Culvert work set to begin; other projects pending

Of all the public works projects discussed at the Town Board’s retreat in February, only one is a sure thing.

For four years, McGill Associates and the town have been working with state and federal agencies to get grant money to replace three culverts where Mill Creek crosses Spruce, Laurel and Fifth streets.

After an initial denial, state and FEMA emergency grant money has been secured so now the $665,000 project is a go with no cost to the town.

Town Manager Bob Frye said he is meeting with the state on April 7 to finalize paperwork. “After that I would imagine work on the culverts will begin shortly, thereafter,” he said.

The old corrugated metal culverts will be replaced with larger concrete culverts – it will be a six-to-eight-month project.

BOE chops at budget for April 15 deadline

Told system is teacher heavy

By whittling away at the 2013-2014 current expense budget, the school board has decreased the original $2.1 million figure requested of the county to $1.1 million.

At its March 18 budget work session held at Highlands School prior to the Board of Education meeting, Interim Superintendent Dr. Jim Duncan presented a new “Possible Reductions for 13-14 Current Expenses” scenario.

The first reduction list which was presented at the Feb. 25 budget work session slashed middle school athletic programs, the system’s alternatives school – Union Academy, the Macon Early College (MEC) school and numer-

When she gets a new roommate and a boyfriend things are looking up for Star, but her life drastically changes when her cystic fibrosis takes a turn for the worse. Will she survive? NC Highway historical marker for André Michaux approved for Highlands

There will soon be four historical markers in Highlands and that’s saying something for a town Highlands’ size.

On March 15, the North Carolina Historical Commission in Raleigh approved an appeal for a NC Highway Historical Marker in Highlands to honor the French pioneer botanist André Michaux. André Michaux was the royal botanist of Louis XVI, who appointed him to investigate what plants in America could be of value to the French building, medical, and farming industries. Michaux made his first trip shortly.

Wayfinding project on schedule; Gateway signs on their way

By Ran Shaffner
Small Town Main Street Design Committee

Soon actions set in motion concerning signage in Highlands will come to fruition.

Plans for the Gateway Signs are already underway. It’s taken longer than expected because NCDOT rights-of-way and restrictions had to be considered, as did the topography of the land at each of the four locations. Topography will determine how much of a stone base can be constructed, possibly for at least two of the four signs.

The Small Town Main Street committee has been meeting regularly and hopes to begin fabrication within the next few weeks.

The committee has been working quietly behind the scenes concerning the street signs. The idea was to identify the streets at each intersection with fewer rather than more signs, and that has been mostly accomplished. Where there were two or three poles for signs, there is now one.

Dear Editor,

It was sad to see Mayor David Wilkes's comments regarding the Highlands Police Department in the Thursday, March 14 article entitled “Police dept. policies, conduct subject at retreat.” His words spoke to the true nature of his leadership and immaturity.

If the mayor and commission are trying to change the perception of the police department then why don't they start by supporting publicly but leading change privately? His comments do nothing but widen the gap between the police department and the public.

David Wilkes has proven over and over that he is not a true leader and not the leader Highlands needs. His desire to get to petty and public arguments with departments of the town prove this fact.

I also am disappointed to see that Commissioner Gary Drake does not see the safety of the Highlands officers as a priority as well as his disregard of the knowledge of policy, with is comment regarding two police cars showing up at stops as appearing as a “major drug bust.” That comment is juvenile and obviously made, along with Wilkes’s, to flex their muscles in the name of re-election.

My desire is that the great town of Highlands will have enough not to re-elect or support these two men and their inept leadership.

Confession of an OSIP

Dear Editor,

A letter-to-the-editor in your last issue that Alice Nelson so eloquently wrote was a personal revelation for me. I confess, I have always suffered from being an “overly sensitive insecure person.” I wish my friend Alice had warned me about being an OSIP after I wrote my first letter-to-the editor challenging what Fred Wooldridge had written in his column.

I plead guilty by reason of ignorance. I had no idea I was supposed to remain silent when I had a different opinion about an issue read in the newspaper. I failed to realize Fred was infallible in his analysis of social issues and politics, and that us OSIP suffers were to contemplate our own insecure positions in a self imposed silence.

For the record, I was never one of those people who asked Kim to terminate Fred’s column. With a few folks stepping forward to write letters of disagreement, I thought the paper had facilitated a point counterpoint dynamic that made for very interesting and provocative reading. I too applauded Kim’s willingness to have continued publishing Fred’s column. I also thank her for the editorial policy of publishing letters of disagreement concerning sensitive topics like politics, human rights, war, religion, sexual orientation, animal rights, just to name a few on a long list.

The MC school system needs to bite the bullet

Dear Editor,

The Macon County School Board (MCSB) believes it will have to reduce spending by $1.95 million, about 5%, this fall unless it gets more money from its funders – State, Federal, and County taxpayers.

The MCSB is in a tough position because it is limited to spending only the money it is provided, like a child’s allowance from their parents. It is also in an enviable position because it can lobby...
Fernande Annette Mead died peacefully on March 11 at Aspen Siesta, the assisted nursing facility where she had been a resident for the last two years. Born in Paris, France, in 1927, she was the daughter of Albert Eugene and Suzanne Rosset Comte. She was married for 53 years to Albert William Mead who predeceased her in 1999.

She is survived by her son, Eric Albert Mead and his wife Joyce Larson, of Lakewood, Colorado, her daughter, Michelle Annette Mead-Armor, of Highlands, North Carolina, her grandson, Mark Adam Mead and great granddaughters, Sydney and Madeleine Mead, of Centennial, Colorado, her granddaughter, Eric Audra Mead Thornton and her husband, Clancy Thornton, and great-grandsons, Jacob and Matthew Thornton.

