicted by Katrina was much more devastating. It exceeded everyone's worst-case scenario.

It took many variables to align to produce its cataclysmic results. Conditions in the Gulf, tides, point of landing, storm surge, all had to be precisely as they were to flood New Orleans and environs to the destructive extent that occurred. I happen to believe that God controls weather conditions everywhere and all the time. I don't believe a puff of wind or drop of rain happens without His hand on the wheel. Believe what you will, the recent increase of natural disasters is not a coincidence.

Currently, we have a worldwide systemic financial structure collapse to deal with. The response of the government is to throw trillions of dollars of our money, which is really debt that we and future generations will repay, at the problem. Whether or not all of these bailouts and costly remedies are really necessary and helpful is another matter for another time. The fact is, for better or worse, the pot is in the process of being drained up.

For those of us who viewed Merrill Lynch, General Motors and other giants in various stages of demise as indestructible icons, it feels like the ground is shifting beneath our feet. In my finite mind, what is happening to our country just couldn't happen. When I understood from scripture that the U.S. will be irrelevant at the end times, I couldn't process the thought. How could we be brought to the point of irrelevancy?

I guess now we know. Throw God out the Public Square, destroy the education system from within, put power and profit ahead of the public good and we'll see. We are the confluence of greed, just for power and utter disregard for the future of the country has created the perfect storm. With the soulless media beating the drums for the destroyers, and the undereducated masses eating it up, small wonder we are looking down the barrel of socialism or worse.

I don't believe for a minute that the increased levels of misery we are enduring is anything but punishment inflicted by a God who has been scorned by His ungrateful children. Killing the innocents, tolerating smut and filth, banning prayer, worshipping nature. You can love Mother Earth but we'll all answer to Father God.
I don't know much about women, but I do know a bit about men. I suppose I could say with some assurance that most men want to be strong, to be courageous, to conquer, to fight, and to overcome.

I suppose women have their own dreams, maybe not of heroic conquest, but of realizing beauty that leaves men dismayed and wowed.

The Bible gives us heroic accounts of men who were great:

- Joseph, a stalwart of purity in the face of justifiable temptation.
- Joshua, commanding the armies of the Lord in holy war.

David, facing Goliath, fearless against great odds.

Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, unflinching in the face of sure retribution.

Paul, fervent and determined in the midst of suffering.

Recently I have found myself reeling from what can be considered very trivial. It has again made me very aware of my own personal weaknesses. We all have our challenges in life, I have my own. Mine have again made me aware of how weak I am.

It does not take much to knock me for a loop. It is disquieting to say the least. It is a humbling experience.

So I turned to the Lord for help to see in more detail what he had to say. It was a simple exercise: Go to a Bible database type in the word “weakness” and see what pops up.

I spoke to the Apostle Paul, someone I consider courageous to the extreme. Here’s what it said.

1 I must go on boasting. Although there is nothing to be gained, I will go on to visions and revelations from the Lord. 2 I know a man in Christ who fourteen years ago was caught up to the third heaven. Whether it was in the body or out of the body I do not know—God knows. 3 And I know that this man—whether in the body or apart from the body I do not know—God knows. 4 was caught up to paradise. He heard the truth. But I refrain, so no one will think more of me than he should because of the revelation I have received. 5 If I should boast a bit more about our ministry in the church of God, I will be less foolish. 6 Although I am not trying to幾つも (to say) I am not trying to几つも (to say)

Cowee valleys will be changed forever.

For eight years, during which time the Airport Authority has undergone many changes, the subject of extending the runway and disturbing the Cherokee burial ground in the vicinity has been an issue. Representatives of the Cherokee Nation were at the meeting and said though they understand progress must go on, it is paramount to them that the area be respected and preserved as much as possible.

No one except members of the Airport Authority and the commissioners spoke for the project, with safety and the economic development of Macon County cited as bonafide reasons for the extension.

Milles Gregory, past MC board chairman and current chairman of the Airport Authority, said only 25% of the area will be disturbed, that all artifacts will be saved, that the Airport Authority has undergone many changes, the subject of extending the runway and disturbing the Cherokee burial ground in the vicinity has been an issue. Representatives of the Cherokee Nation were at the meeting and said though they understand progress must go on, it is paramount to them that the area be respected and preserved as much as possible.

