Highlands’ Hydro-plant in Rep. Meadows’ sights

In an effort to protect and preserve the old power plant across from Bridal Veil Falls on US 64 west Mayor Pat Taylor and historian Ran Shaffner are suggesting letters be sent to Representative Mark Meadows, who is willing to look into the situation if enough folks in Highlands request his assistance.

At Thursday’s Town Board meeting, Mayor Taylor said Meadows also offered to look into trying to help Highlands with costs associated with the quality of its watershed. Taylor also suggested citizens send a letter to Meadows in that regard.

Concerning the Hydro-electric plant, Shaffner penned a letter to Meadows, outlining the importance of the Hydro-electric power plant to Highlands, Macon County and even the state as an historic attraction on its Mountain Waters Scenic Byway.

“The Hydro-electric power plant that the Town of Highlands constructed on the Cullasaja River provided its citizens with electricity in 1927. There was a great sense of pride when residents of the town replaced kerosene lamps with electric light bulbs. The power plant served the town for the next 40 years until it was shut down in 1967.

“The power plant was placed on the Study List for North Carolina Historic Structures in 1980 and qualifies for Nomination to the National Register of Historic Structures. HS track/field redo a go

It’s official. The track and softball field at Highlands School will be getting a complete overhaul this summer.

It all started with a $150,000 donation from Art and Angela Williams, owners of Old Edwards Hospitality Group earlier this year and with the county commissioners pledging $50,000 toward the project on Tuesday night, renovations to Highlands’ School sports fields are expected to be completed over the summer.

In an unanimous vote, MC
As a member of the League of Municipalities, Highlands receives action alerts concerning pending legislation in Raleigh. The League of Municipalities has growing concerns about mounting state laws that undercut localities’ rights to self-determination in making decisions that are best for their communities. In my article last week, I wrote about the further centralization of a top-down governmental system emerging from Raleigh. I cited the proposed fair sales tax legislation as a case in point of a creeping centralization.

Here is another example concerning billboards. The excerpt posted below of the League’s summary of HB 304/SB 320 is insightful. I am concerned about the limitations that this legislation places on Highlands and other towns’ abilities to regulate billboards within city limits.

From the North Carolina League of Municipalities Update, April 17, 2015.

Please contact your legislators to express your opposition to HB 304/SB 320 Revisions to Outdoor Advertising Laws. This bill would undermine local regulation of billboards. Specific provisions would pre-empt local regulation when an existing billboard is altered or relocated, meaning that even grandfathered, non-conforming signs could be moved, enlarged, placed on a monopole or steel pole, or converted to lighted, digital technology. Although the 13-page bill contains numerous provisions, some of them continuing to refer to local zoning and other local regulation of billboards, it begins with a policy declaration calling for the establishment of a uniform system of billboard regulation throughout the state.

The legislation includes a provision that would relax vegetation-removal restrictions. Yet another provision, because it would force state and local government to pay for the future value of condemned signs rather than their replacement value, has the potential to significantly increase costs for municipalities when a billboard site must be condemned in order to move ahead with road or public building projects. Tell your legislators that this change amounts to creating a special class of property owners, and that if the same designation applied to all commercially-used property, including farmland, that road-building in the state would grind to a halt.

Because of the many complex provisions in the bill, and their different effects on each other, all of the implications of HB 304/SB 320 are not clear. Nonetheless, the previously mentioned provisions would undermine municipal authority and harm municipal taxpayers. . . End.

If you do not want huge, flashing billboards on 4th Street and roads leading to Highlands, voice your concern Jim Davis, our state senator, and Roger West, our state representative. I assure you the outdoor advertising lobby of North Carolina has expressed to “our” representatives their support in favor of the bills.

Or just imagine, a new billboard mounted on a forty foot mono pole controlled by a computer and flashing a charming, yet constantly changing, message for all of Highlands to see. At one moment one sees, “Mayor Pat Taylor Welcomes You,” the next moment, “All you can eat at Bubba’s Catfish House on 64,” followed by, “See Rock City.”

Sandra Sherman Mackey

Sandra Sherman Mackey, a Middle East expert and author of six books and numerous articles, died on Sunday, April 19th. She was 77.

After graduating with a history degree from the University of Central Oklahoma, Sandra Mackey pursued a graduate degree in International Relations at the University of Virginia. She was in the first class of females to attend the graduate program at UVA.