Annette Mead studied piano at the Ecole César Franck in Paris, until her studies were interrupted by World War II. She received her BA from Madison College (now James Madison University) and an MA from the State University of New York at Fredonia. She taught French at Emma Willard School (Troy, NY), Fishburne Military School (Waynesboro, VA), Stuart Hall (Staunton, VA), Fairview High School (Fairview, PA), and Mercyhurst University (Erie, PA). She was a tough, but fair, teacher, and instilled a love of the French language and culture in generations of students, who remained in contact with her over the years. Normally a quiet and reserved person, she blossomed in front of a classroom of students.

Mrs. Mead was a member of the World War II War Brides Association. She and her sister Francine came to the USA on March 21, 1946, aboard the Italian passenger ship, Vulcania. An American citizen since 1954, she nonetheless retained a great love for her native France, and was at heart, a Parisienne.

Annette loved art and music all her life, donating her time and energy to the Erie Concert Series (where she heard Pavarotti), the Erie Ballet, and the Waynesboro Concert Association (where she enjoys seeing Elizabeth von Trapp), and the Shenandoah Valley Art Center. She took great delight in playing the piano until a stroke left her unable to continue. She enjoyed playing bridge and tennis. Annette excelled in needlework, and in her later years, knit sweaters for “Comfort Bears” for the Hospice of the Shenandoah.

Annette Mead’s life was a study in showing by example. She faced life’s biggest challenges with good sense and courage. She had a dry wit, and her many quips and comments will live on after her. She made the world a better – and more elegant – place.

No funeral has been planned at this time. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in Annette’s name to the Hospice of the Shenandoah, P.O. Box 215, Fishersville, VA 22939 or to St. Jude’s Children’s Research Hospital.

Willard Hicks Allen

Willard Hicks Allen died Tuesday, March 12, 2013 at the Highlands-Cashiers Hospital following a brief illness. She was born July 19, 1910 in Belmont, North Carolina, and was the daughter of William and Myrtle (Brown) Allen. Willard graduated from Central High School in Asheville, North Carolina in 1928 and then attended Western Carolina University in Cullowhee, North Carolina. After graduation, she taught at the Carlisle School in Hyde Park, New York, and the Monticello School in Monroe, North Carolina. In 1936, Willard married William Hicks Allen, and they had two children: Mary E. and John W. Willard was an active member of the Highlands-Cashiers Community and was a long-time supporter of the arts. She was a member of the Highlands Presbyterian Church and the Highlands Women’s Club. Willard was known for her love of nature, and she enjoyed hiking, gardening, and cooking. Her去世后，她捐赠了时间和服务给Erie Concert Series（在那里她听到了帕瓦罗蒂），Erie芭蕾舞团，以及Waynesboro音乐会协会（在那里她喜欢看Elizabeth von Trapp），和Shenandoah Valley Art Center。她非常享受在Waynesboro音乐会协会演奏钢琴，直到中风使她无法继续。她喜欢打桥牌和网球。Annette擅长刺绣，并且在晚年，她为Shenandoah的“Comfort Bears”编织毛衣。

If you have not seen the old space movie “2001 Space Odyssey” head over to Movie Stop and rent it immediately as this is exactly where we are all heading.

In the movie, space travelers have the ability to chat with their friendly computer, Hal, who is running the entire spacecraft but responds to voice commands from humans. Eventually, Hal flips out, takes over the ship, making his own decisions, resulting in everyone’s demise.

If you are old enough, you will remember the first telephone answering machine, a crude gizmo which operated with cassette apes but got the job done. Here is how she works. When you call my house, my machine does not permit me to answer, even if I am home. She is real fussy about that and you will only make the mistake of answering once because an electric shock is released into your ear, magnetizing every filling in your head, making it difficult to get utensils and other metal objects out of your mouth. People with metal plates in their heads should not buy this system.

Anyway, callers will first hear a welcome statement by a James Cagney impersonator who says, “You dirty rat, you call my house when I am busy. I’ll get you for this.” If this does not get the caller to hang up, Gertrude continues. “If you are selling something, press ‘one’ now as I am definitely interested.” Gertrude then puts the caller into a lock mode. Any attempt by the salesman to hang up will, of course, result in an electric shock to his outer ear, magnetizing his fillings. I know of salesmen who have been on hold for days.

If the caller is not a salesman, my answer machine will say, “If you are calling from a touch tone phone, press ‘two’ now. If not, press ‘three’.” Then Gertrude says, “For voice identification, say the following words. “Fred is the nicest guy in Highlands.” My computer then searches through a myriad of voice identifications.

Voices of creditors, subscribers calling to complain about my column, distant relatives who want to visit and persons who talk longer than two minutes are put in lock mode and are eventually zapped.

For persons who don’t fit into any of those categories, my machine says, “Please select from one of the following four options. If you want to borrow money, press one now.” POW, lock mode, zap. Gertrude continues. “If you have some real nasty gossip to spread, press two now.” This will cause Gertrude to go into “ah ha” mode, saying that and “tell me more” every 30 seconds. When the caller tries to hang up, zap to ear. Gertrude continues, “If you have free NFL tickets, press ‘three’ now and hold while I find out where your good buddy is. He always speaks highly of you.” And finally, the machine announces, “For all other calls, press ‘four’ now. This will send the caller back to the James Cagney impersonator welcome message and the process is repeated.

My system is working well as I currently have 22 calls on perpetual hold and have not received one worthwhile...
Legislative Update ... in their words

In this weekly series, legislators will inform constituents of their dealings in Washington, Raleigh and Macon County - in their own words.

Protect America's School Act

By Rep. Mark Meadows
NC 11th Congressional District
meadows.house.gov/media-center

The December school massacre in Newtown, Conn., sent shock waves across the country. Americans watched in horror as news outlets across the nation reported the loss of 26 innocent people, including 20 beautiful children. Mothers and fathers held their children a little bit tighter that night, and as a country we grieved together.