According to its report the direct financial gain for Macon County will be $646,000 and the indirect financial gain will be $6 million,” he said. “The EDC supports the extension and concerning the economic side that’s what we as commissioners look at, but on the side of preservation, misinformation is part of the problem and maybe as a board we can help correct that.”

Gregory said 10 acres of the airport site will never be touched. He also said the state explained that the Airport Authority’s offer was rescinded before they had time to discuss it at a council meeting; the Airport Authority said since they never got anything back in writing, they rescinded the offer.

As it stands now, 25% of the area needed for the extension will be excavated for artifact recovery prior to being filled for the extension.

Mountain Lakes 5K set for May 2

“There’s still plenty of time to get in shape for the Mountain Lakes 5-K.” That’s the word from Race Director Richard Betz. This year’s races are scheduled for Saturday, May 2, at 9 a.m. and Betz says that for even casual joggers and walkers, six weeks should be enough time to train for the 3.1 mile event.

Last year, several age group slots were not filled. For example, any woman between the ages of 40 and 44 could have walked the entire distance and won a first place trophy! In fact, competition seems to be tougher for men in their 50s, 60s, and 70s.

Most runners want to finish a race in a fairly decent time, however, and Betz said that a training program of increasing distance and speed between now and the first weekend in May would help any runner, from beginner to experienced, to a faster finish time.

Beginning runners should start a training program by running at a comfortable pace as far as they can, even if it is only a block or two. They should then walk a break for a minute or two and repeat the running segment, alternating running and walking for two to three miles. Eventually, most active people should be able to cover the entire distance with only one or two breaks. It is truly amazing how quickly your body will respond to training! And it’s perfectly OK to walk during a 5-K.

Experienced runners will benefit from adding a long run to their training program at least once a week, and also from some kind of speed work each week. A rest and recovery day between training sessions will also help the beginner or the experienced runner alike to improve,” Betz said.

Four years ago, Betz’s wife Martha went running/walking two miles to running several races, ranging from 5-K to 15-K, to eventually completing a marathon in a little over a year. He credits a carefully-designed training program to her success.

The club has also used the proceeds from past races to help purchase fitness equipment for Highlands School, HealthTracks at Highlands-Cashiers Hospital, and the Highlands Recreation Park.

The Highlands Roadrunners Club is a non-profit organization, and entry fees and contributions are tax-deductible.
The most dangerous man in America

Matthew G. Eberz
Email: matt@matteberz.com

The thought of the most dangerous man in America should cause one to think; who is this person and what makes him the most dangerous. Unlike the terrorist or the mobster whose danger to society is obvious, there are those who are, or were at least in their time, unthought-of as dangerous.

In their time they were thought to be patriots as they waved the American flag for all to see and heard the cheers of a grateful nation. In the background, behind closed doors, where regular people don’t see, they abused the very principles of freedom they so publicly touted.

In the early 1950s Senator Joseph McCarthy became the public face for anti-communism. His claims of card carrying communists in the government and in the entertainment industry soon filled the airwaves and newspapers. His speeches of the pending dire consequences spread over the entire nation like a plague and suspicions arose pitting neighbor against neighbor.

The people of the United States riled in their fear and anger, and through McCarthy a Senate Committee held hearings dragging hundreds of people before them where they were verbally battered, their credibility put in doubt and their lives destroyed. Not because of crimes they committed, but because a single man, Joseph McCarthy, raised a false specter for his own personal gain.

Eventually the Senate realized the McCarthysanity and censured him for his actions. But his actions are so infamous the term “McCarthyism” lives today to mean the corruption of truth and the abandonment of the due process.

J. Edgar Hoover, the head of the FBI from 1924 until his death in 1972, was the most powerful man in America, not for what he said in public but what he held in private. Although an ardent loyalist of America, Hoover was a fanatic on his version of what America should be and he used everything at his disposal to control both the political agenda of this country as well as the politicians — even the Presidents through the use of secret files that he had compiled on virtually every politically important person in America.

