Surveillance system up and running

Though folks entering and exiting the Rec Park may not notice the “All Activities Are Monitored By Video” signs, they will notice the 54” flat screen TV set up at the reception area depicting 30 camera views of the property.

The video surveillance system on the town’s recreational facilities as well as at Highlands School, is the kingpin in the Gilliam’s Promise program to deter criminal and drug activity in Highlands.

Bill and Eleanor Cheney named their foundation for their grandson, who due to his involvement with drugs, took his own life on September 21, 2009. They have since made it their life mission to prevent others from following this tragic path.

Support Person of the Year Mary Greene and Teacher of Year Chris Green.

‘Green’ is the word at HS

By Ryan Potts

As teachers and students returned to school last week for the 2012-13 school year, Highlands School also announced the winners of the 2011-12 Teacher of the Year and Support Person of the Year awards.

The 2011-12 Teacher of the Year award was given to Social Studies teacher Chris Green. Green teaches Civics, AP US History and Current Events at Highlands School, and will be beginning his 9th year at Highlands this fall.

Green is originally from Franklin, NC, and graduated from UNC - Asheville. His first teaching job was in Tyrrell County, on the coast of NC before moving home to the mountains and accepting a job at Highlands. In addition to his teaching, Green is a very successful soccer coach and has been named Smokey Mountain Conference Coach of the Year six straight times.

“Chris is an exceptional teacher,” said Highlands School.

Davis and Snow pair off at ‘League’ forum

Thursday, Aug. 9, the League of Women Voters hosted a forum between sitting NC Senator for the 50th District Jim Davis and candidate and previous 50th District Senator John Snow.

The two epitomized leanings of their national parties – Davis, the Tea Party bent of the Republican Party and Snow the center of the road of the Democrat Party.

The two spoke to a full “over-60” house where Davis supporters who sported red T-shirts with the slogan “Jim Davis for NC Senate” at least visually, dominated the room.

There were no real surprises – as expected, the candidates differ on education, taxes, women issues and more.

Snow said his primary concern is creating jobs and expanding education opportunities for students in NC schools because education is key to success in the mountain districts and the state, and this year’s legislative budget cut $650 million in education – which has been harmful to economic recovery. To compete for jobs, NC needs an educated workforce so support of public schools, community colleges and universities is absolutely essential, he said.

“Education is the way we get ourselves out of the recession. The cuts from pre-K through higher education have led to larger class sizes, loss of education jobs and bigtuition hikes, as well as more expensive loan packages for students,” he said.

“Forty-five percent of jobs require a college education and the Republicans have made getting that education harder during a recession Tuition hikes of 23% in community colleges which is where we train our workforce; a 10% increase in loans at higher institutions. So the Republicans didn’t raise taxes but it cost you because they have raised fees for everyone while giving a tax break to the wealthy but made it harder to go to a community college.”

He said the purpose of government is to build families up, help provide honest work so they can take care of their families. He said public safety is key as is a community free of crime.

“Before we could talk about taxes, we have to talk about jobs and education. It’s the future of NC where the Tea Party bent of the Republican Party is talking about it,” Snow said.
Lincoln and Roosevelt had it hard, too

Dear Editor,

Since the author of the letter “Still think he’s the Antichrist” which ran in the Aug. 9 edition of Highlands Newspaper states he’s not supposed to talk about religion or politics in public, but he quotes Jackie Gleason’s saying of “I got a big mouth” – I hope he realizes that was when Jackie usually screwed up with that BIG MOUTH as did the author when stating that “the worst problems any incoming President has ever had to face.”

I would ask the author if he has ever heard of presidents by the last name of Lincoln or Roosevelt?

I would like to see our town vehicles stay in the town of Highlands, especially police vehicles. Wouldn’t it be cheaper to give our finest mileage allowances than furnish them with expensive police cars to show visibility in several counties?

Trashing a time honored tradition

Dear Editor,

The League of Woman Voters has a time honored tradition of providing a neutral platform for information and the exchange of ideas on issues of importance to the public. Senator Jim Davis and his supporters high jacked the August 9th meeting and turned it into a political rally. They broughtdishonor to themselves by trashing this time honored tradition. Their “red shirt” tactics included arriving early to grab strategic seats, loud inappropriate bursts of applause and stomping while Davis was speaking.