In the wake of the shooting at Sandy Hook Elementary School and many just like it, it is time for Congress to take action. As a legislator, I was elected to make the tough decisions and produce solutions to the problems facing our country.

According to a recent Gallup Poll, 53 percent of Americans believe that increasing police presence at schools would be very effective in preventing tragedies. I agree with this stance, which is why I have introduced H.R. 751, the Protect America's Schools Act.

This measure would revitalize the Cops in Schools grant program, which has not been funded since fiscal 2005, and fund it at $30 million annually. The CIPS program is specifically designed to assist local law enforcement agencies in the hiring of officers with the primary goal of policing and providing education to our schools.

While I believe it is absolutely critical to provide funding for this program, Congress cannot ignore our nation's $16.7 trillion debt. Under the Protect America's Schools Act, the $30 million to pay for this critical grant program would be offset by taking unspent funds from the operations budget of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. Last year, the House voted to fund NOAA at $4.9 billion, and I believe this agency can spare $30 million to assist in the protection of our nation's children.

The Protect America's Schools Act is a bipartisan, solutions-oriented approach to addressing school shootings that should transcend party lines. More than 14 years ago, President Bill Clinton announced the then $60 million grant program, which was included in the Department of Justice's Office of Community Oriented Policing Services. After the 1999 Columbine High School shooting, Clinton's support for the program only grew, as did the support of many Democratic lawmakers.

Former Speaker of the House Nancy Pelosi's district was one of the first to receive funding from the program. And in 2004, Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-N.Y.) praised the program, saying, "Getting more police officers on school grounds will go a long way toward making sure our kids stay out of harm's way." Even anti-gun activist Rep. Carolyn McCarthy (D-N.Y.) stated in 2007 that it was "probably one of the best programs I have seen in my underserved schools."

I encourage lawmakers from both sides of the aisle to endorse this common-sense legislation. The Protect America's Schools Act is not the only answer, but it is a positive step forward in preventing tragedies. Keeping our children safe is not only an area where both political parties can find common ground, but as lawmakers, it is our moral obligation.

Rep. Mark Meadows is a Republican from North Carolina.

Note:

This bill was assigned to a congressional committee on February 15, 2013, which will consider it before possibly sending it on to the House or Senate as a whole.

Prognosis: 23% chance of getting past committee; 4% chance of being enacted.

(Only 11% of House bills made it past committee and only 3% were enacted in 2011-2013.)
One of the reasons I love this poem by David Whyte is that it captures the energy of possibility and potentiality that is available to each of us in each moment. Regardless of where we are in our lives or what we may have experienced in our personal and professional past and/or present, we always have the option to begin again.

We may press the reset button and enjoy a renewal – a rebirth – and walk a new path with a fresh perspective, greater wisdom, and a more keen awareness and mindfulness.

This opportunity for renewal is beautifully exemplified by the advent of spring in our mountains. As winter loosens its grip, the dull grays and browns give way to deep greens and a host of color as spring flowers and blooming shrubs dot the landscape. We increase our time outdoors and relish the lengthening daylight and warmer temperatures. In hardly any time at all, winter is a faint memory and the celebration of spring is in full flourish.

And just as we are joyfully stepping into the season of spring, the Highlands-Cashiers real estate market is similarly enjoying a robust rebirth.

We have reported on the increase in activity and sales in previous months. This increase has continued with quite an active first quarter in 2013. Interestingly, the renewal in the market has a distinctly different and additional component that marks a fundamental shift in investor perspective. And as the adage goes, perspective keenly shapes reality.

In month’s past, investors shopped at a rather leisurely pace, feeling an expansive timeframe for decision making. While there was good activity, buyers did not feel pressure to make swift plans to visit the area to view properties firsthand and submit offers. Many buying cycles were at a minimum six months to 18 months or longer. In a nutshell, the market was lacking a compelling sense of urgency.

The tide has changed. Beginning in January, we started hearing investors remark that “now was the time to buy.” Prompted by a soaring stock market, reports in the media of rising prices, and their own loss of patience with putting their lives on hold, buyers jumped back into the fray with an almost feverish pace.

Last week, I knew we had entered yet another phase of the rebirth of the Highlands-Cashiers market when an investor told me he feared he would “miss his window” if he did not have a property under contract within the month. He stated that low interest rates, superb selection of inventory, and the increase in showings and contracts in our market indicated to him that there was no time like the present to invest. Enter sense of urgency, stage left.

If you have been on the sidelines and casually considering a purchase, you may want to delve in right now and learn more about the renaissance of our real estate market. You could enjoy springtime in the mountains, as well as a rejuvenation of your own life – remember, the option to choose to begin again is always yours.

Ladies and Gentlemen, (all five of you) welcome to 2013 and my annual edition of the worst bracket advice column in the history of mankind. I’ve come to the conclusion that I am not good at prognosticating basketball during the NCAA tournament, so my actual advice to you would be do pretty much the opposite of what I advise to do in this column. As always, continue reading at your own risk.

Four Upset Specials in the first round
1. Bucknell over Butler - Cinderella has struggled at times this year, and Bucknell features NBA first round draft pick Mike Muscala.
2. Belmont over Arizona - The Wildcats started strong but have faded fast at the end of this season. The Bruins are deep and have the best player on the floor in Shabazz Muhammad.
3. Davidson over Marquette - Davidson has the inside horses to hang with Marquette and they are extremely well coached.
4. Ohio State - Why them and not Georgetown? Deshaun Thomas and Otto Porter are a wash.

Four teams I don’t trust
1. Iowa - The Hawkeyes are 3-3 in their last 6 games and are vulnerable to a grinding pace. They should be glad that Wisconsin is on the other side of the bracket.
2. Kansas - Looked strong until they lost to Butler and got beat down by a Baylor team that isn’t even in the tournament. PG Elijah Johnson is very inconsistent.
3. Duke - Lehigh….enough said
4. Georgetown - someone is going to get hot on them during the tournament….can they score enough points to overcome it?

