Local taxes could fund public schools

By Brittney Lofthouse

New North Carolina legislation has received opposition from public education supporters fearing it could increase the divide between the rich and the poor.

House Bill 514 was introduced by Charlotte Republican Representative Bill Brawley and included language that would allow four suburban towns outside of Charlotte to create their own charter schools. The bill, that combined with a change in this year’s state budget gives municipalities authority to spend property tax money on public education, has drawn national attention as potentially upending the landscape of segregation and school choice in North Carolina.

While the legislation was crafted and names four municipalities in the Charlotte-area, whether it could potentially impact Macon County in the future remains to be seen.

“I have been following this issue as it pertains to Charlotte–

Candidate Kuppers sends urgent message to voters

Get off the sidelines and be part of the game

Last Thursday, Indivisible Highlands, a non-partisan activist group that meets the first and third Thursdays of each month, invited Democrat NC Senate candidate Bobby Kuppers to speak on the issues driving him to unseat Senator Jim Davis who is running for his fifth term.

“This is a Blue Moon election – me and Phillip Price are the top two races on the ballot – and we need people to get out and vote for us,” he said preaching to the choir gathered at the High Dive in Highlands last week.

Democrat Phillip Price is running against Congressman Mark Meadows who is running for his fourth term.

“Davis and Meadows don’t care about you unless you are rich. The rich are their backers and donors. We need change. A lot of folks in Western North Carolina are still struggling and haven’t really made it out of the Last year, Macon County Schools reported more than 50 homeless children attending school in the district. Of those, two Highlands School students were included. In addition to homeless children, there were more than two dozen foster children attending schools throughout the county.

The opioid epidemic has devastated North Carolina families, driving thousands of children into foster care, according to a new report by NC Child. The number of children in foster care across North Carolina.

though I’m not identified, yes, that’s me in the picture on page 6 of the Saturday edition of the Asheville Citizens Times. I was asking a question at the WNC Conversion Health Foundation Forum. Mayor Bob Scott of Franklin and I attended the meeting with more than 100 representatives from organizations across Western Carolina.

You might ask why I was there? The forum was the initial rollout of the newly proposed Dogwood Health Trust that will be created in and when Mission Healthcare is sold to Hospital Corporation of America. I wanted to get information about the new healthcare foundation and how it might impact the Highlands/Cashiers area.

This new organization will manage a one-to-two billion dollar endowment generated by the sale of the Mission Healthcare System. Mission has established a small steering board to begin the process of creating a larger independent foundation board. The new Dogwood Trust will serve the 18 counties of Western North Carolina from Mitchell to Cherokee county. This healthcare foundation will support community health/wellness programs. The underlying concept is that a healthy citizenry will translate into lower, stable and affordable healthcare costs for Western Carolina.

The forum speakers addressed issues related to the creation of this new foundation. One speaker outlined the need for health programs to support people at the lower socioeconomic levels. Two chief executive officers of other healthcare foundations provided good advice on how to operate the foundation. Dr. John Ball of Mission Healthcare gave an overview of the sale of Mission to HCA and the creation of the Dogwood Trust.

So what about my question? I asked the question of Jennifer Harrod, a Special Deputy Attorney General. The North Carolina Attorney General will review and approve the sale of Mission to HCA, as well as the establishment of the Dogwood Health Trust. Ms. Harrod gave an overview of the process and then took questions. My question went something like this. Acknowledging that the current negotiations between HCA and Mission had to be confidential, I asked when the press and public would have access to those documents outlining the sale and organization structure that will have been submitted to the Attorney General. Her response surprised me. We were told that normally such documents were not accessible, but public access might be a good idea in this case. I responded that as an elected official operating under open records laws, I, too, believed it would be important for those documents to be public.

A recurrent theme of the forum presenters was a need for the foundation to build public trust. At the appropriate time, sharing documents detailing the plans, agreements and transactions will be a major step in establishing this public trust. Many participant questions followed centering around transparency and trust in the process moving forward. Sustaining Essential and Rural Community Healthcare (SEARCH) has been created by citizens served by Blue Ridge Hospital. Representatives were at the forum and asked several important questions. Walter the Wonder Dog is home!

A few days back I ran into the Episcopal Church of the Incarnation on Fifth and Main streets on a quick errand and left our two Scotticis in the car.