Hoover’s ego became bigger than the principal upon which he stood, to the point of eliminating accomplished FBI agents because they threatened his position, by refusing to accept intelligence information because it didn’t come from his agency, to the unlawful spying on Americans to unwarranted prosecutions, to lies and deceit. Hoover controlled the flow of information and destroyed careers, all to further himself and his agenda all the while violating the principles of this country.

Today we have a new, Most Dangerous Man in America. He is not a terrorist, he is not a bank robber, or mass murderer. He does not poison our people’s health by selling drugs but he pollutes their minds by selling his brand of drug — political hatred.

Rush Limbaugh, self-proclaimed leader of the Conservative Right, pontificates his positions on fiscal policy, his support of the war, opposition to social reform, and his business-first approach to life. For him just being liberal is paramount to un-American. Let’s say it is Obama and Hillary... Let’s put Hillary at the top — That’s a position she’s familiar with. Therefore, you’ve got a woman and a black for the first time ever on the Democratic ticket (he clears his throat and laughs). They don’t have a prayer.

They didn’t have a prayer? Why? Because it was a black and a woman and Lord knows blacks and woman cannot be elected? Does anyone detect an undercurrent of racism?

Limbaugh’s self-indulgent speech at the recent CPAC restated his position that he “wants Obama to fail.” I have spoken of it before, that as Americans, regardless of party that for the good of the public and the nation, we should want the actions of our President to fix this economic crisis to succeed.

But Limbaugh wants him to fail and in his words, “I want the country to survive as we have known it, as you and I were raised in it.” Limbaugh was born in the 1950s and raised in the 1960s so who is the “you and I” of which he speaks?

Is it the black American who could not sit in the front of a bus or the white women whose acceptable place in society was in the home and aspirations of success and leadership for her were restricted to beauty and entertainment? It was most certainly not corporate or political senior office.

Is it the America that had blacks unable to sit in the front of a bus, or the white person fearing to walk through a black neighborhood? Is it the America that saw riots in the streets, devastation and divisive war in Vietnam, an environment choking to death on its own waste, or a world poised for destruction from a nuclear war between superpowers? Is it an America that thought of war protesters as hippie freaks, cowards and traitors, and our soldiers as baby killers? Or perhaps it’s the America that saw the murder of three of our nation’s beloved leaders.

What would the world of Rush Limbaugh be? Would it be all the Mexicans back in Mexico, the blacks in Africa, women barefoot and pregnant in the kitchen and fat white men smoking cigars in back rooms while they talk of “America for Americans” I wonder where that leaves the American Indian; it was their country before we took it. Where would they go?

In the Limbaugh America, there would be no welfare, nor social security, no government helping hand to those who were so misfortunate as to not be born a Limbaugh.

In the Limbaugh America, we would strike with all our military might whenever provoked and the world would fear America’s power once more.

In Limbaugh’s America, it would be not only OK for corporate executives to make 200 million dollars when the company they are supposed to be leading loses a billion dollars, it would be right.

In the Limbaugh America, capitalism would be kinging where the motto would be the strong survive the weak perish, and the almighty dollar would be the basis of all decisions, all laws, and the direction for all Americans.

In the Limbaugh America, do we return to the days of McCarthy and Hoover, to the days of baseless accusations that destroyed lives, and to covert political control that cost us so dearly?

Some people think Rush Limbaugh is a wise and thoughtful patriot whose positions on policy are in the best interests of America. I have another point of view on that.

Limbaugh is one of the few people truly despise. His lack of compassion for those less able to help themselves is appalling, uncharitable, and selfish; and that is un-American.

I despise Limbaugh, and if I saw him laying in the gutter, beaten and broken, having lost everything he covets, his fame, his fortune and his political status, I would stand over him and as he looked up to me with fear in his eyes knowing he deserved all the hate and disgust I have for him, I would extend my hand and help him to his feet. For I live in America, where a person’s worth is measured by his heart and not his wallet, where no one is free unless all are free, and where no one is a cherished citizen unless we all are cherished citizens.

When I hear the term McCarthyism I cringe. I have a new “ism” for you, “Rushism,” the total disregard for the welfare of mankind.

Think about that; Mr. Limbaugh the next time you tell a downtrodden man to pull himself up by his own bootstraps, even when he has no boots.

