Town Board selects new Town Attorney

At a special called meeting Tuesday, Nov. 5, the Town Board unanimously hired Attorneys James Kent (J.K.) Coward, Jr. as Highlands Town Attorney.

Like his predecessor Attorney Bill Coward, who was Highlands Town Attorney for 15 years, JK Coward hails from the Coward, Hicks & Siler firm which has offices in Franklin, Cashiers and Sylva.

Bill Coward was recently appointed Superior Court Judge for the 30th District.

J.K. Coward, 58, was born in Chapel Hill, NC on October 19, 1955. He was admitted to the bar in 1984. He was admitted to the U.S. District Court for the Western District of North Carolina in 1986 and admitted to the bar by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1987.

Highlands battles for 3rd State game

During the last game of what is being called their best year yet, Highlands Boys Soccer team played Elkin in the 3rd round of state games. They tied 2-2 at end of game, then played two sections of 10-min. overtimes, still with no score, then did one 5-min. sudden death (where the first score wins) and they scored about 4 minutes in with the final score 3-2; Highlands’ loss. Help with Affordable Care Act comes to MC

A grassroots effort to help uninsured and underinsured Macon County citizens sign up for insurance through the Affordable Care Act was announced at Tuesday night’s Macon County Commission meeting.

Cynthia Solesbee, with Mountain Projects, is one of six full-time aides covering the western counties of North Carolina – Jackson, Swain, Macon, Graham, Haywood, Cherokee and Clay - where there are 30,000 citizens without health insurance.

Solesbee got involved with the project when the cold facts of today’s insurance market affected her personally.

“I bought my own insurance. Recently, I was notified that my premium was going to be increased to $500 per month beginning Jan. 1, 2014, with no explanation as to why,” she said. “I went to the Healthcare.gov marketplace and possibly older students.

At the October Macon County School Board meeting, the board was asked to consider two projects aimed at keeping schools and students safe.

The first project was presented by teacher intern Brooke Waldroop who is nearing completion of her education degree at Western Carolina University. A Leadership Project is one component of her Electronic Evidence Licensure requirement and so the idea of Kindergarten ID bracelets was born.

With the support of her lead teacher at East Franklin Elementary Synthia Owens and Angel Medical Center, which has offered to partner in the program, Waldroop suggested ID bracelets to be worn by Kindergarteners – and possibly older students.

Dear Editors,

At a local meeting on Saturday, Major Andy Shields from Macon County Sheriff Department spoke regarding the man hours spent on people with severe mental health issues.

Since early 2000, funding in all states for mental health facilities has diminished, and there has been a focus to take some severe patients from secure facilities and integrate them into society.

Independence Training ensued of some higher functioning patients, with an end goal of rehabilitation and part-time work. It sadly succeeded for a very few, and for several others had tragic consequences.

I worked in a Day Treatment facility where 30 clients would come daily from assisted living to a group function where their medications were monitored by a visiting psychiatrist. During the day the patients participated in socialization programs. Then they would return home where medications were closely monitored. Most functioned fairly well with this structure and attention.

As training for the exit of our program progressed, the stress became apparent in all the patients. Several from our facility were to “graduate” to independent living and begin working at MacDonald’s, thrift stores, and the like. Some of these unfortunate souls did not take the re-introduction into society pressure well and they over medicated themselves with fatal results.

To complicate matters, in very few months, the Day Treatment program was unfunded and closed due to government cutbacks in mental health.

According to Major Shields, funding in NC is currently much too low to deal with serious mental health issues including substance abuse. Substance abuse can lead directly to behavioral and mental health problems. Facilities in NC where mental health is treated have been forced to reduce the number of beds to seriously low levels.

This situation has resulted in a revolting door for our local Sheriff, these patients and their families. Because of funding cuts, when a citizen is deemed a threat to themselves or society, they are picked up and delivered to the emergency room with the Law Enforcement Officer spending long hours, otherwise unproductive, at the hospital, and sometimes a single officer contends with as many as seven waiting to be treated!