Four teams I do trust
1. Miami - Impressed me by almost beating Duke in Cameron despite Ryan Kelly going HAM. Impressed me further by taking UNC’s best punch in a Greensboro Coliseum full of UNC fans and still winning by 10.
2. Louisville - Just humming right along now that they are at full strength. The best combination of offense and defense in the nation.
3. Saint Louis - Deep, experienced and proven….I think they are going to make a good run.
4. Ohio State - Why them and not Georgetown? Dessaun Thomas and Otto Porter are a wash, but the Buckeyes have Aaron Craft.

The Lady Highlanders Soccer team picked up their first victory of the season last week with a 9-2 victory over the Tallulah Falls Lady Indians. Highlands controlled the game throughout and was able to put a good offensive show on for the home crowd. Junior Rebekah Parks and sophomore midfielder Kirstyn Lamb both posted hat tricks in the victory, and Hayden Bates, Mary Gillan Renfro and Jessica Tilson all added a goal apiece. Lamb also had 3 assists for the game in addition to her three goals.

The Lady Highlanders also defeated the 3A Pisgah Lady Bears by a score of 3-0. Bates scored two goals for the Lady Highlanders and Renfro added another. Highlands Coach Jeff Weller was not surprised by the result, although he expected that some people might be.

“Our girls are making great strides and we are surprising some teams with our athletic ability,” said Weller. “We are working hard on the technical side of things to try and improve there, and as we improve in that area we are going to end up really surprising some teams as the season moves along.”

The Lady Highlanders will travel to Rabun Gap today to face the Lady Indians. The next home match for Highlands will be when they host the Lady Panthers from Franklin on April 4th at 6 PM. Please come out and support Highlands athletics!

She was also the organist at the First Baptist Church in Tupelo, played the piano for the Businessmen’s Bible Class for 20 years and was also the pianist for the local Lions Club. She loved clothes and established “Willard’s Store” in Tupelo which she operated for 12 years until marrying Lawrence H. Allen, an executive in the utility industry.

The couple lived in Evanston, Illinois where Mr. Allen was in business. While in Illinois, Mrs. Allen learned to play golf, a game she enjoyed for many years to come. After a few years in Evanston, the couple returned to Tupelo where Mrs. Allen was a member of the Calvary Baptist Church and played the piano for several Sunday School classes. She swam regularly and was a six-time ladies golf champion at the Tupelo Country Club where she also received seven hole-in-one plaques. Following the death of her husband, Mrs. Allen moved to Chestnut Hill of Highlands in 1999 to be closer to her brother, Ralph Hicks and his wife Barbaranne of Cashiers.

At Chestnut Hill, Mrs. Allen never lost interest in fashion and always amazed her friends with her good looking outfits. by county commissioners for more money, without being directly accountable to taxpayers if property taxes increase.

The interim Superintendent recently released a list of “possible reductions” to cut the $1.95 million. There were items included which I believe were intended to upset various constituencies in an effort to pressure county commissioners to increase the property tax by 2 mils, or dig into the county’s bloated fund balance, to fund the $1.95 million. It’s always “first responders and garbage collectors” to be fired first, or “it’s for the children,” to attempt to influence public opinion. Don’t fall for this publicity stunt.

Here are some of the most recent data from the NC Department of Public Instruction’s website from March 1, 2013.

In 2011-2012 the MCSB spent a total of $40.6 million, or $9,436 per pupil. In 2003-2004 the total was $29.1 million, or $7,147 per pupil. That’s a 32% increase in per pupil spending while the Consumer Price Index increased by 22.2%. During the same period the county’s spending per pupil increased 53%, not including financing for schools.

In comparison, the county’s 2012-2013 General Fund budget, less $7.56 million provided directly to county schools, and not including school financing, or $500,000 for school “technology,” totaled $36.8 million. County schools cost $3.8 million more to run than county government with all the services it provides taxpayers.

It’s time for the MCSB, the interim Superintendent, and some commissioners to stop blaming the NC Legislature for school funding problems. The Legislature did what it had to do to balance its budget. The MCSB took Federal “stimulus” money, which was as much as $4 million per year, or $1,000 per pupil, each year over the last three years, knowing it was only temporary.

Remember the school funding “cliff” we have been hearing about for several years that was going to happen when “stimulus” money was gone? With “stimulus” money gone, and the former superintendent gone escaping any blame, the county school system is now at the bottom of the “cliff.”

Many county taxpayers have reached their limit on their generous support for county schools - hefty annual appropriations, new schools, $1.5 million for “technology,” annual teacher bonuses, funding 53 teacher positions (not the county’s responsibility).

It’s time the MCSB made some really tough decisions to get its finances under control just like taxpayers have done over the last five years. It must live within its means without expecting to get the county to bail them out with more taxpayer money.

Most year’s resolutions to improve our lives in some manner. These resolutions sometimes involve acting nicer, working harder, starting a new hobby, or some other desirable activity. Often they revolve around health concerns. Unfortunately, New Year’s resolutions usually fall by the wayside, generally before January turns to February. Numerous reasons share in the responsibility; it is hard to change a routine, the new resolution is difficult to accomplish, we just don’t like to deny ourselves something we have liked for many years. Most often we set our goals too high and fail to stick with them for lack of anything approaching success. With this in mind I discuss five achievable health changes, not for the New Year, but for a new life.