It is significant to remember that during presidential debates the moderators are careful to caution the audience to refrain from applause and other disruptions while each speaker is taking. This is common courtesy. Perhaps the fact that Davis refused all previous invitations to speak at the League of Woman Voters explain why he and his supporters were ignorant of the proper behavior expected in a neutral forum. Should the “Red Shirts” decide to attend future L.W.V. meetings they need also be aware of the fact that the lunches are not free.

Chick-fil-A and the view of gay marriage

Dear Editor,

The owner, Dan Cathy, of Chick-fil-A has been under great criticism for his position of not supporting gay marriage. This criticism not only has come from government officials but universities, where the root meaning of uni-versity is a unified and diversity of thought and discussion of ideas for life and living.

Sadly, it seems in many settings if you oppose the position of the other you are considered an extremist or have some type of phobia and are discredited.

The discussion of gay marriage has two parts that are distinct from one another; one is legalization of marriage, and the other is gay rights.

The universal thought of most societies has been that marriage is between a man and a woman. This is not just the Judeo Christian value system but also under a natural system as well.

Marriage is the bond between man and woman in the furthering of the family -- the family can become diverse, but the man and woman cannot. Members within the family can be as varied as in gay or straight, as some would say, or even to the extremes of human behavior. But we all, whatever your bent is, have been derived, begotten, or created from a man and a woman. There is no other way we have come into being.

If God had more than one way human life could be created, it would make sense it would be something that we could follow.
But he in his divine creation set in motion the things that can be logically followed and easily understood. To make this into something it is not, is like saying a ball is the same as an orange because they both round. We may want to define this differently but the creation definition cannot change.

The second part is the rights of the individual, which I fully agree. I’m sad to see that many want special rights for color, ethnicity, or for a variety of differences. I prefer, “human rights,” where we all band as one, there’s no distinction, we work as a united people or a united family, as God intended. This is what the people before us had in mind that God has indwelled to us certain unalienable rights, freedom of life, freedom of liberty, and to pursuit of happiness. This can only work its best if we credit or follow the one who instilled this within us.

With this being said, our early nation’s beginning didn’t model this well when slavery was present. The mindset was how could we run our economy without slavery? We lost our vision and the value of life. But thanks to a man of faith, Wilbert Wilberforce, who through hard criticism endured a long 26 years and fought to defeat the darkness of slavery in Europe, influenced America as well.

We as individuals are most valued and respected of all creation because we are created in His image, have faith in Christ, even though at times not best represented (self included) and we should always try to reflect what he has given us and then to have this spill out from us freely.... just as He did. (1 John 4:7 ...) Keep thinking

I’m bettin’ you’re thinking a satire clown like me would know absolutely nothing about the Sikh religion. Ha, wrong, hummus breath! And if you had a search engine that could look through over 400 columns I’ve written for two newspapers over the last eight plus years, you would discover the following statements made by li’l ole me concerning the Sikhs and religion in general:

Religion and the practice of religion is the single most deadly cause of violence, death and bloodshed in all of recorded history, including all our wars.

The Sikh religion is neither Hindu nor Muslim but like all religions, has its extremists and are the ones I like to call the ‘crazies.’

The Sikh religion accepts Jesus Christ as one of God’s greatest prophets and honors his mother, the Blessed Virgin Mary, even more than some Protestant religions.

I’ve lost track of the exact year the Sikhs found me but I remember it was on 4th Street in Highlands. I’m guessing it was the early nineties and I was in the rappelling business, teaching visitors and tourists how to descend the mighty cliffs of Highlands. As I rolled up 4th Street toward Spring St, I looked through my rearview mirror and saw a carload of bearded men wearing turbans closely tailgating my Jeep. I slid my revolver to a ready position and watched.

Then they turned onto Spring St and disappeared.

That evening, I received a call from a man who described himself as a clan leader of Sikhs from Miami. He had spotted the ad on the wheel cover of my Jeep, drove his car up close and copied the phone number. (To protect these people from bigots of Highlands, I’ll not mention names.) The Sikh on the phone wanted me to teach his clan to rappel and to use the sport as a character builder and a way to face life’s fears.

Over the next eight or nine years, I put hundreds of Sikhs off the edge of cliffs in and around Highlands. I got to know them quite well. Except for their crazies, who were not part of my students, the Sikhs I have come in contact with are among the most peace-loving religions. Note: At one point, I did witness a twelve year old pull a knife from his turban and throw it at a tree eight feet away.