Once treated by the emergency services, the Sheriff Dept. is then responsible to transport these individuals to counties outside Macon County where mental health care is available.

With state facilities reducing bed accessibility year after year, patients are often released back to families and the cycle then repeats all over again.

The cost to taxpayers is great as many law enforcement hours are expended, usually without successful results for the patient. All the while, families struggle trying to deal with their loved one. With inadequate treatment and living arrangements, these individuals most often wind up on the street, possibly causing harm to themselves and hurting others. These are the forgotten people in our health system.

Our state must allow for more mental health treatment facilities and more funding. Call or write your legislators! As witnessed by the many tragedies this year where young men with psychiatric troubles have killed people indiscriminately, we must address this mental health issue now.

This problem will only become worse if we continue to turn a blind eye towards mental health issues and it’s diminished funding while blaming irrelevant factors.

Highlands Biological Station launches campaign for its library furnishings

The heart and soul of any academic institution is its library. More than great repositories of knowledge, the library of any college or university is also a gathering place for study, engagement, and socializing. This is true of the E.E. Reinke Library at the Highlands Biological Station (HBS), which has now, thanks to our renovation of the Coker Laboratory in which the library resides, been expanded to serve the community even better.

Did you know?
• The Reinke Library is named in honor Dr. E. E. Reinke, noted zoologist from Vanderbilt University who served as the first HBS director from 1929 to 1936.
• The beautiful pine bookcases of the Reinke Library were made in-house, with wood milled from an extremely large white pine that came down on the HBS campus in the late 1990s - the huge stump is located near the Moss Garden.
• The scientific journal collection of the Reinke Library is vast, covering virtually all professional journals relevant to regional organisms and ecological systems.
• HBS was a founding member/subscriber for most of these professional journals.
• HBS-based research is featured or credited in hundreds of scientific publications.
• The Reinke Library includes well over 100 Masters theses and Doctoral dissertations based on work conducted here at HBS.
• The Reinke Library is open to community members as well as HBS residents.

HBS has ample books, monographs, and journals, but lacks funding for the kind of high-quality, functional, and comfortable furnishings needed for the students.

Help us create a welcoming gathering space in the Reinke Library and Seminar Room by contributing funds for furnishings!

We have met $2,500 of our $15,000 goal thanks to the Garden Club of America. To contribute, please visit www.highlandsbiological.org/rally-for-reinke or contact the staff at (828) 526-2221 or the office at 265 North Sixth Street, Highlands, NC 28741. The Highlands Biological Foundation is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization whose mission is to foster research and education focused on the rich natural heritage of the Highlands Plateau.

Event raises $700 for scholarship fund

It was the brain-child of Town Clerk Rebecca Shuler and if attendance was any indication, Highlands first Home Town Day was a success.

With citizens yearning for more to do – particularly off season – as well asking for more activities situated in the park, the Home Town Day in Kelsey-Hutchinson Park on Pine Street fit the bill.

People of all ages turned out to listen to live music, be entertained by local cloggers, shop at the Farmers Market and craft vendors, take a tractor hay ride, play on two huge inflatables and feast on pinto beans and cornbread with all the fixings.

It lasted the better part of Saturday, Nov. 2 and everyone wants it to become a tradition on the backside of Highlands Halloween festivities which include a spooky nature walk at the Nature Center the night before Halloween and Highlands downtown trick-or-treating event.

The donation-only event raised $700 for Highlands Scholarship Fund which now sits at about $800,000. Interest from the principal is used to award Highlands School graduates scholarships to institutions of higher learning.

The 20 vendors contributed $200 and attendees donated $500.

“We thought that was very good for the first year and were really just trying to get an event started not really make any proceeds,” said Shuler.