Exercise
Yes, no one likes this one. It’s hard. It makes us sore. I don’t have the time. But we get more bang for our buck with this than any other change we make in our lives. Research fifteen years ago divided people into five categories: sedentary (walking to the kitchen for another donut), light exercise (walking 30 minutes three times a week), moderate exercise (jogging bicycling swimming four times a week), frequent exercise (any exercise 50-minutes a day five times a week), and people who train for the equivalent of marathons. While people gained benefits going from any level to the next higher level, the greatest benefits were seen in the people who moved from sedentary to light exercise. Any exercise helps. There are two things to remember about exercise: 1) Avoid doing the same thing every day. The more days in a row you do the same exercise the higher your risk of an overuse injury such as tendinitis. Take a day off between days of exercise or, better yet, do one exercise today and a different one tomorrow. Don’t forget resistance exercise (weights or bands) either. Resistance exercise builds muscle which uses more calories even while resting. Researchers performed an experiment on wheelchair bound residents of a nursing home. None of the residents could get themselves out of a chair. One hundred residents worked with elastic bands or light weights for six months. At the end of this time seventy five did not require the wheelchair anymore, fifteen could get out of the chair and walk twenty feet without assistance, seven could get out of the chair and into a car so they could go out with family without assistance. Only seven or eight were still wheelchair bound at the end of the study. One of the biggest predictors of health as we get older is how much we exercise. Even people very overweight who exercise do better than people who weigh less but do not exercise. Start slow. Increase exercise slowly. If you hurt the next day, you are doing too much.

Smoking
This could easily be first. Smoking takes more healthy years of our lives than anything else. We do not feel the effects when we are young but they are occurring. We start to lose lung reserve but don’t notice it until we lose 40%-50%. Our arteries start to narrow but we don’t notice it until they are around 70% blocked. Our skin starts to lose elasticity so we get early wrinkles. But this doesn’t become noticeable until we are in our 40s. Lung cancer, kidney cancer, colon cancer and other diseases do not show up until we are well along in the process of smoking. Quitting smoking is one of the most difficult things to do, but also one of the most beneficial to both the individual and their family. While there are many non-smoking aids for those who do not want to quit “cold turkey” there is one constant for people who successfully quit tobacco. They pick a quit date. It may be several months in the future to allow time to make preparations but they pick a date. I have never seen anyone successfully just taper down and quit. Something always comes up.

Eating Healthy, not dieting
Boy, the holidays really encourage us to pack it on. And as Americans we like lots of holidays. We are not able until we are in our 40s. Lung cancer, kidney cancer, colon cancer and other diseases do not show up until we are well along in the process of smoking. Quitting smoking is one of the most difficult things to do, but also one of the most beneficial to both the individual and their family. While there are many non-smoking aids for those who do not want to quit “cold turkey” there is one constant for people who successfully quit tobacco. They pick a quit date. It may be several months in the future to allow time to make preparations but they pick a date. I have never seen anyone successfully just taper down and quit. Something always comes up.

Tips to a Healthier Life
lose weight. Here's why you say? Not really. Most studies identifying obesity as a huge risk to health do not control for how much an individual exercises or do they eat a lot of healthy food or do they eat a lot of unhealthy food. Diets fail because we get tired of them. I am a Southerner. I like my chicken fried steak. If I go to long without one, I will break my diet and have chicken fried steak with white cream gravy four times in one week. How much better would I be to exercise regularly, eat a healthy diet, and just allow for the occasional indulgence. The goal is not to be a certain weight; it is to be healthy and happy. A few pounds here and there are better than countless cycles of depravation followed by massive over indulgence. I even tell my diabetic patients that although I would like them to lose some weight to make it easier to control their Diabetes Mellitus, I would rather have them eating a healthy diet rather than lose weight with an unhealthy diet and balloon back up in the next year. Fruits, vegetables, whole grains, lean meats in the appropriate amounts; it's not hard to pick the foods, just to change from the diet we have been eating for 20 years.

Social interactions

A much overlooked area of health is our social interactions. This is particularly important as we get older. Humans are social creatures. Studies show that the greatest single predictor of happiness in retirement is not money, health, or living in a beautiful area. It is interactions with people both older and younger than the retiree. People who have a reason to get up, something to look forward to, people to mentor and to learn from are happier than those who do not regardless of income. The take home lesson is to start expanding your social circle and developing friends of all ages before you retire.

Medical interactions

Yes, this is what I do for a living and they are important, but not as important as the above measures. The more of the above someone does, the less likely I will find something when someone comes to see me. This area becomes more controversial all the time.

Every expert agrees keeping your blood pressure in a desirable range is very important, no matter what other conditions you might have. High cholesterol should be controlled but here is not agreement on what medications offer the best results.

Colonoscopy after age 50 and at appropriate intervals thereafter has most expert's stamp of approval. Other interventions are fluid right now. There is not universal agreement on how often women should have mammograms or pap smears. Prostate screening for men is controversial. The appropriate intervals depend a lot on lifestyle and medical history and should be discussed with your doctor.

Immunizations are less controversial, at least among doctors. Get a flu shot. Even if you are healthy get one because if you get influenza you may give it to someone who is not healthy. If you have chronic medical problems get a pneumococcal pneumonia shot after age 50 and again after age 65. DTap which protects against Diphtheria, Tetanus, and Pertussis (whooping cough) is now given to adults and should be boosted every 10 years.

Other immunizations, such as the shingles immunization, may be more important to people over seventy than people under forty.

Good health is not complicated just difficult to persuade ourselves to strive for. You would not put 80 octane gas in a car, never change the oil or other fluid, or leave the car in the garage for twenty years and expect it to run well. Good food, activity, and a little tender loving care can keep us at our peak as well.
Hospital's HealthTracks celebrates a cardiac rehabilitation success story

According to the CDC (Centers for Disease Control) about 600,000 people died of heart disease in the United States every year—that's 1 in every 4 deaths. Heart disease is the leading cause of death for both men and women and more than half of the deaths due to heart disease in 2009 were in men. Highlands resident, Kenton W. David, was almost one of those statistics. In October 2012, Kenton had double bypass surgery and is living proof that lifestyle changes and cardiac rehabilitation can save your life.