In 1978, she moved with her family to Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, where she spent four years reporting on Saudi politics, economics, military affairs, and society. Her many articles on the Middle East have appeared in the New York Times, the Los Angeles Times, the Wall Street Journal, the Christian Science Monitor, the Washington Post, the Chicago Tribune, the International Herald Tribune, the Guardian, the Atlanta Journal Constitution, USA Today, and The National Interest.

In 1987, she published her first of six books, The Saudis: Inside the Desert Kingdom. This was followed by Lebanon: Death of a Nation, a New York Times “Notable Book of 1989”; Passion and Politics: The Turbulent World of the Arabs (1992); The Iranians: Persia, Islam, and the Soul of a Nation (1996); The Reckoning: Iraq and the Legacy of Saddam Hussein (2002), which was featured on the cover of the New York Times Review of Books; and Mirror of the Arab World: Lebanon in Conflict (2008). In addition to her individual works, she also contributed a chapter on twentieth century politics to the National Geographic publication Cradle and Crucible: History in Faith in the Middle East.

A frequent commentator on the Middle East, Sandra appeared on CNN, MSNBC, Fox, Nightline, ABC Evening News, CBS Sunday Morning, C-Span, National Public Radio, Monitor Radio, the BBC, Canadian Broadcasting, Bill Mahr’s Politically Incorrect and many local media outlets.

In researching her writing, Sandra traveled to Lebanon, Jordan, Syria, Bahrain, the United Arab Emirates, Libya, and Morocco. In the years of 1992, 1993, and 1994, she traveled as an unaccompanied Western woman to Iran for six weeks at a time. She traveled to Iraq in 1998 and 1999, and returned in October of 2004 with the 1st Infantry Division.

From 2004-2010, she aided in preparing upper level officers in the U.S. Army who were rotating to Iraq.

Sandra Mackey was a masterful teacher. She taught history at Harding High School in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma and St. Anne’s School in Charlottesville, Virginia. She taught political science at Georgia State University and was a visiting scholar in the Woodrow Wilson Department of Government and Foreign Affairs at the University of Virginia.

As an active member of Trinity Presbyterian Church, Sandra shared her expertise in the Education Ministry by leading Sunday School classes and giving lectures to the congregation and community of Atlanta in times of turmoil in the Middle East.

Sandra was politically active, volunteering in political campaigns and rallying for causes from Civil Rights to women’s rights to gun control, including participating in the March on Washington in 1963.

She is survived by her loving husband and partner, Dan, her son, Colin, her daughter-in-law, Patty, and her cherished grandson, Adrian.

Services will be held on Thursday, April 23rd at 11am at Trinity Presbyterian Church, 3003 Howell Mill Road, Atlanta 30327.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorial donations be made to support research at the Emory Parkinson’s and Movement Disorders Program (Emory University, Attn: Katie Dozier, 1440 Clifton Road NE, Suite 170, Atlanta, GA 30322) or to the Boys and Girls Clubs of Metro Atlanta (1275 Peachtree St. NE, Suite 500, Atlanta 30309).
Bazan also made it clear that monetary donations made to the park didn’t have strings attached.

“Not a penny of the money raised from public donations had a single string attached to it. The donations were given from the heart and for the love and betterment of the town of Highlands,” he said.

However, between $450,000 and $650,000 is needed to complete the park so the project doesn’t linger and so it is ready for the ice rink in November.

On that note, he said there are a number of donors who are willing to write checks for $100,000 or $150,000 but they want some sort of recognition for themselves or their families.

That recognition would come in the form of a plaque of appreciation no larger than 11 inches by 14 inches and would be affixed to a particular feature in the park – fountain, benches, etc.

“But not everyone feels this way – Art and Angela Williams don’t want a plaque or any recognition. Art said he is doing this because he loves Highlands,” said Bazan.

The Williamses donated $390,000 for the first phase of the park, $250,000 to buy the land for the 2nd phase and have pledged $200,000-$220,000 for the ice rink, equipment and storage.

A donors’ wall is planned for the front of the restroom building and every single person who made a donation will be listed there. Individual plaques will be reserved for those who make hefty donations.

Commissioner John Dotson didn’t like the idea of the plaques.