Other events used to grow the principal are an annual golf tournament and fly fishing contest.

painting “The Return of the Prodigal Son” for over three hours, which displays an unconditional forgiveness of a father and son. If we place ourselves within this painting we understand “God’s forgiveness toward us.” (Luke 15:11-32)

This so profoundly impacted Nouwen that he came back and gave up his place at Yale, and dedicated the rest of his life to the L’Arche community in Canada to work with the mentally handicapped. Nouwen displayed his commitment and trust in the foundation of Christ that carried him through difficult times.

Words, time, sexuality, and life are all sacred – if not, life becomes a downward spiral. If these are truly sacred they must have a foundation embedded in a trust that can only be found outside of the human element. History shows we cannot do this on our own. If this is not true, where can we point or show to others anything which is otherwise? Keep Thinking patients are fitted with when they enter a hospital, the ID bracelets would include the child’s first and last name, the name of the homeroom teacher, the student’s ID number, bus route home and medical concerns, like allergies.

“The idea is to wear the bracelet for the first two weeks of school so teachers, cafeteria workers and bus drivers can quickly identify a student and address them by their first name,” said Waldroop. “Many of these students have never been away from home and hearing their first name puts them at ease.”

She said during the first few weeks of school when young students have to deal with buses, cafeteria lines, and PE there are lots of opportunities for confusion and mix ups. The bracelet would make day-to-day continuity easier.

The consensus was that the bracelet was better than a card on a string around the neck or a sticker, both of which could fall off or be removed easily.

Angel Medical Center has offered the bracelets to the school system for free and all information on the bracelet, as well as permission to participate, would come from parents.

There are some wrinkles to be ironed out; board members were wary of a bracelet being worn 24/7 for two weeks reasoning that the information on the bracelet would be accessible by people in stores and malls over the weekend.

So far only students in Owens’ kindergarten class participated in the project where at least one girl considered the bracelet an accessory.

Waldroop asked for permission to continue working on the project; to hone it so that it could be available to all kindergarten students next year.

Attorney John Henning, Jr., stressed the need for parental participation and permission.

BOE member Gary Shields said it was a good idea at least for the first couple of weeks of school, particularly for getting on buses.

Chairman Jim Breedlove said it sounded like a good idea but was worried about the information on the bracelet being available for all to read when off campus.

“This has a lot of merit but there are concerns. We will have Mr. Henning look into it,” he said.

NCDOT crews prep for winter weather in the mountains

With cold fronts moving down from the north, N.C. Department of Transportation crews from Division 14 – comprised of Cherokee, Clay, Graham, Haywood, Henderson, Macon, Polk, Swain and Transylvania counties – are busy preparing equipment and crews to keep roads clear in advance of the forecasted winter weather.

Dry runs have been completed, equipment has been calibrated and crews are in the process of putting spreaders and plows on trucks. Salt and sand supplies are stocked. Crews are on standby to work overnight to keep roads clear when inclement weather is predicted.

Even if a weather event doesn’t produce a significant amount of precipitation, there is still the potential of icy spots forming on roads overnight, particularly on bridges and overpasses. Motorists are asked to slow down and drive carefully during the winter season which is predicted to be wet and cold.

and used the Kaiser Family Fund calculator to get an idea of what I might pay through the Affordable Care Act. Estimates are based on income and family size, and what it came back with was $200. I thought, ‘That was much better,’ but then realized it was $200 a year not a month!”

Through a grant, Mountain Projects has hired six full-time and one half-time person to work the western counties to help people understand, navigate and sign up for insurance through the Affordable Care Act. Numerous volunteers are also being trained to help. Solesbee said the benefits of insurance through the Affordable Care Act are really great.

“There are no out-of-pocket expenses for preventive care visits, no penalty (money-wise) for pre-existing conditions, and there are premium tax credits which make the plans truly affordable,” she said.

Premium tax credits, which come off the top when doing income taxes, can be applied to incomes beginning at $11,500 for a single person.

“That’s the minimum you have to make in North Carolina to take advantage of the premium tax credit. Below that there is no help because North Carolina opted out of Medicaid expansion which means there will be people who will not get the premium tax credit to help pay for their insurance premium.”