In the couple minutes I was gone, Walter jumped out the open window of the SUV and staged a jailbreak.

Excited witnesses were able to point me toward the library and I gave chase on foot. I lost him near Horse Cove Road but several different people kindly joined the chase/search.

The first calls went to Paul and to Bob Boshell (resident Dog Whisperer) and then, on the advice of kind townsfolk, to WHLC which put out the word over the air and posted the runaway notice on their FaceBook account.

One member of the Highlands police force, two Cullasaja friends, the OEI Asst. General Manager and a number of unidentified volunteers in cars joined in.

It is fairly amazing how many people saw Walter racing at 35 mph from one end of Highlands to the other. Reports came in from all the way down to the Bascom and then back again to the Library and Horse Cove Road. Eventually, he was surrounded and flushed out of the Highlands Manor woods behind Our Lady of the Mountains Catholic Church. What an adventure!

To each and every one of you who helped with the search, who reported the latest sittings, who changed your walking or jogging route to watch for Walter, and to all the many people who have expressed concern and asked whether he has been located, a huge thank you. Walter the Wonder Dog is home.

Highlands is a great town full of fantastic, helpful and friendly folks. We appreciate you all!

I have long believed there are only two real currencies in life: time and money. I’ll leave any pontificating about money for another … time. See what I did there?

It’s been said time is a human construct; it doesn’t really exist. Allow me to dissent. Time, as defined by Sir Isaac Newton, he of gravity fame, and the Oxford English Dictionary, the word, if you will, is the indefinite, continued progress of existence and events that occur in apparently irreversible succession from the past through the present to the future.

Time, therefore, like it or not, just is.

Humans, in some rudimentary manner, figured out long ago how to inexacty measure time. Those measurements are the human construct. In the past we viewed it entirely in terms of binaries, such as dark or light, cold or warm, wet or dry. In other words, long or short stretches of those italicized words in the second paragraph.

Later, we created measurements, like days, weeks, months, and years, hours and minutes and seconds; the whole rotation-of-the-earth-on-its-axis-thing and the whole earth-hurtling-in-orbit-around-the-sun-thing. Galileo, Copernicus, those guys. What they said.

Even later, we came to measure these dynamic features of time via advanced technologies, such as timepieces and calendars.

I love timepieces. I especially love clocks or wristwatches that either tick or have an ever-moving second hand. These precision instruments serve to demonstrate the unquestioned and unstoppable march of time. I don’t love calendars so much, except those that come along with really nice pictures.

No matter how good or bad, positive or negative the current circumstances of our lives, or of the world, we know, deep within our hearts, time inexorably marches on. As sure as day turns to night, so too do the pages of the calendar fall away, revealing the ever-fleeting nature of this thing called time.

We, all of us, sometimes soothe the passage of an otherwise ordinary day by whispering to ourselves, “Someday, we’ll...” do this or that, go here or there, promising ourselves a reward on an occasion to be designated later.

An interesting attribute of time has to do with how we pass it. We’ve all experienced someone uttering the words, “I made great time getting here.” No doubt, we’ve also encountered someone giddily proclaiming, “I saved a bunch of time” doing this or that.

No, you didn’t. Time is not something to be made or saved. That’s the OTHER currency, which we will discuss at another point in … you know. That said, time can, indeed be spent, or invested, or misspent, or wasted. Once you’ve performed any of those activities you should lament that period of fleeting time, which is gone, and will never return.

Someday, we’ll look back on this particular period of time in our own lives or in our nation’s history. We’ll shake our heads, smile ruefully at the inanity, or insanity of it all, and turn a hopeful gaze in the direction of a welcome if uncertain future. We’ll do this secure in the knowledge, or at least the belief, depending on our personal point of view, that things can never be as great and wonderful, or as senseless and depressing as they are right now.

Time is precious. Time is never-ending. Time marches on, and all that. With regard to each and all of us, time is definitely finite. We each started this thing called life at a particular moment in time and we will come to our ultimate demise at another. For us, time is, at its very essence, all we’ve got.

For whatever reasons, this time in history can feel either spectacular or spectacularly awful. Either way, don’t fret or gloat. Turn your eyes instead to the nearest clock or wristwatch. Make sure it’s one that either ticks or has one of those ever-turning second hands. Look at it. Rest assured, whatever future you either imagine, hope for, or dread is unquestionably and unstoppable on its way.