Money doesn’t buy everything

We’re staying at a lovely inn in Key West—which is not to say it is not without problems.

Local lore describes our cottage as a former slave cabin. The corners of the pool area are remnants of either a tobacco warehouse or a cistern. Pick your favorite story. Citizens of the Conch Republic are at ease with either explanation. The pool is rather spectacular with tile walls and thick brick foundations, relics of another time, marking the corners.

Although the place must be considerably more comfortable than it was for earlier slave occupants, the window air conditioner just doesn’t cut the mustard. The Simonton Court, at 320 Simonton Street, is in Old Town, and just a block from Duvall Street, the aorta, if not the heart of Key West. A brick walk leads from the quiet street to several cottages. Lush tropical plants line the walk. A lean black and white cat prowls the property. It would be almost perfect if it weren’t so damned hot.

There is another problem, one which an industrial air conditioner could not correct, although off the shelf technology could repair it in a minute. Although the inn advertises WiFi throughout the property, it neglects to say that it is not available inside the rooms. The fact that it is more comfortable outside than in doesn’t justify the lapse. I mentioned the inconvenience to the desk clerk who explained that the signal was unable to penetrate the tin roofs of our cottage, a fact not mentioned in the brochure. I explained that Internet connect was really important to all of us, Lizzie, Bull, and me, and asked to be moved

Some August random thoughts

There are a lot of different things I wanted to write about this week, but couldn’t settle on one, so instead you guys (all 3 of you that read this) get some random thoughts.

First, the Olympics are over and it was a pretty good experience for the US. The folks in red, white and blue won the overall medal count and Michael Phelps stated his case as possibly the best US Olympian of all time. The US Women’s Soccer team played in probably the greatest women’s game I have ever seen against Canada and then defeated Japan in the final to avenge their World Cup loss. All in all it was a great summer for America and a hearty congratulations are in order for all of the athletes that represented our country so well in London.

If you ever wondered about the power of the internet, wonder no further. There is a massive smoke storm building around Chapel Hill right now, and it could result in some serious repercussions for UNC’s athletic program and academic reputation. The latest controversy relates to the Butch Davis era in which the head of the University’s African-American Studies department, Julius Nyang’oro, was found to have offered bogus classes primarily to athletes. UNC’s investigation into the matter went as far back as 2007, but a message board poster on an NC State fan board was able to hack UNC’s computer system and gain access to a transcript belonging to former two sport athlete and current NFL star Julius Peppers. The transcript appears to show controversial classes in the African-American Studies Department as far back as 2003, which could demonstrate that UNC’s investigation into the matter was not thorough enough. Two comments on this matter: first, there are not enough facts at this point to do anything but jump to wild conclusions, so there will be no speculation from me because this could simply be a bunch of smoke. Secondly, how do we view the “fan” of a rival school who discovered this information? If an investigative journalist dug deep and discovered this type of info they would be applauded, but there is something that seems wrong about an opposing fan being able to bring this type of info to the public.

Preseason football has begun already, and I have to say I enjoyed the heck out of watching Robert Griffin III in his Washington debut. The guy is electrifying, and him, Cam Newton and even that guy playing for the Jets are three guys who are changing the way people think about the quarterback position in the NFL.

And finally, I watched a great clip of John Cleese on YouTube the other day in which he proclaimed that “truly stupid people have no idea just exactly how stupid they really are.” Cleese points out that the skills necessary to identify oneself as stupid are not available to stupid people. I would like to provide a rebuttal to that, in that I have identified myself as a truly stupid person. Last week, I wrote a column about my beloved Pirates and AJ Burnett, and promptly jinxed them all by myself. For that, I am a truly stupid, stupid person.
Just when you think that you’ve seen the worst of the Democrats and the Obama campaign team, they go deeper into the sewer. Unless you are totally ignoring the news, or your news source has chosen to not report on the matter, you are aware of the smarmiest political ad going. If watching him speak doesn’t send a cold shiver through your system, you may consider a complete mental (and spiritual) checkup.