Kenton’s is not the typical heart attack survivor, rather atypical in his experience with signs and symptoms of heart disease. Three weeks before his surgery, he began having episodes of faintness and difficulty breathing. These episodes became more frequent, he experienced rapid heart rate and numbness in his left arm. With concern from his family doctor, Dr. Scott Baker, Kenton visited the Emergency Room at Highlands-Cashiers Hospital and after an EKG he was quickly transferred to the VA Hospital in Asheville. Unlike the majority of cardiac issues, Kenton experienced zero chest pain.

Kenton had a 90% blockage in two arteries spending over 7 hours in surgery and 8 days recovering before being released. Soon after his return home and with the prescription of his cardiologist, he began Cardiac Rehabilitation at HCH’s HealthTracks. He explained that motivation was the secret for him returning to good health. “Being an usher at Community Bible Church for over 18 years, I was determined to regain my activity. I knew it wouldn’t be easy but with the help of all the highly trained staff at HealthTracks, I was able to reach my goal.”

“Kenton has remarkable progress in the Cardiac Rehabilitation Program,” said Yvonne Smith, MHS, RD, CDE and HealthTracks Director. “He is dedicated to his program, sticking to every requirement of heart healthy nutrition and exercise. It gives me great pride knowing we could provide the tools Kenton needed to recover as much quality of life as possible and reduce his risk of a reoccurring illness.”

Smith said that since the hospital began its own cardiac rehabilitation program in 1994, it has helped hundreds of patients recover from heart attacks and cardiac surgery, and aided others in managing chronic cardiovascular disease.

The program provides continuous cardiac monitoring of patients during exercise sessions, which include a combination of cardiovascular and strength training. The program also provides education in heart healthy nutrition, stress management, evaluation by a mental health specialist, and education in all areas of the function of the heart. In addition to improving cardiovascular health and strength, the program prepares its patients to carry on lifestyle changes and practices learned in the 12-week session program.

The Cardiac Rehab Program is directed by Smith, a Registered Dietician, and her staff of cardiac nurses and exercise specialists. The team works in close conjunction with board certified physicians, counselors, physical therapists and other medical professionals to make sure all programs are safe, as well as effective. Their goal is to provide the community with the tools needed to maintain a healthy and active lifestyle.

The county funds the school district's current and capital outlay expenses. Since the original current expense list was a whopping $2 million, that's where Duncan and Finance Director Angie Cook started cutting. This time, after nixing the Feb. 25 potential cut list, they cut only items that didn't directly affect teacher/student contact.

"By making these cuts we would reduce our request from the county for the 2013-’14 school year substantially – to $85,000 to $86,000," he said. "We put all the teacher/student contact items back in – like MEC, Union Academy and middle school athletic programs," said Duncan. He said the reasons they originally put MEC and Union Academy on the cut list is because in addition to the funding each institution receives from the state, the school system (county) funded each $100,000.

During the regular school board meeting after the workshop, students and the principal of MEC, Todd Gibbs, thanked the board for removing them from the cut list. "They are no longer on the cut list, but since they get a state grant [MEC got $306,000 for the 2012-’13 school year] my hope is they can both live within the framework of that grant so we won't have to supplement them in terms of the current expense budget," he said.

Union Academy, Macon County Schools alternative school, receives direct state dollars from the state's At Risk Fund. Union Academy is officially off the cut list, but Attorney John Henning, stressed that legally the system has to keep Union Academy. "There are many compelling reasons you have to keep Union Academy. By law you have to have alternatives for students," he said.

So then the cuts to programs that don't have direct teacher/student contact equals $917,159, making the current expense budget $1,116,359, for now. The original current expense amount requested of the county for 13-14 was $2,333,518.

First on the cut list are 11 interim teacher positions that can be absorbed totaling $470,000. But Duncan said Macon County Schools could cut more, if needed. This spring semester interim teachers who don't get benefits were hired to replace teachers who had retired or resigned.

The 11 teachers include four positions at Franklin High School, two at Macon Middle School, two at Mountainview Elementary School and three at various elementary schools in the district. "Under this scenario we wouldn't be losing someone who had been in a position for a long time," said Duncan.

But Duncan warned that the cuts he was proposing still may not be enough to satisfy the county.

He said Macon County school system is substantially overstaffed compared to 12 surrounding school districts.

"When you look at the number of teachers we have to the number of students we have it's pretty out of whack. Franklin High School is where we need to reduce staff due to the low number of students in certain classes," he said.

There are some classes with three and four students which means in some cases a teacher has 12 students all day long, he said.

"We need to look at better utilization of the money we are paying for those positions because I don't think a business that doesn't have work just keeps letting people stay. We have to look at that," he said.

He also said that district wide, if there are elementary situations that are out of whack the board will have to consider moving that teacher to a middle school position if they are or can get certified.

"If you don't make some movement of reducing staff, you won't be able to be funded at the level you are used to being funded at," he warned.

Duncan said all of the schools in North Carolina, at the high school level Macon County Schools has more staff than 95% of other districts that are Macon County's size.

Comparing Franklin High School – which has over 900 students to both Smoky Mountain and Pisgah HS – they have 66 high school teachers and Franklin High School has 73.

However when it comes to auxiliary personnel – social workers, guidance counselors, assistant principals, etc. – both those schools have more than Franklin High School. Each have three assistant principals and three guidance counselors to Franklin High Schools two assistant principals and two guidance counselors.

"To be a decent steward of taxpayers money, you can't talk every year about cutting and never cut. We are in the position where we've got to try to get a handle on this," said Duncan. "We have a situation where some teachers have three or four kids all day long."

He said Macon County isn't overstaffed administratively, just teacher-wise.