In two weeks I will have Another POV.
Eckerd Center residents and staff send gift boxes to U.S. troops

A little of the caring spirit of Highlands and Cashiers will soon be reaching several groups of soldiers stationed in Middle East, thanks to the residents and staff of the Fidelia Eckerd Living Center.

Some 15 “care” packages containing books, magazines, DVDs, CDs, blank greeting cards, snack food and candy, personal hygiene products and other items are already winging their way to several U.S. military units.

The majority of the packages will be sent to members of 112th Infantry Unit of the Pennsylvania National Guard, which is serving in two different locations in Iraq. The remainder of the gift boxes are going to a U.S. Army unit in the Middle East that is from Fort Bragg, NC.

Founded by a Pennsylvania woman in 2004 to support a local National Guard unit by providing body armor, Operation Troop Appreciation has grown into a national, nonprofit organization supporting all branches and types of American troops.

Shawna Mellott, administrator of the Fidelia Eckerd Living Center, got the idea for the support-your-troops project after hearing how much items from home mean to U.S. troops in Iraq and Afghanistan, particularly if a unit isn’t close to a commissary or PX. Both her sister and brother-in-law recently returned from tours of duty in Iraq.

In addition to collecting the items donated locally, residents at the Living Center and staff also held a series of fundraisers including a soup cook-off and a cookie sale. Nursing Center Director of Nursing Ava Emory won both categories of the soup contest. In all, those efforts raised more than $200, part of which went to buy additional items to include in the packages. The rest of the money was used to pay the shipping costs to the Military APO address. Even so, shipping might well have been pretty hefty, but the center used flat rate shipping boxes, so weight wasn’t an issue,” Mellott said.

“I’m very pleased with the way everyone responded, both in terms of donating items, and in helping us raise money,” she said. “It’s been a lot of work, but I’m glad we are able to bring some smiles to the soldiers over there.”

Activities assistant Martha Woods and Eckerd resident Fred Fouts sort through a stack of black greeting cards to be included in gift boxes being sent to various military units in Iraq and Afghanistan. During February, staff and residents of the center collected books, magazines, CDs, DVDs, personal hygiene items and a variety of other things to send to three different U.S. units serving in the Middle East.

Emily Porter, social worker at the Eckerd Living Center, (L) and resident Iris Jane Norman packed one of a number of boxes of items for US troops overseas. More than 15 boxes of donated items were collected during February.

Members of the 112th Pennsylvania National Guard, who are currently stationed in two different locations in Iraq, will soon be receiving care packages from staff and residents of the Fidelia Eckerd Living Center in Highlands.
ACC Tournament preview

With the regular season wrapping up, it’s time to take a look at the ACC tournament and analyze what will surely be a competitive tournament.

Players to watch

Ty Lawson, UNC - Probably the most watched player in the tournament will be Lawson, who is questionable after aggravating a toe injury running over Duke this weekend. If Lawson is a no-go, Carolina instantly goes from favorite to underdog for the ACC Championship. People underestimate the importance of Lawson to North Carolina’s success - they cannot win a national championship (or an ACC title for that matter) without Tywon dominating the PG spot.

Jeff Teague, Wake Forest - After being snubbed from first team all-ACC, look for Teague to come out with a vengeance in the ACC tournament. It’s been over a decade since Randolph Childress single-handedly carried the Deacs to an ACC title. Can see Teague trying to repeat that performance.

Demontez Stitt, Clemson - The sophomore had his coming out party in the season finale against Wake Forest, and is going to be a star next year for the Tigers. Stitt must have a big time tournament for Clemson to make it into the finals.

Sylvan Landesburg, Virginia - UVA has a chance to spring an upset against Boston College in the first round, and if they do it will likely be due to the freshman of the year in the ACC, Landesburg.

Toney Douglas, Florida State - A bit of a snub from Douglass as he made a great case for Player of the Year down the stretch to earn Florida State a first round bye. Douglas is the un-questioned leader of an FSU team that just keeps improving down the stretch. If Lawson is out for Carolina, then FSU may just be the favorite this weekend.