Now, wait a second, or, a minute, or, an hour. Wait a day, or, a week, or a month, or a year.

See? That future we just talked about? There it is!

Mecklenburg and the municipalities of Matthews, Mint Hill, Cornelius and Huntersville,” said Macon County Schools Superintendent Dr. Chris Baldwin. “The issues and circumstances around the push for these municipalities to fund public education within their city limits are not currently present here in Macon County. I was not aware of this addition to the budget, however. This change opens up many different scenarios that could benefit some, or all students in our school district. A great deal of cooperation between the school system, county and local governments would certainly be required for this to be beneficial for all of our students.”

But the budget, which was fast-tracked through the Republican-controlled General Assembly, authorized cities – in general – to use taxes for public education. It also specifies that city taxpayers should not be liable for any school-related debt. With House Bill 514 and the budget language, every city in the state now has the ability to fund public education if they want to.

Municipal leaders including Highlands Mayor Patrick Taylor have their concerns. “In essence, the legislation would allow municipalities to use sales and property taxes in support of charter schools in their town. I don’t foresee the town of Highlands ever getting into the school funding business,” said Taylor. “I believe in the concept of limited government, especially when it comes to towns and cities.”

Scott Mooneyham, director of public affairs for the N.C. League of Municipalities said this is a monumental policy change in North Carolina that is receiving very little vetting.

"Constitutionally, the state has a duty to operate and fund schools. Sometime down the road would this result in a statutory shift of some of that responsibility?" he asked.

Dr. Baldwin said there is a possibility the legislation could lead to municipalities in Macon County one day directly funding public education.

However, Senator Jim Davis disagrees and said the legislation should never impact Macon County.

"This budget provision was specifically targeted to the problems Charlotte-Mecklenburg School system and outlying suburbs have been experiencing the last few years," said Senator Davis. "I do not see it being adopted anywhere else, especially in the rural west."

Macon County Democrat candidate and public school teacher Bobby Kuppers, who is facing off against Republican Senator Jim Davis this November in the Senate, said he doesn't support the legislation.

"I don't support the budget bill's provision allowing municipalities to fund their own charter schools," said Kuppers. "It looks like an attempt to shift a greater burden for school funding onto local governments, a measure that would almost certainly lead to dramatic property tax increases. Less wealthy municipalities and counties will disproportionately bear the brunt of these taxes. The General Assembly is required by the state constitution to provide for a free public education for our children. Privatizing or forcing municipalities and counties to pick up the state's share of the load is just wrong."

Representative Kevin Corbin said that he supported the bill as it pertains to Charlotte-area schools but wouldn't support the same measure for his district.

"We have excellent public schools here in Macon County and throughout my district so if this legislation was something for here, I wouldn't support it," he said. "But for the towns it was written for, those leaders would like to see more options in terms of education and I understand that."

Rep. Corbin said that while the current legislation specifically names only four towns, it does open the door for other towns to ask the legislation for consideration in the future.

the state has steadily increased, and Macon County is no different. In Macon County, 80 percent of all foster care cases involve circumstances where the parent/caretaker is battling some sort of substance abuse issue.

But luckily, through the Title 1 program, both homeless students and children in foster care receive special services during the school year to ensure those children stay on track with the rest of their classmates.

“We are an extra set of eyes on those children and provide services, anything from transportation to clothing to those who need it,” said Carol Arnold, a consultant for Macon County Schools who is in charge of the district’s Title I program.

Title I schools are schools that get financial assistance through a federal program due to the school having a high percentage of students coming from low-income families.

Eight out of Macon County’s 11 schools, including Highlands School are considered Title I schools, meaning they receive Title I funds for students.

Title I is designed to support state and local school reform efforts tied to the challenging state academic standards to reinforce and amplify efforts to improve teaching and learning for students farthest from meeting state standards.

In addition, the Title I program helps to provide both homeless students and foster children with essentials for school such as backpacks, pens and paper. Beyond that, Arnold said a clothing closet is maintained at the central office to help ensure that children have season-appropriate clothing.

“We also want to make sure that these students feel like they can match up with their peers,” said Arnold, “wearing what their friends are wearing, for instance.”

According to Arnold, students are considered homeless if they are living in motels or hotels, living in cars, parks, or public spaces, or living in a migratory situation that lacks an adequate nighttime residence.