Macon County Schools also faces funding problems other districts its size don't face.

"You have two outlying schools that are flat out costing you more money. It costs 100% more for a student to get an education in Nantahala and 75% more to get an education here in Highlands. You are going to spend more money," he said.

Other cuts include local instruction materials at $78,000 because the state is giving more money than ever before for materials so that doesn't need to be a local expense; decreasing 12-month personnel contracts to 11-month contracts, nixing administrative supplements which don't affect teacher, principal, or assistant principal supplements; and paying athletic officials out of each school's athletic fund instead of the district's current expense fund.

"The school board has been extremely generous to schools' athletics," said Duncan. "This year is a time to move out of that. Maybe we'll wear the same uniforms. Maybe we'll buy two new balls instead of six."

Other cuts include The New Century board for removing them from the cut list. "They are no longer on the cut list, but since they get a state grant [MEC got $306,000 for the 2012-’13 school year] my hope is they can both live within the framework of that grant so we won't have to supplement them in terms of the current expense budget," he said.

Embrace the household of God

Dr. Mark Ford
First Baptist Church of Highlands

The word ecumenical refers to ecumenism and its Greek derivative, a word which relates to an embracing of the whole “household” of God. It is simply a word that churches use to describe their relationship with each other as they pursue mutual cooperation, recognition of each other’s ministries, and affirmation of our common faith in Christ.

The modern ecumenical movement began in 1910 marked by a concern for mutual understanding and respect through dialogue and our common witness to the Gospel. This is in keeping with the unity our Lord prayed for in John 17:21. In some circles—which is concentrically getting smaller—this is called ecumenics, or the study and practice of ecumenism.

In John 17:21, Christ prayed for this unity of faith and purpose for a significant reason—“that the world may believe that You sent Me.” It is evident that if Christ wanted this unity, then we as His followers, regardless of tradition or practice, should pursue cooperation with due diligence. The world needs this witness of cooperation to encourage its own potential faith in Christ. In light of this, the arguments brought to bear against this position often strike one as artificial, strained, and downright sectarian at times. Christian unity is above all a matter of reconciliation—the world’s reconciliation with God and our reconciliation with one another. Other disagreements beyond our common faith as put forth in Philippians 2:1-11 are penultimate at best.

Dietrich Bonhoeffer, the World War II martyr of the German church, was an early advocate of ecumenical pursuits. In his theology of the church and society, Bonhoeffer taught that Christ calls us to see others through His eyes. This would lead to some very practical effects which includes refraining from judging people, resisting our desire to impose our will and ideals on others, praying for one another, forgiving our enemies, regarding ourselves and others as sinners forgiven by the grace of God, and helping one another with deeds of love and mercy. From his earliest writing, Bonhoeffer would define the church as “Christ existing as community” (Sanctorum Communio), and by its very nature transcends all human divisions and challenges all human propensities to Scholars contact will be reduced but the fewer hours won’t affect the number of students or the program; requesting that principals use district cars to run errands and make district deliveries rather than paying an allotment; nixing paying for teachers to renew their National Board Certification.

“If they want their National Board renewal they can spend $1,100 to get the $4,000, $5,000, $6,000 in salary increase,” said Duncan.

So now the Current Expense increase request from the county is $1,116,359 instead of the original $2,333,518 figure.

Duncan said so far no one from the county level has balked at the requested capital outlay budget, which is separate for the current expense budget. After a donation to Franklin High School, the capital outlay budget for ‘13-’14 is down to $334,000 from $347,000.

“I assume that is still in the budget. There hasn’t been much discussion since it was proposed but that amount doesn’t address the safety issues to the tune of $363,000 which have been added since. I don’t think anyone is going to give the school system money for security upgrades we need in every single school,” said Duncan. “But if we don’t get what we need in the current expense budget we may need to accept less in capital outlay.”

The security upgrade figure doesn’t include six Student Resource Officers requested by Sheriff Robert Holland and which are estimated to cost $507,000 with a recurring cost of $316,950.

Duncan said he is trying to get closer to a budget he can present to the county commission by April 15, which is when it has been requested. He presented the new cut list to County Manager Jack Horton and Finance Director Lori Hall Tuesday and will report their reaction back to the school board.

In other School Board news, after the second reading of the Social Networking Policy Attorney Henning said teachers could “friend” students as long as the relationship is conducted in a professional manner as in “real life.”

Following a Closed Session, Barry Woody was named principal of Franklin High School, effective July 1, 2013 pending contract negotiations.

SCC students establish school journalism club

Student newsletter in the works

On February 19, students and faculty at Southwestern Community College officially established the school’s first-ever Journalism Club.

The club seeks to practice journalism, raise awareness of its importance as the service of a free society and encourage excellence in its practice. The club will monitor and support all forms of the journalistic media and track its ongoing evolution, particularly how it relates to SCC and the communities it serves. It is the goal of the club to inform the SCC community of the issues, events and changes it faces, as well as give its voice to be heard.

“Ultimately, the club hopes to establish the school’s first-ever student newsletter—for students, by students, be it online or printed,” said club president Davin Eldridge, an SCC college transfer student and local newspaper reporter. “The club already consists of some outstanding students and faculty with a firm grasp on the concepts of journalism, and an eagerness to employ them.”

According to Eldridge, months of hard work and planning have gone into the club’s establishment and pursuits. “We are proud to announce our official recognition by the school and our involvement in our communities,” said Eldridge upon the club’s official recognition.

The club currently has 11 active members, some of whom already work in local media.

“I am very excited about the new journalism club here at Southwestern Community College,” said club faculty advisor Chris Cox, an English instructor at SCC for 22 years. Cox is also a contributing columnist for Smoky Mountain News.