Upset Special

Virginia over Boston College - BC has had a great year with Tyrese Rice and Rakim Sanders leading the way, but I think UVA pulls the upset behind a big game from the aforementioned Landesburg. Virginia coach Dave Leitao has his undermanned Cavaliers playing hard-they picked up a big win against a desperate Maryland team last Saturday.

2nd Upset Special

If Lawson doesn’t play for UNC, look for Miami to surprise the Heels on Friday. Miami had North Carolina dead to rights earlier this year before Lawson saved the Hokies with a couple of deep threes. Frank Haith’s team can frustrate North Carolina with their zone defense, and they have a guy in Jack McClinton who would be the best player on the floor if Lawson cannot go. If Lawson plays, I reserve the right to re-anoint UNC the favorite again. (How’s that for an escape clause?)

ACC Semifinal Picks

FSU vs. Miami - FSU takes this one on the strength of Toney Douglas.

Wake Forest vs. FSU - Wake in a do or die thanks to some heroics from Jeff Teague and Ish Smith.

All Tournament Team

G-Toney Douglas, FSU
G-Jeff Teague, Wake Forest
G-Jack McClinton, Miami
F-James Johnson, Wake
F-Tyler Hansbrough, UNC (lifetime achievement award)

HS Women’s Soccer

The Highlands Women’s varsity soccer team began their season Monday with a trip to face county rival Franklin in a non-conference match.

The Lady Highlanders started strong in the first half, playing solid defense and keeping the faster Lady Panthers at bay. However, Franklin was able to push a goal through halfway into the first quarter, and added another with only a minute to play in the first half for a 2-0 halftime lead.

The second half saw more of the same, as the Lady Highlanders were on the defensive for the majority of the match. Two more goals in the second half gave Franklin a final margin of 4-0.

Despite giving up four goals, the Lady Highlanders had an excellent defensive game against a faster and stronger Franklin squad. Keeper Madison Taylor recorded a double digit saves, and defenders Kate Marie Parks and Marlee McCall both had excellent games up the middle for the Lady Highlanders. The story of the match was the offense of the Lady Panthers, who outshot the Lady Highlanders 36-6 and powered home four goals.

The Highlander ladies will play again next week in Hiawassee, GA vs. the Towns County Lady Indians at 7 p.m.

President Obama does not have any lock on change. Change is also in the air at Town Hall and the Police Headquarters at what will soon be the former ABC store.

For some time, both management and the Board of Commissioners have realized that more space is needed for both administration and the police. Currently, it is not feasible to build a new and expensive Town Hall which originally was planned to be all inclusive. The movement of the ABC store to the Highlands Plaza soon and the use of the Highlands Community Center for our Board meetings have opened up new and less expensive possibilities for the Town of Highlands.

We will begin first with a revision of the current Town Hall which will temporarily allow for a much more comfortable and practical working space in that building at a very reasonable cost. We no longer will be using the current meeting room; so that room and that side of the building will be utilized as new office space. We will, however, still maintain a smaller meeting room on the first floor. Architectural plans and cost estimates are in process for this change.

The Police Headquarters will be moved to the current ABC Store after a complete renovation of that building is carried out to meet the specifications of a modern police department. Plans are being developed and cost estimates will be forthcoming regarding that move. All in all these changes should be cost effective, more convenient and morale boosting. This was all discussed at our board meeting last week and will be further discussed and hopefully approved by the board at future meetings.

However, it is still apparent to the Board that at some point in the next three to four years, we must embark upon the process of building an entirely new Town Hall which will be more appropriate to a town of our character and size, but under current economic conditions we do not believe it is feasible to take that on right now. For several years we have been putting aside funds for this and will continue to do so. As I have stated before, several of us at Town Hall attended a meeting with Congressman Heath Shuler at a workshop in Asheville on utilization of the stimulus funds the federal government approved recently. We made good contacts at that meeting and have followed up with grant requests. Whether one is in favor of this stimulus package or not, we certainly want to take advantage of it just like everyone else. It would be irresponsible not to improve our infrastructure if the funds are available to help us do so.

Senator Richard Burr's field representative was in my office also this past week to meet with the Town Manager Jim Fatland and me regarding any needs we may have. Both Senator Burr and Congressman Shuler voted against the stimulus package but each will help us as much as they can to improve our town and preserve its functionality and beauty by improving our infrastructure. We thank them for their attention to us.