“I get the reason, and I know you need to raise money for the park and it’s a form of gratitude but it shouldn’t be in that form in a public park,” he said.

But Bazan said the gesture was needed.

“You have to give us the tools to generate the funds,” he said. “Some people won’t give money unless they are recognized so it ties our hands.”

With large donations, the park could be finished relatively quickly. Without them, it could take a decade for the money to trickle in, he said.

Commissioners voted to allow the plaques with a 4 to 1 vote. Dotson voted no.

Next Bazan asked permission to change the name of the park from the Kelsey-Hutchinson Park to the K-H Founders Park.

Commissioners OK’d the request. Commissioner Amy Patterson said it made sense because more than two people founded Highlands.”

Finally, the coalition asked that the town develop a timeline agreeable to all parties for the donation of the park to the Town of Highlands.

However, before a date is designated, Commissioner Donnie Calloway asked the town attorney to seek clarification regarding the Macon Bank property. Bazan said he had concerns about that issue, too.

The amphitheater portion of the park is on Macon Bank property and if the bank should ever decide to close and sell the property, commissioners and Bazan want assurances that the amphitheater portion will stay intact as part of the park.

Bazan suggested a 99-year lease.

Verizon Tower Extension

Back in February at the board retreat, commissioners learned that though Verizon has received the signed contract from the town regarding permission to extend the height of the cell tower on Little Bear Pen, Verizon hadn’t signed the contract. In fact, commissioners learned that Verizon didn’t intend to sign the contract at this time because the Highlands project didn’t make their “A” list so it is on the back burner.

With that news, the town began to seek another carrier in hopes of expanding coverage in the Highlands area.

Matt Shuler, MIS/GIS director said US Cellular was seeking permission to erect three small monopoles on town property in town, and might consider the Little Bear Pen tower site instead; particularly if Verizon wasn’t going to move forward in the immediate future.

However, at Thursday’s Town Board meeting, Shuler said that US Cellular wasn’t interested and Verizon had changed its mind and was now willing to move forward.

Therefore, commissioners asked the town attorney to rescind the previous contract and generate a new one – this time with a start date not just a signature.

“1 don’t want to be left hanging with nothing we can do; basically at their mercy,” said Commissioner Amy Patterson.

Planning Dept. Matters
Planning Director Joshi Ward presented amendments to the Noise Ordinance saying that the Land Use Committee had discussed changes to it due to several issues that occurred last season.

Basically, the amendments include the reduction of allowable decibel levels from 85 to 50 and 70 depending on whether in a residential or commercial zone and whether during daytime hours of 7 a.m. to 11 p.m., or nighttime hours of 11 p.m. to 7 a.m.

In addition, permits would not be needed unless the potential sound – whether amplified or otherwise – will definitely exceed 70 decibels; however, 80 decibels is the limit.

“Right now, the level is 85 decibels and that can be exceeded with a permit. We want to do away with that; 85 decibels is pretty loud,” said Ward.

Mayor Taylor noted that none of the live music events at the K-H Park or Town Square have exceeded 85 decibels.

Commissioners OK’d the amendments. Ward also presented an amended parking map. He said the town received a request from Sabrina Hawkins, owner of Highlands Inn, asking for five employee restricted parking spaces on N. 4th Street, adjacent to Highlands Inn and across from the Bryson’s building under construction.

The Town Board OK’d the request.

Both the Planning Board and the Zoning Board have had vacancies for several months. The Planning Board needs one member and the Zoning Board needs an alternate member.

Ward recommended Dennis Dewolf for the Planning Board and Jerry Moore as alternate member of the Zoning Board.

Recently, the Town Board changed requirements for being on the Zoning Board from living in town to owning a property or a business in town. Jerry Moore lives outside of town but owns Kilwin’s.

MicroCurrent
Microcurrent aids in reducing the signs of aging by utilizing a low level of electricity that mimics our own body’s biological current.

These tiny microcurrent impulses trigger chemical reactions at a cellular level to enhance the production of natural collagen and elastin, provide circulatory benefits, and work directly on the nerves and muscle fibers. The result is visible firming and smoothing of the skin. It also helps tone facial muscles.

Although you will notice the treatment’s tightening effects immediately, the more significant improvement will occur gradually over a period of several weeks as the new collagen forms.