“It is thrilling to see a group of students taking such an active interest in the creation of a publication for our college community,” Cox continued. “I have long believed that the free and open exchange of ideas, opinions, and information is crucial to the health and well-being of any society, large or small. I believe this group of students is ready to proceed in that spirit, and I am excited to be involved in that in my role as faculty sponsor.”

In the coming months the club will be active in the community in pursuit of stories befitting a collegiate readership, promoting the rich atmosphere of hyper-local journalism, as well as initiating fundraisers to help fund its efforts.

“I would like to thank Southwestern Community College for its support of our club’s mission, as well as club members Amanda King, Keith Giles, Kellie Wilcox, Michael Sanders, Jessica Waldron, Jana Thompson, Amberly Rogers, Ellina Smith, Shaneka Allen, Matt Nelson, Christopher Cox and Brandi Hutchinson for their hard work and enthusiasm in helping establish this club,” concluded Eldridge.

Those interested in joining or supporting the school’s club may contact club president Davin Eldridge via email at DavinLEldridge@gmail.com.

If you would like more information about this topic, or to schedule an interview with club members, please contact Davin Eldridge at 828.342.6873, or email him at DavinLEldridge@gmail.com.

Town Scholarship Golf Tournament

Thursday, June 13, 2013 marks a special date in Highlands-Wildcat Cliffs Country Club will host the annual Scholarship Golf Classic.

The Town of Highlands Scholarship fund began in 1975 through the generosity of a local businessman named Jack Taylor. His gift of $5,000 was the initial funding for this scholarship program enabled by special legislation in the NC General Assembly making Highlands unique in the state with the ability to administer such a fund for the benefit of Highlands School graduates who are committed to higher education through college, university or vocational training.

In succeeding years Jack Brockway along with other prominent concerned citizens became increasingly involved in the development and promotion of the Town of Highlands Scholarship Endowment Fund which at the time exceeds $780,000.

Through the ensuing years, various Clubs including Highlands Falls, Cullasaja, and now Wildcat Cliffs, have graciously provided each of their unique golf course and clubhouse facilities for the purpose of creating an annual “fund drive” golf tournament.” The historical generosity has been essential in building and sustaining the endowment fund with the ultimate goal of providing financial and moral support to our young highland school graduates.

The event kicks off at 7:30am with breakfast and use of the driving range and practice green. A 9am shotgun start is followed by cocktails, lunch and awards ceremony. The cost for the event is $150 per player. For sponsorship information or to sign up, please contact event co-chairs, Brian Steihler (787-2778) or Rebecca Shuler (526-2118).

The Rotary Club Golf Tournament

Mark your calendar for Monday, May 6th 2013. This is the date set for the Rotary Club of Highland’s Annual Golf Tournament. As in the past, the event will take place at Highlands’s most prestigious country club, the Highlands Country Club.

Registration, the driving range and the practice green will open at 11 am with a 12 noon shotgun start. Each participant will receive lunch at the turn and beverages on the course, as well as an HCC logo Tervis Tumbler. Players will also have a chance to win terrific prizes. There will be closest to the pin and long drive competitions, raffles, and Mulligans on sale for only $5.

This is a wonderful opportunity to play Highlands Country Club’s Donald Ross designed course, once home to amateur golfer, the great Bobby Jones.

Entry fee is $150 per player and ALL proceeds benefit the Rotary Club of Highlands.

Sign up alone or as part of a foursome, and get ready to enjoy an afternoon of great golf on a beautiful and historic course. To sign up or receive more information contact Joyce Baillargeon at 828-526-0501 or jbaillargeon@highlandscountyclub.com

... SPIRITUALLY from 16 conflict and divisiveness.

In these troubled and uncertain days that we live in, we as followers of Christ can find strength in our mutual faith and common causes for love, justice, peace, and mercy under the auspices of our one Lord.

A world in search of grace and love, forgiveness and hope, will hear it best when our churches promote a harmonious symphony of our mutual faith in Christ and the reconciliation of His Gospel.

Without efforts in this direction, the followers of Christ will continue to send forth discordant sounds that only irritate and repulse. Let the world around us hear the beautiful notes we agree on, and far less the divergent notes of our particular take on the Song of Redemption.
You know us as RUNNERS, but don’t forget we are also NC REAL ESTATE BROKERS. You can count on us every step of the way to get you to the finish line. We train hard for races, and we will work equally hard for you!

to North Carolina in June of 1787, when he crossed the Highlands plateau. He returned to North Carolina seven years later, for which he is honored by five State Historical Markers.

But it was his first trip to North Carolina in 1787 that helped him overcome his dread of the wilderness and forged his fearless nature, which made his later journeys possible. It was his discoveries of many rare and beautiful plants on this first trip that inspired his future visits to the state, including his finding of Shortia galacifolia, the plant that made him world famous because it was so rare botanists couldn’t find it again for 100 years.

The request for a Historical Marker honoring Michaux in Highlands was turned down by the NC Marker Advisory Committee in 2002 and again in 2009 because there were already five Michaux markers in the state. But the appeal this year by Ran Shaffner of the Highlands Historical Society to the NC Historical Commission was successful, because the previous markers celebrated later visits without recognizing Michaux’s all-important first visit to North Carolina.

The monument will be erected in Highlands, at a date yet to be determined, in Miss Reba Bridgers Park, a part of the Highlands-Cashiers Land Trust, at the corner of 4th Street and Foreman Road. At that time representatives from the NC Department of Archives and History, the International André Michaux Society, and southeastern universities associated with the Highlands Biological Station will attend the dedication. The public will be invited.

The other three historical markers in town are for botanist Thomas G. Harbison, which was erected in front of Town Hall in 2003, and one each for conquistador explorers Hernando de Soto and Juan Pardo.

The de Soto marker is at Main and Third streets in front Mountain High Lodge. The Juan Pardo marker is on 4th Street next to Highlands Inn.