The Medicaid expansion money goes to states to help people who make less than required to take advantage of the premium tax credit to still get healthcare.

“Now their only option will be to go to free community care clinics,” said Solesbee. “What North Carolina has done is hurt the working poor,” she said.

In addition, through the Affordable Care Act, young people under 30, who don’t typically go to the doctor unless there is a catastrophic event, can opt to just buy Catastrophic Coverage.

“This protects them from going bankrupt and ruining their credit ratings should something unexpected happen,” she said.

Anyone interested in signing up can call Solesbee at 828-400-4177 to make an appointment. She is available anytime, including after work hours and on the weekends. Currently, she is working out of an office at Macon Program for Progress behind K-Mart in Franklin at 350 Orchard View Drive and at the Senior Services Center in Franklin at 108 Wayah Street.

Bring social security numbers and names of everyone living in your household, W2s, paystubs or last year’s taxes. This information will be used to get a “good faith estimate” of 2014 income and help her determine what premiums would cost through the Affordable Care Act beginning Jan. 1, 2014.

Solesbee will be at the Hudson Library, Dec. 3 at 2 p.m. to explain the process.

Hymn-sing at First Presbyterian Church is this Sunday

Sunday, Nov. 17

• At the Episcopal Church of the Incarnation, flutist Christina Smith and pianist Robert Henry will present a recital at 2 p.m. offering music of Müthel, Milhaud, Liebermann, and Prokofiev. Christina Smith is principle flutist of the Atlanta Symphony. Donations accepted at the door.
In 2009 Bel Canto asked Frances Oakley, then Chair of the Board of the Highlands Community Child Development Center [HCCDC], to visit a music class at the preschool program of the Highlands United Methodist Church. The idea was to convince Frances to start a music program at HCCDC. Bel Canto offered to provide initial funding for the music classes.

Angie Jenkins was the music teacher at United Methodist and her teaching of songs to the children convinced Frances that HCCDC should have music classes. In addition, Frances wanted the children to be exposed to artists playing musical instruments, so that the instruction would be instrumental as well as vocal. Angie Jenkins was hired to teach the classes. Bel Canto provided the funding and has continued its funding through the generosity of Bel Canto donors.

Angie Jenkins has been teaching music to Highlands children for 30 years and through her work with the Gordon Center and its predecessor programs as well as HCCDC has taught and now teaches music to all the children enrolled in preschool programs in Highlands.

Angie says she loves to hear from parents and grandparents that their children sing the songs they have learned in her music classes. “I have collected approximately 200 songs through the years. Included are songs about the weather, the seasons, animals, numbers, the alphabet, proper manners, patriotic songs and nursery rhyme songs. I have recently composed songs to help the children learn the days of the week, the months of the year, to buckle their seatbelts, to brush their teeth, to wash their hands and to cover their mouths when they sneeze. The children love to sing.”

The music classes have followed Frances Oakley’s plan to expose the children to instrumentalists. Angie invites guest musicians each month to demonstrate their instruments to the children. She has had most all the instruments of the orchestra as well as bagpipes, guitars, mandolins, the pipe organ, brass quintets, string quartets and many others.

Bel Canto allocated HCCDC music program with a grant of $6,500 this year. Plans are to continue this support into the future.

Strain talks about bears at MtnTop Rotary

Cynthia Strain founder of Bear Education and Resources was the featured speaker at Mountain Top Rotary Club’s meeting this week. Cynthia informed club members of the several “dos and don’ts” which lead to a peaceful and safe co-existence with our bears. Most importantly she reminded us never store waste outside unless using a bear proof container, avoid feeding birds when bears are active and don’t throw meat and fish waste into your compost pile. If confronted by a bear use direct eye contact and a take charge attitude. Be prepared with several effective bear deterrents such as a high pitched whistle or a soup can one half filled with pebbles to shake.

Don’t take the bait regarding health care!