Celluma’s phototherapy device, uses wavelengths of light produced by light emitting diodes (LEDs) to treat multiple conditions – acne & anti-aging.

Celluma’s deeply penetrating wavelengths kill the bacteria that causes breakouts, while reducing the inflammation, pimples and redness associated with acne. A reduction in lesions and overall improvement in skin appearance is often seen in a matter of weeks.

MET Opera Live in HD at the Highlands Performing Arts Center: Saturday, April 25 Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci. 12:30pm

Opera’s most enduring tragic double bill returns in an evocative new production from Sir David McVicar, who sets the action across two time periods but in the same Sicilian village. Marcelo Álvarez rises to the challenge of playing the dual tenor roles of Turiddu in Cavalleria Rusticana and Canio in Pagliacci. Rae Smith (War Horse) has designed the moodily atmospheric 1900 village square setting of Cavalleria, which transforms to a 1948 truck stop for the doomed vaudeville troupe of Pagliacci. Eva-Maria Westbroek (Cav) and Patricia Racette (Pag) sing the unlucky her-options, and Met Principal Conductor Fabio Luisi is on the podium. This will be the last MET Opera Live in HD for this season. The new MET Live in HD season will start in October. The pre-opera discussion, lead by Beverly Pittman will begin at 12 noon. Tickets are available online: highlandsopac.org or by calling 828.526.9047

Dine out for AIDS at local restaurants on April 30

On Thursday, April 30th the AIDS Fundraiser “Dining Out for Life®” (DOFL) will be held. Here in Western North Carolina the event supports the Western North Carolina AIDS Project (WNCAP). Since 1986 WNCAP has provided HIV/AIDS Outreach Education & Prevention programs and case management services to those affected by the disease in Macon and 17 other counties. DOFL is a vital fundraiser necessary for WNCAP to carry on critical services throughout our region. Last year the event raised $165,000.

In the US there are currently over 1.2 million people living with AIDS. This number includes over 35,000 men, women and children in North Carolina.

According to the CDC over 50,000 new HIV infections occur annually in the US. Since HIV/AIDS was first identified as a global health threat, funding for testing, treatment and care in the US has never been enough to meet ongoing need. Because of current budget cuts there will be less money from government for treatment and prevention in NC and across the US. That is why support of WNCAP is so important this year.

In Highlands Cyprus, On the Veranda, the Ugly Dog and the Dog House will be participating in this year’s event. They will graciously contribute 20% of their sales that day to WNCAP. Please add your contribution by having a meal at one of these restaurants. Your participation is a win-win-win for everyone. You will have a great meal, the restaurant will have increased sales, and the clients of WNCAP and future generations will continue to benefit from the services offered.

NOTE: The Recreation Department is now accepting application for Lifeguards for the Summer. We will be offering a Lifeguard course in late April and early May.

Don't miss the Mountain Garden Club's 33rd plant sale on Saturday, May 23. The Highlands ball field gates will open at 9:00 a.m., and many repeat and new customers will head directly to the dahlia tent at the rear of the field. Whether a seasoned dahlia grower, a beginner, or just thinking about it, you can get expert advice on choosing and growing this magnificent flower when you shop at the annual Mountain Garden Club plant sale.

Dahlia growing is becoming more and more popular among gardeners on the Highlands plateau. As a beginner, you tend to start small and the next thing you know, you are hooked. Your head can spin as you select your favorites, with so many sizes, colors, and varieties from which to choose.

Often referred to as the peonies of autumn, dahlias start putting on their best show around August. Their color range is endless and they are durable, holding up beautifully in outdoor and indoor party environments. When many of your summer blossoms fade, dahlias are just beginning their show.

Dahlias require a site with good drainage and are partial to full sun with at least 6 hours of sunlight. Pots are also an increasingly popular way to grow dahlias. Potted dahlias can go directly into the ground when it has warmed and there is little chance of frost. You can start the tubers indoors in small pots, in good light, about a month before planting time. This year the ladies of the Mountain Garden Club have a wonderful selection of tubers and pre-potted dahlia plants for sale.

In addition to dahlias, you'll find hundreds of native plants and other perennials of many varieties at the sale. All plants have been carefully dug, potted, and tended with TLC from the club members.