Proposed Main Level Renovations

Proposed Upper Level Renovations

At the March 4 Town Board meeting, Town Manager Jim Fatland told commissioners renovations to the existing Town Hall would satisfy the needs of the town and its employees for the next 3-5 years. His office would be where Lamar's current office is -- the unlabeled square above. Though final plans and cost estimates are not yet available, renovations will cost a fraction of what a new Town Hall complex would cost. The ABC Store will be renovated to accommodate the Police Department once the ABC Store relocates to its new spot in Highlands Plaza next between the Highlands Office Supply and Subway. Plans and cost estimates have not been designed for the Police station yet.

to stay in their homes and get back on their feet. It takes the necessary steps to help responsible homeowners who are suffering due to this historic economic downturn, while also not rewarding those who were irresponsible or dishonest.

By reducing the number of foreclosures, we also protect the property values of all homes. Studies have shown that each foreclosed home reduces nearby property values by as much as 9 percent.

told us we could make it home if we could just pump up all of our tires to the correct pressure.

We made it just fine back to Highlands, and immediately went to see Nicky and AJ at Nantahala Tire and Car Care. In the back of my mind, I remembered how they had told us how vital it is to make sure that your tires are always properly inflated, especially around here.

I’d assumed that John was taking care of this, being a guy and all. It seems that we’d picked up a screw in the right tire, and as it lost air, it threw things out of kilter. The underinflated left wheel then started running on a weak part of the tire, and actually blew.

We felt rather stupid, as we should. I pass on this information as friendly advice. Check the air in your tires once a month, the same day as your birthday, if that helps you remember. Another bit of advice? There are lots of kind, helpful people out there who are waiting to step up, and be heroes. Let them. Be grateful.

they overtake native vegetation. The Oriental bittersweet vine, for example, is able to grow in the shaded, dense areas of the forest thereby having a potentially greater impact than the more familiar non-native invasive kudzu vine which thrives in the direct sunlight available along roadways and other open areas. It is also important to recognize there are species with similar names, such as the American bittersweet, which is native to this region and should not be pulled or otherwise treated.

Cooperators play a critical role in addressing private and other non-federal lands, recognizing plants do not stop their migration at a property boundary. Private land owners are encouraged to learn more about non-native invasive plants on their property. More information on invasives can be found at www.invasive.org, www.bugwood.org, and www.eddmaps.org.

For more information regarding the project decision and environmental assessment, refer to the Forest website: http://www.cs.unca.edu/nfscnc.

of the ordinance. “Is your purpose an aesthetic one? In other words, are you concerned with the height above the tree line?”

Beale and others said it was a mainly a safety issue.

In the end, the board agreed to add “habitable space” and to change the ordinance to read “the maximum building height on any building... shall not exceed 48 feet or four stories, whichever is less, of habitable space... building height shall mean the vertical distance measured from the top of the foundation to the ‘eve’ of said building.”

Morgan and the board said attics— which typically lie in the space directly below an eve — aren’t considered “habitable” space.

“I think the way it will wash out is that the maximum building height allowed is 48 feet to the eve or four stories, whichever is less. If the eve height is 48 feet, then there can be no habitable spaces such as an upper attic above that point,” said Morgan. “So the roof can extend above the 48 foot mark as long as there is no habitable space (story) above that point. If the attic does not have stairs leading to it and the attic is not heated or cooled it will not be considered habitable. The space above a hole in a ceiling where people poke stuff into the attic is not considered a story. But to cut to the point, the only thing allowed above 48 feet is the roof, or limited storage, like the hole in the ceiling.”

County Attorney Lesley Moxley said since the building height ordinance is a police ordinance only a unanimous vote was needed to make the verbiage changes, not a public hearing as with other types of ordinances. – Kim Lewicki

The following are the Highlands Fire & Rescue Dept. log entries for the week of March 6-10.

March 6
• The dept. was first-responders to assist EMS with a medical call at a residence on Rolling Woods Drive concerning a possible stroke. The victim was transported to the hospital.
• The dept. responded to a carbon monoxide alarm at a residence on Lake Sequoyah Drive. It was set off by a worker.