Anyway, some background, which may be elemental to some of you, but it can’t hurt. There used to be, and still are, limits as to how much an individual can give to a political campaign. There was a so-called 527 provision that allowed certain groups to contribute to political causes, but with caveats. Then Citizens United came along. Excerpting from a NYT column: The term is shorthand for a Supreme Court decision that gave corporations much the same right to political speech as individuals have, thus removing virtually any restriction on corporate money in politics.

Now, any outside group can use corporate money to make a direct case for who deserves your vote and why. A second change is that the old 527s have now been made effectively obsolete, replaced by the super PAC (Political Action Committee). Super PACs may not make contributions to candidate campaigns or parties, but may engage in unlimited political spending independently of the campaigns. They can raise funds from corporations, unions and other groups and from individuals, without legal limits.

From Wikipedia: According to Federal Election Commission advisories, Super PACs are not allowed to coordinate directly with candidates or political parties. This is intended to prevent them from operating campaigns that complement or parallel those of the candidates they support. Super PACs have been criticized for relying heavily on negative ads (which, unfortunately, have proven to be effective).

Enough background – now to the story. From the Washington Times: Supporters of President Obama refused to pull a TV ad suggesting that Republican Mitt Romney caused a woman to die from cancer, a commercial that is raising questions about suspected coordination between the Obama campaign and an advocacy group founded by a former White House staffer.

“You know, in the past when somebody pointed out that something was inaccurate, campaigns pulled the ad; they were embarrassed, Mr. Romney said on Bill Bennett’s “Morning in America” radio show. “Today, they just blast ahead.” But officials at Priorities USA, a super PAC founded by former White House spokesman Bill Burton, showed no signs of canceling the advertisement.

Even some Democrats said the ad crossed the line onto the realm of the underhanded with its strong inference that Mr. Romney has a dead woman’s blood on his hands. The ad features steelworker Joe Sopptic, who lost his job and health care benefits after Mr. Romney’s Bain Capital closed a steel plant in Kansas City, MO, in 2001. He describes how his wife developed cancer and...

The Highlands Highlander soccer team traveled to Franklin on Saturday to face off with the Panthers in a preseason match that brought about encouraging results for the Highlanders. The Highlanders were facing a great deal of uncertainty, having lost 10 players from last year’s squad to graduation and playing without Senior Taylor Osteen, who was sidelined after surgery to remove his wisdom teeth.

Despite the youth, the Highlanders came out very strong, getting early goals from juniors Tyler Munger and Ryan Vincent to take a 2-0 lead in the first half. The Panthers came back strong, scoring three unanswered goals and putting the young Highlanders back on their heels.

It appeared that Franklin would head into halftime with the lead, but with just moments left in the first half, freshman Austin Nichols hammered home an equalizing goal that shifted the momentum back into the favor of the young Highlanders. “That was a big goal for us,” said coach Chris Green, “we had started to struggle, and they had all the momentum from scoring three in a row, but after that goal we all exhaled a bit and I think the guys really responded well in the second half.”

The second half saw 30 minutes of scoreless soccer, as neither side could break through to retake the lead. However, with 10 minutes to play, sophomore Davis Moore was able to corral a ball in front of the net and blast it home to put the Highlanders up 4-3. It was a lead that the young Highlanders would not relinquish, and they headed up the mountain with a 4-3 victory over the 3A Panthers in their pockets.

Highlands will open the season today with a home match against the Brevard Blue Devils – kickoff is at the Highlands School soccer field at 6 p.m.
A Career in Real Estate: Is It Right for You?

I am often asked by clients, associates, and friends what the world of real estate work is truly like, and whether or not I believe pursuing a career in real estate would be a fit for them.

So, what exactly is it like to be a real estate broker?

I have had the great fortune to have worked in a variety of industries—everything from book publishing to nonprofit management to entrepreneurship education to business/entrepreneur consulting and more. What I love about real estate is that it affords me the opportunity to bring together all of my interests, experience, and education. Real estate also enables me to tap into my creative side and express innovative ideas each and every day.

While it is difficult to paint a “day in the life,” as every day is very different, on any day, you could do the following: meet with prospective Seller clients, research comparables and cost replacement value, and provide them with an estimate of listing price range for their property; or, you could meet with Buyer clients, listen intently to the kind of property they are seeking, research the properties within their parameters, and show them properties that are potential matches.

You may spend an entire day mapping out a creative and targeted marketing approach that is custom made for a new listing and/or strategizing new ways to bring attention to existing listings so they are kept “top of mind” in the marketplace.