Tension is good. Apparently, our forefathers had the foresight to see the need for tension, good tension, between the three branches of our government. Historically, each political party can and often does keep the other party from extremism. The President has veto power and the congress controls the power of the purse. Democrats represent their constituents just as Republicans represent theirs. We do not have a democracy but a republic and because we have a republic we have a built-in “good tension.”

At times that tension seems to heat up. We are as a nation certainly tense about the means by which all in our country can enjoy the benefit and security of having health insurance. Those who support the current law that is to provide all Americans with health insurance call it by its official name, the Affordable Health Care Act. Those that greatly oppose it label it “Obamacare.”

Regardless of where you side on the law, there is one thing that I notice eroding the fabric of America that those in the church seem to be missing. I am a strong believer that politics have no place in pulpits. The preacher has but one job in a pulpit. Preach the Word of God and shut up about most everything else. Pulpits can and should offer a biblical perspective in the midst of upheaval. Most of America, certainly the media, is debating if not arguing about policy and the President. Sometimes it gets out of hand. This process will eventually work itself out but in the meantime we have this “insult-fest” that can potentially polarize us as a people.

The preacher in me has to say to those who follow Christ: “Do not take the bait!” There is nothing wrong with having political opinions and differing political ideology. I certainly have mine. Yet part of a Christian’s role in society is scripturally clear regardless of your politics. Two things about government are clear. God establishes government and we as believers are to pray for those in authority regardless of their political flavor.

The apostle Paul wrote a letter to the believers in first century Rome who had been and would be persecuted by dictatorial emperors. He wrote: Let everyone be subject to the governing authorities, for there is no authority except that which God has established. The authorities that exist have been established by God. Consequently, whoever rebels against the authority is rebelling against what God has instituted, and those who do so will bring judgment...

on themselves (Rom. 13:1-2).

Paul later wrote to his son in the faith, Timothy, the following statement: I urge, then, first of all, that petitions, prayers, intercession and thanksgiving be made for all people—for kings and all those in authority, that we may live peaceful and quiet lives in all godliness and holiness (1 Timothy 2:1).

The bottom line is this. Scripturally, Christians are to pray for those in authority. That doesn’t mean there shouldn’t be strong debate, opposing views and political frustration. The distinction concerning Christians in America today is that we may just be a bit more caught up in the politics and missing the point of our presence in this great country. Maybe we need to complain less and pray more for our leaders. Let’s certainly engage in the political process but let’s not lose our call to pray. An ongoing frenzy should never limit nor suppress the power of prayer in the church. Amen?

The Macon County Commissioners received the 2013 Robert and Virginia Ramsey Brunner Land Conservationist of the Year Award during LTLT’s annual Fall Celebration on November 2 at the Cowee School in Franklin, NC. The award recognizes the Macon County Commissioners’ essential role in conserving the historic Cowee School, which is now being repurposed as a community and heritage center.

The Brunner Award was established in 2004 to honor the Brunners’ vision and generosity, which were instrumental in the founding of LTLT.

The support of the Macon County Commissioners was pivotal in preserving the Cowee School facility and providing funding to transition the old school into a heritage center that will benefit the local area by serving as an educational, cultural heritage, recreational and economic development resource. The Macon County Heritage Center at the historic Cowee School has begun a bluegrass concert series and former classrooms are repurposed for various groups, including the Macon County Historical Society and the Eastern Band of Cherokee. The Center also houses the Cowee Pottery School and Cowee Textiles.

Macon County Commissioner Ron Haven, and former Commissioner Bobby Kuppers accepted the award. Kuppers noted, “I want to thank LTLT. We wouldn’t be here if it weren’t for them...we wouldn’t be here if it weren’t for the Macon County Historical Society and the CCDO [Cowee Community Development Organization]. I cannot say enough about the people in this community: they’ve just been exceptional. I am thrilled to death...”

Holding the artwork are Commissioner Ron Haven and past commissioner Bobby Kuppers.