March 7
• The dept. provided mutual aid to Cashiers to assist with a brush fire.

March 8
• The dept. provided mutual aid to the Scaly Fire Department which was called to assist with a brush fire in the Coweeta/Otto area. Highlands stood by for both Highlands and Scaly.

March 9
• The dept. provided mutual aid to assist Scaly with a brush fire in their district.

So let's look at some phrases in this passage and gain insight...boasting gains nothing. When you're feeling weak this encourages...

I know a man in Christ. Is Paul talking about himself? Why in the third person? Is Paul trying to be self effacing? I doubt it. I believe he's just not completely able to grasp what has happened. He is unsure of the experience; it was way over his head.

In the body or out of the body? I do not know. He says, this is what? He's trying to emphasize a point there, but what point? I'm not sure.

He heard inexpressible things not permitted to tell. Sounds somewhat foggy. Again, uncertain.

So what was Paul sure of? I suppose not much in this experience. All we can say for sure is that Paul is sure of one thing: his weaknesses, he says it in verse 5.

I will boast about a man like that, but I will not boast about myself, except about my weaknesses.

I can identify with that; Paul felt weakness, in fact he boasted about it.

Let's suppose you meet Paul, lived in our day and you met him in one of his travels, in an airport:

"Hello, my name is Paul, you can call me Paul. Let me tell you about me. I have been to heaven and seen God. I've got the inside scoop on the greatest happenings on earth. Oh, by the way I am one of the greatest leaders in the church..."—Uh, no, he did not want that.

Let's try again:

"Hello, my name is Paul, let me tell you about my grandkids..."—Uh, no, not that either.

"My name is Paul, God is awesome and I'd love to share with you that I'm a weakling"—That's more like it. Can you imagine? Paul one of those guys who's hand is cold and clammy when you shake it?

2 Corinthians 10:10 For some say, "His letters are weighty and forceful, but in person he is unimpressive and his speaking amounts to nothing."

1 Corinthians 2:3 I came to you in weakness and fear, and with much trembling.

So, you could make a strong case that:

1. Paul, the Apostle, was many times not sure of himself, or when it came to himself he was only sure of his weaknesses.

This gives me hope, because many times, especially as a man I can feel the same way. When it comes to myself, or more importantly if I focus on myself and what I have to offer I find myself foggy, unsure, way over my head. But Paul, a pillar of our faith felt that way too.

I know there's more so I kept reading...

To keep me from becoming conceited because of these surpassingly great revelations, we felt it was important to cover in verses 2 through 4, we know now. He says the man in verses 1-6 was he, Paul. Maybe someday we will know why he was so cryptic.

... there was given me a thorn in my flesh, a messenger of Satan, to torment me. Three times I pleaded with the Lord to take it away from me. But he said to me, "My grace is sufficient for you..."

The words "torment" and "pleading" are strong words to describe Paul's apparent bout with weaknesses. I've been there and I can assume you have as well, though maybe not to the same extent. But we can share the same experience.

The crying out to God is intense.

The next words, though, give the needed perspective that makes all the difference.

"But he said to me, "My grace is sufficient for you..."

So I saw then that:

1. Weakness is a sure way to make us lean on God's grace.

I am quick to lean on my own ability, my own experiences, my own education, my own dashing good looks, etc. But sometimes God sends the very messenger from hell to make us lean on his grace alone. And it is severe, and it really hurts, and we beg and plead, and we need an answer, and the answer is: "... for my power is made perfect in weakness."

Therefore I will boast all the more gladly about my weaknesses, so that Christ's power may rest on me.

Did you know the Rossetter sisters?

The Florida Historical Society has named Stuart Ferguson, who writes book reviews for Cyno’s Bookshop, its 2009 Rossetter Scholar, and is giving him a small stipend to write a book on the two ladies — Caroline and Ella Rossetter — who left their estate to the historical society so their 19th-century family homestead could become a museum. For the past couple of years, Ferguson has been site manager of Historic Rossetter Museum.

Ella died in the early 1990s. Carrie died in 1999, aged 101.