The 33rd annual Mountain Garden Club plant sale is Saturday, May 23 from 9 a.m. until noon at the baseball park on Hwy. 64 E, corner of North 4th and Hickory Streets. If rained out on Saturday, the sale will be May 24, 1 until 4 p.m. Cash and checks only, please.

Proceeds go to benefit horticulture scholarships and community projects.

Has Your Home Been on the Market for a Long Time?

The real estate market changes from year to year and season to season and this year it looks as though our market is poised for a better year. Good news for sellers, but what about the home market is poised for a better year. Good changes sometimes work wonders because worth a thousand words.

Many people assume it’s as easy as pulling your home off the market one day, relisting with the same agent or a new agent the next and having it appear as a new listing. It’s not as easy as that since our local multiple listing service (MLS) has rules that determine what qualifies as a new listing and what does not. To qualify as a brand new listing showing no cumulative days on the market your home needs to be off the market 120 consecutive days. This stops the cumulative days on the market count so that when you do relist the days on the market count has been entirely reset. Relisting it sooner than 120 days will reset the current days on the market count but the total days on the market will still be shown. The past history of the home is still available, but not as obvious.

If you decide you don’t want to take your home off the market for 120 days in order to reset the “days on the market” ticker, maybe it’s time to rethink your property’s image. Sit down with your agent and analyze why the home hasn’t sold. It may be that you need to reconsider your listing price, but chances are that you also need to freshen up your listing so that it attracts the attention of potential buyers.

The importance of quality photographs can’t be over emphasized. Were your original listing photos taken on a cloudy day and your home looks too dark? Did you have your pictures taken last fall and now it’s summer? Photographs from last season automatically give the impression that your home has been lingering on the market. If you’ve updated the look of your home or staged it more attractively your photographs need to highlight those updates. Today’s buyers typically start their search online so photos that are professional and stand out are crucial in sparking their initial interest. One good picture is worth a thousand words.

When considering pricing, small changes sometimes work wonders because you will reach more buyers. For example if your home is priced at $356,000.00 you haven’t been reaching prospective buyers who’ve set their search parameters at under $350,000.00. Lowering the price by only $6,000 brings your home to the attention of a larger segment of buyers. When you change your price it is the perfect time to update those photos.

Never forget that even with a professional Realtor working with you to sell your home, there are many things you can and should do to help make your home more attractive to the market. Let your Realtor know when you’ve cleaned the home up for the spring and added new plants so that new photos of the home at its best can be taken. Never forget that you and your Realtor are working as a team to get your home sold.

was designated by the U.S. Forest Service as a National Scenic Byway because of its numerous waterfalls, including Bridal Veil Falls, Dry Falls, Quarry Falls, and Lower Cullasaja Falls, to which might be added the lesser known Kalakalaski Falls just above the power plant.

“The structure itself is located across from Bridal Veil Falls along permission to pursue the granting of a Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) license to resurrect the plant.

With the plant abandoned and the town’s FERC license allowed to expire in 1996, Highlands basically relinquished “ownership” of the structure and its environs. According to Mayor Taylor, the town can’t find any record of ever owning the plant property but understands it was given permission by the USFS to use the property to build both the Lake Sequoyah Dam and the hydroelectric plant in 1925.

Highlands’ forefathers had a quit claim deed drawn up to ensure clear title to the Sequoyah Dam property, but unfortunately nothing was done to protect the powerhouse property. Now the town is scrambling to protect it and to call it its own.

With green energy the hot topic, Advanced Hydropower, a company from Peachtree City, GA applied for and in late 2014 received permission to pursue a FERC license to resurrect the plant for the purposes of selling the ¾ megawatts of energy it could generate back to the Duke Power grid to the tune of $225,000 to $250,000 a year.

In 2013 the town considered resurrecting the plant for the same reason – with the profits going to the town – but learned it would take $4-$5 million to get it up and running and likely 20 years to service and pay off the loan before a clear profit was realized.

Last November, when the Town Board learned of Advanced Hydropower’s plans, commissioners were taken by surprise. On one hand they said they didn’t know if they wanted to make the long-term investment themselves, but on the other hand, they weren’t too keen on the idea of an “outsider” coming into town and reaping the benefits.

Though Advanced Hydropower’s FERC application was accepted, the town of Highlands and about 22 other organizations are stakeholders in the project and will all have a say along the five-year trek prior to Advanced Hydropower’s project coming to fruition. There is also the chance that after submitting all the required permits and completing the required studies, Advanced Hydropower may decide not to proceed.