You may spend time working on existing deals under contract, ensuring each item on the Due Diligence list is carefully executed. This may mean attending home inspections, walking property with surveyors or environmental health inspectors, and/or meeting with contractors to communicate repair requests.

You may spend time working on your online marketing, social media marketing, and other media exposure by blogging, posting, and keeping fresh content in front of your market’s eyes and ears.

Or, you could spend hours writing and negotiating offers, ensuring your clients’ interests are well represented, and that they receive the best possible price and terms in the deal.

You will work closely with other agents and firms, attorneys, and lenders to cooperatively serve your clients and ensure their deal closes in a smooth and timely fashion. You will be communicating very frequently with your clients, updating them on everything from showing feedback and marketing exposure ideas for Seller clients to sending new listings to the market that may be of interest to Buyer clients.

What about the personal characteristics and skills needed for success in real estate? A superb real estate agent possesses an entrepreneurial mindset; is unwaveringly ethical and hard working, is devoted to providing extraordinary customer experiences, is agile and tenacious, is an empathetic listener, and is passionate about lifelong learning and growing.

Interested in learning more? Contact a local broker-in-charge, and set up a time to meet and discuss the work of real estate agents in more depth. Ask about firm’s philosophy, culture, environment, and approach. It is always a joy for us at White Oak Realty Group to teach others about this fun, exciting, and lucrative industry, as well as share how we work, so let us know if you would like to explore possibilities together.

Box office opens for HCP’s ‘Fox on the Fairway’

Barbara Werder, costumer for the Highlands Cashiers Players, consults with cast members Ronnie Spilton and Lance Trudel on colors and sizes for the costumes they will wear in “Fox on the Fairway,” which runs August 23 thru September 2.

It’s only a week till opening night for “The Fox on the Fairway,” the first play of the Highlands Cashiers Players’ new season. The box office opens Thursday, August 16, and Friday, the 17th, for season subscribers who may make their seating reservations by calling, 526-8084, or dropping by the Performing Arts Center (PAC) on Chestnut Street in Highlands. Beginning Saturday, August 18, reservations will be taken for general tickets. The box office is open 10 a.m. till 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

And it’s not too late to become a subscriber to HCP’s four-play season. Subscribers get a $10 discount per subscription, make their seating choices two days before regular tickets go on sale, and have the flexibility of using their tickets any way they wish—one per play or all for one play! Subscriptions may still be purchased by calling 526-8084.

“The Fox on the Fairway” opens on Thursday evening, August 23, beginning at 7:30 p.m. at PAC. It is a wonderfully ridiculous, fast-paced comedy by the acknowledged modern master of farce, Ken Ludwig, in which two rival country clubs, desperate to win the annual tournament, try to bend the rules by adding an illegal top-notch player to the line-up. Romances bloom among young and old and a surprise ending brings all to a happy conclusion, with clever dialogue and big laughs all the way.

The play is sponsored in part by the Laurel Magazine. It runs Thursday, Aug. 23, through Sunday, August 26, and Thursday, August 30, through Sunday, September 2, evening performances at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday matinees at 2:30 p.m.

Interlude at First Pres, Aug. 22

At 2pm on Wednesday, Aug. 22, the Interlude Concert Series sponsored by First Presbyterian Church and the Episcopal Church of the Incarnation will showcase members of The Mountain Chamber Players from Brevard. Featured musicians will be Larry Black, trumpet; Laura Franklin, marimba; and Katherine Palmer, piano. The concert will take place at First Presbyterian Church.

Only a few tickets left!

The 20th Annual Bel Canto Recital is almost sold out. If you haven’t gotten your tickets yet, call soon.

Just a short time left to get tickets to the Twentieth Annual Bel Canto Recital! This year will feature four performers in a performance of “beautiful singing.” The repertoire will range from Vincenzo Bellini to Andrew Lloyd Webber, from Georges Bizet to Sigmund Romberg, from Giuseppe Verdi to Jacques Offenbach, all accompanied by the wonderful playing of Dr. Stephen Dubberly on piano.

Bel Canto’s twentieth recital will take place on September 9, 2011 at the Martin-Lipscomb Performing Arts Center at 4 PM. As always, the performance will be followed by a sumptuous dinner at the Highlands Country Club. A portion of every ticket sold goes to support three local organizations – the music program at Highlands School, the Highlands Community Child Development Center and the permanent collection of The Bascom Arts Center. To contact Bel Canto for tickets and to get on the mailing list, please call 828.526.1947 or 828.526.2609.