The Rossetter sisters lived in Eau Gallie, FL, which is part of Melbourne, FL, but they spent their vacations at High Hampton Inn in Cashiers, and did most of their shopping in Highlands at Wit’s End and the Stone Lantern. They also attended mass at Our Lady of the Mountains Catholic Church and visited friends in Highlands whenever in the area.

Ferguson is planning a chapter in the book about their time in Highlands and Cashiers. He’s asking anyone who remembers the Rossetter sisters — either Caroline or Ella — to contact him by email or phone. Email: StuartFerguson@myfloridahistory.org or StuartMFerguson@hotmail.com and his cell phone number is (321) 693-7829.

Hospital announces free health screenings

Changes are in the works for the upcoming season of free health screenings offered every year by Highlands-Cashiers Hospital.

This will be the 15th year the hospital has offered free screenings. Nearly 400 people took advantage of the last year’s series of area screenings. Rather than holding multiple screenings in various locations around its service area, the hospital plans two mega screenings this summer, one in Highlands and one in Cashiers.

The Highlands screening will be held on level 1 of the Jane Woodruff Clinic on June 27. The other will be at Blue Ridge School on July 11. Both dates fall on Saturday.

The hours of each screening have been extended, however, significantly expanding the number of participants that can be accommodated. Sign up for each screening will be limited to the first 150 people, however. Priority will be given to those with addresses in the hospital’s actual service areas.

For the Highlands screening, priority will be given to residents in Highlands, Scaly Mountain and Sky Valley zip codes.

For the Blue Ridge screening, residents with zip codes for Cashiers, Glenville, Sapphire, and Yellow/Cullowhee Mountain area will be given priority. Those from other areas, will be placed on a waiting list and accommodated if space allows.

Folks can register by calling the hospital at 526-1435, or sign up on the hospital’s website at www.highlandscashiershospital.org (click on the screening menu and complete the registration form). Those registering online will receive a confirmation email. Appointment times will be assigned as part of the registration process to help reduce lines and waiting times.

While the number of screenings has been reduced, the tests and services are essentially the same as in years past. Participants will be checked for height and weight, BMI (body mass index), blood pressure, blood oxygen saturation level, cholesterol and triglyceride levels, glucose (blood sugar) levels, and white and red blood cell counts (to detect anemia and infection). Men over the age of 45 will also receive a blood test to detect prostate cancer (PSA).

Due to the nature of the tests being offered, those participating in screenings are asked not to eat or drink anything but water after midnight the night before.

In addition to the various tests, a dietitian/nutritionist will be on hand to discuss healthy eating and exercise habits, and a physical therapist will be available to evaluate balance and strength. Hearing tests and ear examinations will also be conducted at most of the screenings. All of that is in addition to a complimentary continental breakfast.

The Mirror Lake Sewer Line grant is for $3.1 million and the Lake Sequoyah Sewer Line grant is for $5.65 million.

During several past meetings, Fatland said he and staff are assembling grant packages which will include design and permits as required with a submittal date of March 24 for two projects through NC DENR, the Mirror Lake sewer line construction grant.

The Mirror Lake Sewer Line grant is for $3.1 million and the Lake Sequoyah Sewer Line grant is for $5.65 million.

Other grants the town has submitted through NC DENR channels.

Those include emergency generators for Highlands’ water pumping stations, Radio Read meters for water consumption ($770,000), water line upgrades for the Big Creek Arm of Lake Sequoyah ($205,000), and dredging of the Big Creek Arm of Lake Sequoyah ($2 million). The permitting process for the dredging project relating to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is already underway and the town is now waiting to meet with the Corps.

Fatland said that renovation of the ABC Store for the Police Department can be financed with USDA grants – separate from Obama’s stimulus package – and the town will be meeting with the USDA once plans and designs are finalized.

Other grants the town has submitted are Assembly grants, which include Highway Safety Program and Crime Commission which will finance a speed trailer, fingerprint equipment and supplies and a Ruvi’s Krimsite Imager for a total of $32,300. Those grant applications were submitted on March 3.

Mayor Don Mullen said whether one is in favor of the stimulus package or not, the town should take advantage of it just like everyone else. “It would be irresponsible not to improve our infrastructure if the funds are available to help us do so,” he said.