So far the Town Board hasn’t expressed interest in resurrecting the plant to generate green energy but there is an interest in jumping the hurdles to make the plant an historic/educational/recreation site.

Even if the town pursues the historical angle it’s not known if that will affect the FERC process in the works.

According to Annie Laurie McDonald, Preservation Specialist with the State Historic Preservation Office in Asheville, which is part of the NC Department of Cultural Resources, both the Lake Sequoyah Dam and the hydroelectric plant on the Cullasaja River have been in the National Registry’s sights.

“In 1989 both the dam and the powerplant were put on the National Register study list which is the first step in getting listed on the National Register,” she said. “In 1990, it was determined that both structures were potentially – not formally – but potentially eligible for National Register status.”

However, she also said if Advanced Hydropower isn’t going to change the structure in any way then listing on the National Register may not hinder its plans particularly if it isn’t going to impact an historical resource.

“If it’s a project that requires federal permits and if they are going to change the structure in an adverse way, we can mitigate the impact,” she said. “That procedure doesn’t absolutely protect the structure but it ensures an accounting of the impact on the resource.”

Now there is a chance that friends in high places (Rep. Mark Meadows) can tread where others can’t and perhaps intervene on Highlands’ behalf and help preserve the site.

According to Taylor and Shaffner, if Meadows hears from enough citizens to warrant his intervention, he will consider the move.

Cockman completes 600-mile run across North Carolina

By Richard Betz

As reported in the April 9 edition of Highlands Newspaper, a 57-year old runner named Dave Cockman ran his way through Highlands on Easter Sunday, April 5, completing the second leg of a planned 12-day run across the state of North Carolina.

Dave started his historic run at the Tennessee border just west of Murphy on April 4, and he planned to finish at Jennette’s Pier in Nags Head, averaging 50 miles per day. He was doing the run to raise funds and bring awareness to the work of the Intrepid Fallen Heroes Fund, helping wounded veterans returning from conflict.

Mayor Taylor and several members of the Highlands Roadrunners Club met him at the Town Limits and escorted him into Town late on Sunday night, the end of a tough two days in the mountains. The Mayor had arranged for complimentary accommodations at Old Edwards Inn and a dinner at the Ugly Dog Pub. The next morning, the Mayor issued a Proclamation in support of his cause and ran with him to the Town Limits. Dave told me later that “the Mayor literally ran me out of Town!” Throughout the rest of his journey, he received support and encouragement from small towns and big cities, running clubs, and ordinary people who found out about his record-setting journey and the cause for which he was running.

My daughter Katy was on her way to visit us at the Outer Banks on April 17, and I told her to watch for a man running by himself on US-64 somewhere east of Williamston. She told me she had just passed him on a lonely stretch of road, looking upbeat, with two small flags stuck in his backpack. That was the sight many motorists saw as they passed him on his journey.

On April 18 in Nags Heads, a little before sunset, Martha and I waited for Dave at Jennette’s Pier with a group of 20 or so other runners and friends who had followed his progress day by day. We were scheduled to run the Flying Pirate Half Marathon the next morning, and as veteran marathon runners ourselves, it was simply astonishing to us to consider that this man had run 644.44 miles in 14 days 11 hours and 28 minutes – the equivalent of a little over 49 half-marathons, back-to-back, day after day.

Dave arrived on time and I had the honor of running the last quarter-mile of his journey with him and several friends to the end of the pier. He instantly knew who I was – we had only communicated by e-mail and Facebook until then – and he said to tell the Mayor and other members of the Highlands Roadrunners Club and the folks at Old Edwards Inn how much he appreciated their hospitality two weeks earlier. “They treated me like royalty,” he said.

Although he said he lost 25 pounds over the course of his run, Dave appeared to be in very good physical condition, without a single black toenail or blister on his feet. He was in remarkably good spirits, too, and I had trouble keeping up with him as we sprinted the last hundred yards down the pier. As photos were being snapped on the end of the pier, he told some of the many inspiring stories about total strangers who had helped him.