I am a guy who had no interest in computers until 1997 or 98. I was in Haiti, Michigan playing Penn State for supremacy of the Big Ten. I wondered around who had won the game and one of my computer savvy buddies said that we could get "on line" at the computer lab and get the score. I must admit that my skepticism, more than interest in the game, prompted me to join a group that crossed a rocky field to the computer lab. We didn't get the score. Such was the state of electronic communication in Haiti in those days, when the world wide web excluded the wretchedly poor island.

Today, we are in a tizzy when we can't get connected. There are escape resorts that promote their isolation, believing, or claiming to believe, that busy people really want to get away and get unconnected. It doesn't seem to apply to anybody in my family. We'll try to get a refund tomorrow and move to another hotel. If the manager refuses, I guess we'll just slit our wrists.

I've tried to sleep. The temperature in our room is in the mid to upper 70s. Did I mention inadequate air conditioning? Lizzy told me we're spending $400 per night to stay here. If I want to rough it, I'll pay $20 or $30 and stay at Jellystone Campground. I'll be a bit more insistent with the manager than I had planned. A hot sleepiness night can do much to steel resolve. If he refuses a refund, I'll promise to report everything I've told you to tripadvisor.com. I may omit mention the lovely pool and the lush vegetation which seem pretty insignificant right now.

... SWANSON from 8...

crime and drugs. “When it comes to education, there’s even talk in Raleigh of privatizing education, of getting businesses involved and using a voucher system. If we lose public education for our people, we are in serious trouble,” he said.

Snow also said he wants to revamp the 30-year-old tax structure that doesn’t work well in a recession because the money coming in isn’t as much as it was before people lost their jobs. He said the corporate tax structure is the highest in the northeast.

He said when government looks at reducing spending, it must make sure it isn’t doing something that will harm those who depend on the state for help. Like when the Republicans defunded Planned Parenthood, they took away something women depended on — domestic wellness, said Snow.

“These are issues that are important to women. That includes health tests and daycare funding. If we don’t have daycare, women can’t work. Thousands of kids lost funding for Smart Start which affected more women than men.

Davis said he is running proudly on what the Republicans have accomplished.

“When Snow was in the Senate he voted for a temporary tax increase on people in the state. That was the wrong thing to do. We returned money to people because we think the people who earned it know best how to spend it. The first $50,000 in NC is free of income tax,” he said.

He said he voted for tax decreases and made government more efficient.

“We need a zero-based budget. We have to justify every dime of what we spend of the folks’ money. We need to invest where it does good and not waste it.”

He claimed the state budget reflects that Republicans support education and hasn’t heard any talk about privatizing education but said competition is good and people should have the freedom to send their kids where they want to. “They should get a tax break if they want to leave the public sector for private,” he said.

He said Republicans restored 273 teachers and have more K-3 classes and teachers and said even with the increase in tuition, community college is still a great deal.

Davis claimed most of what Planned Parenthood did was abortions. “So we took that money and gave it to public health departments. I believe the more lives we save the better. It’s true that women have been suffering more in this economy, but a lot of that is due to their own choices. Most abortions are to unwed mothers and every kid deserves parents.”

Davis said he shares Snow’s passion for reforming the tax structure. “I believe in the Fair Tax. Let’s get rid of the IRS and Dept. of Revenue. We need serious tax reform. We need to make our county and state competitive. We need to change the corporate tax from 6.9% to 4.9% and get government off the backs of businesses.” – Kim L.

On Thursday, August 9, the Macon County Republican Party organized a rally of support for Senator Jim Davis. Senator Davis and former Senator John Snow participated in a Forum sponsored by the League of Women Voters at Tartan Hall in Franklin. After meeting at the Republican Headquarters in Franklin, about forty members of the Macon GOP made the trek up to Tartan Hall where they first held "Davis" signs of support along Church Street outside Tartan Hall. The Republican supporters, with their red "Re-Elect Senator Jim Davis" tee shirts on, made up about seventy-five percent of the attendees at the forum. The well organized rally clearly indicated that Macon County is Jim Davis country. Photos of the rally can be found on the Macon County Republican Party's facebook page.