“I want to send out another big thank you,” he wrote on his Facebook page, “to everyone who has supported me in this grand experiment of seeing if I could run across the entire state of North Carolina. Somehow by the grace of God and a lot of good wishes and encouragement from each of you, I kept going day after day until I reached the ocean.” There were a number of days when I would get into my hotel at 3 am or later, only to have to get up in 2 or 3 hours and do it all over again. Believe me, those were tough days.”

But it was an inspiring journey, too. He said that he could literally not count the number of times people searched him out on the road, rolled down their window, and handed him money and thanked him for what he was doing. “I think one of the enduring memories I will have is of all the thousands of people who drove by and waved back at me. I wish I had a video of each and every wave. THANK YOU, North Carolina. You have provided me with one fantastic journey. Now I must go and research all the places I took pictures of and the people I met and report back to you all on what I have seen. But first, I think I’ll just go get a good night’s sleep!”

Dave says he ended up raising over $7,000 for the Intrepid Fallen Heroes Fund, and he will be glad to receive additional donations. Those who are interested can go to the links on his website, www.murphytomanteo.org/ or simply make a check out to “Dave Cockman” or “Intrepid Fallen Heroes Fund” and mail them to: Dave Cockman, P.O. Box 3152, Cary, NC 27519.

Highlands Central Baptist Church

Although it may sound arrogant, presumptuous or even self-righteous to you, I hope you will continue reading. So much is at stake. More, frankly, than we can comprehend. Surely sounding extremist and overly dramatic, that which is at stake is our great nation of constitutional rights and U.S. Military Forces fought-and-died-for freedoms. Ironically, minority voices are changing and setting the standards for the majority. Once regarded as the envy of the rest of the world, the United States is now mocked by that same world...really only a shadow of our former self. There is no question that government bears its own responsibility in this matter. It is documented to be one of/ by and for the people. Some have lost sight of that. It may surprise you, however, to hear that the greater responsibility rests on the Church.

The Bible puts it this in 2 Chronicles 7:14: “If my people who are called by my name will humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear from Heaven, and will forgive their sin and heal their land.”

Does this sound like fantasy to you? Like the musings of the unenlightened? To put it another way, someone has said: “As the family goes, so goes the Church. As the Church goes, so goes the Nation.” What about you, fellow Pastor? Are you fulfilling your prophetic, as well as priestly, role? May I ask you more pointedly: Are you preaching only “fiddlin’ sermons” while Rome burns? When your people hear you open your mouth, do they recognize that you’ve been with a Holy God and are speaking His Words on His behalf?”

Spiritual Revival and Awakening can and should begin in the pulpit. However, if not so, then God is pleased to start such a work in the pew. Church history bears this out. Revival in the Church has always affected the surrounding culture and society. You see, the conclusion which may sound arrogant, presumptuous or even self-righteous to you is this: The Church in America is in desperate need of Revival. Like the frog in the kettle...instead of being alarmed that we’re slowly dying, we are rather enjoying the warm bath. Realization of our desperate need will result in desperate prayer. That’s not the case in many churches now. In fact, one of the surest ways to insure low-to-no attendance is to announce a special time for Revival prayer. Desperate praying will certainly gain the attention and help of Heaven. No one can say precisely how God will heal our land when we pray. Yet He always keeps His promises and how He answers is for our good and His Glory.

So, my question: Are you listening? Is Washington listening? Do you have friends in high places? Do you know how to get this article on the President’s desk as well as on your Pastor’s? Can you imagine our President saying something like: “Our great nation needs the help of Almighty God. I humbly myself and call on His name. I ask you to do the same.”

Our times are critical... more than ever before. Yet, we may count on a loving and gracious God to intervene and help. He will respond to the prayers of His people. May God bless you as you respond to this article and may God bless America.

commissioners voted to budget $50,000 of the school district's capital outlay fund next fiscal year to be specifically allocated toward the project. With the county’s funds, the entire $400,000 needed to upgrade the school's track and softball field will be secured.

The school board prioritized capital outlay requests and sent a budget request of about $400,000 to the board of commissioners earlier this year. That is a $200,000 increase over what the district was allocated last year. According to Superintendent Dr. Chris Baldwin, after seeing the Highlands community step up to raise $350,000 to improve the rec facility at the school, he would support the county if the $50,000 was taken out of the already requested budget items. MC Commissioner Chair Kevin Corbin said that while the $50,000 will be a capital outlay item for next year, during the budget process they will decide whether it will be part of the already submitted request, or if it will be a supplement.

After private monetary and in-kind donations, $50,000 was needed from the county. The original request was for $93,000 but a hefty private donation decreased that amount.

In-kind donations include: $35,000 from John Lupoli, owner of Lupoli Construction, Jeff Weller of Summit Architecture and Hank Ross of Ross Landscaping Architecture, who are donating design and drawing services equivalent to $35,000. County Commissioner Jim Tate of Tate Landscaping Services, is donating landscape construction and sodding materials worth $35,000.

The cost for equipment, landscaping and signage will be paid for through private donors who have pledged $40,000. The Rotary Club of Highlands has donated $8,600.

Renovations and additions include a maintenance building and dugouts, demo track, structures, fences, additional drainage, a new four-lane track, prep, paving and striping, soil prep and sod, high jump pad area, fencing, electrical conduits and wiring, permits, temporary facilities, mobilization, long and triple jump pit.

Commissioner Tate said now that the funds for the project have been secured, work will be done over the summer months while students are on break with a completion date expected by the fall. The $50,000 pledged by commissioners for the project will also serve as part of the 10 percent in-kind match needed to apply for a $2.9 million QZAB (Qualified Zone Academy Bond) loan from the state.

The loan, which will be given to the county at a zero percent interest rate, requires that the applicant produce a 10 percent in-kind match from the local community. According to County Manager Derek Roland, when applying for the loan, the entire Highlands Sports Recreation Facility project will be offered to the state as the in-kind match.

Commissioners voted to move forward with applying for the $2.9 million QZAB funds to complete needed upgrades to both Highlands School and Union Academy.

Based on the school board's renovation cost estimate, at $85 per square foot, it would cost $1.2 million to renovate Union Academy's 14,931 sq. ft. facility. With only 13,654 sq. ft. at Highlands, the cost weighs in at $1.1 million.

The application process for the QZAB loan is extensive and to get the bulk of the work done over the summer while students are on break, commissioners had to act fast.

County Attorney Chester Jones said the best case scenario would be for the county to receive dollars from the loan by July, right about the time major portions of the project would be occurring. Because issues such as a new HVAC unit and windows at Highlands, and asbestos removal at Union Academy, are things that have to be completed while students are not occupying the building. Jones recommended that commissioners set aside existing county monies to cover the cost of those projects in case the QZAB funds are delayed.

For those projects, as well as money to pay for the architectural fees to lay out the project, commissioners voted to transfer $682,643 from the county’s Fund 46 (school capital outlay fund) to be used to pay for that portion of the project if the QZAB loan is not in the bank by the time checks need to be written. While the county may be paying for that portion of the project up front out of existing funds, once QZAB monies are added to the budget, the county can reimburse itself.
Rep. Mark Meadows visits Highlands Rotary

Despite difficult times, the people of western North Carolina gather together and give generously, said guest speaker Congressman Mark Meadows. Looking to the federal government to solve all societal problems is not the answer. What we need, said Meadows, is to define ways to empower people to solve problems. Rotary is an example of the value added by groups finding solutions to a host of issues. For western North Carolina, Congressman Meadows intends to focus on providing the infrastructure for high speed internet. He encouraged all citizens of the 11th District to call his office with ideas as well as complaints. His staff takes note of these calls and he also sets aside four hours for answering the phone himself. Contact the congressman at: https://meadows.house.gov.

State of the county subject of Highlands Rotary meeting

A graduate of Franklin High School with a Master’s Degree in Public Administration from Western Carolina University, Macon County Manager Derrick Roland was the guest speaker at the April 14th meeting. Overseeing a 45 million dollar budget and more than 400 employees, Derrick presented an informative “State of the County” report. Among the topics featured in the presentation included the challenge of a potential state mandated redistribution of sales tax collections, and the continuing discussions with Jackson County regarding the “service area” for communities near the county boundary. Satulah access discussed at Highlands Rotary Ran Shaffner presented a great program on the history of public access to Satulah Mountain back from the days when native Americans called it “Big Rumbler.” Since 1909 when the Highlands Improvement Society purchased the top of the mountain as public property, access has been an issue. Foot traffic has always been allowed but vehicular traffic has been a problem because all of the roads to the top pass through private property. While different solutions for the problem of access have been sought, at the moment, no clear resolution is in sight.