In addition, students may be considered homeless if multiple families are sharing one home because one of the families lost their residence.

In Macon County Arnold says the system initiates extras, too. “If their class is going on a field trip like many of them do at the end of the year, we want to make sure those children have the money to go,” she said.

Over the last three years, Arnold said both the number of homeless students and foster students has increased in Macon County. During the 2015-2016 school year, Macon County recorded 41 homeless students. The following year there were 47 and last year the number jumped to 59. The increase can be attributed to a number of different reasons and there is no one cause. The only thing for certain is that Macon County has more homeless and foster students today than three years ago.
China’s evolving communist leadership and the future of Hong Kong offered at CLE

On Monday, August 20 (Time: 10a-12p) the Center for Life Enrichment is offering a lecture on a very timely topic: China’s Evolving Communist Leadership and the Future of Hong Kong. With the tariffs and ensuing trade war a daily news topic, this is an excellent opportunity to hear professor Clifton Pannell, Ph.d. of University of Chicago, delve into the current governmental policies of President-for-life, Xi Jinping. Dr. Pannell is emeritus Professor of Geography and Associate Dean of Arts and Sciences at the University of Georgia. His teaching and research focus on the economic, political and urban geography of China and East Asia.

Professor Pannell will offer insight into Xi’s consolidation of power over the past five years and how he has positioned himself to rule with near absolute power as he pursues his dream that China will become a major global power in the near future and will dominate the western Pacific and Eurasia.

Dr. Pannell will also elaborate on the future of Hong Kong, after being relinquished by the British in 1997. To date under the leadership of Xi, China has consistently stripped Hong Kong of its autonomy and freedoms granted with the British handover in 1997. Currently, the long-term outlook for Hong Kong appears to be an ever stronger integration into the Chinese policy that will render it difficult for it to maintain its identity as a special city open to the global economy and community.

For more information or to register for this event please call 526-8811. Cost is $25 members/$35 nonmembers, walk-ins are welcome. The lecture will be held in the CLE lecture hall located in the lower level of the Peggy Crosby Center.

Sponsored by Highlands Mountaintop Rotary, the shows are FREE and located at K-H Founders Park in downtown Highlands, NC on Pine St. from 10 to 5.

The Village Square shows have attracted a multitude of artisans of the highest caliber from western NC, northeastern Georgia, and western SC for 13 years now. Each show brings new talent and mediums.

Of particular note, Sky Valley artist Patty Calderone will create a large bear painting at the show. A silent auction for it will benefit the B.E.A.R. Task Force and its efforts to educate the public about living in bear country.

Food is always a big part of the show, with Dr. John’s tacos offered by Rotary and the Courtyard Cafe in the Village Square next to the park.

HCP to present ‘The Odd Couple’

On Thursday, August 23, Highlands Cashiers Players brings something old that is new to the PAC Theater. Neill Simon’s The Odd Couple opens for a 2-week run August 23-26 and August 30 – Sept. 2.

The Odd Couple is acknowledged as one of Neill Simon’s best comedies. Made into a movie with Walter Mathau and Jack Lemon, the story is about Felix, whose wife has left him and who is contemplating suicide. His friends sense his depression and one of them, Oscar, volunteers to take him in until he is fine again.

The two of them are like chalk and cheese - Oscar is fun-loving, gregarious and slovenly, Felix is a shy, stay-at-home, obsessive-compulsive neat-freak. Being around Oscar brightens Felix up, but he quickly starts to irritate Oscar. This lighthearted comedy is a favorite with audiences.

Tanj Marshall, a veteran PAC actor and director, will be directing this delightful comedy that includes David Spivey, Lance Trudel, Michael lanzilotta, Ricky Siegel, Craig Eister, Joe Lazow, Betsy Miller and Ronnie Spilton.

Tickets may be purchased at the Box Office starting on Aug.9 at 828-526-8084 or select your seats online at highlandschasiersplayers.org.

When buying and selling real estate, you need to verify certain things about the property before the transaction has been completed. Look at the deed of property you’re considering, and it doesn’t hurt to look at the deed of property you’re selling, to refresh your memory.

EASEMENTS

There are at least two kinds:

1) GROSS EASEMENTS allow you to use the land without ownership, and the easement belongs to the homeowner needing the easement (not the property owner). This easement will pass to the next property owner, but the limitations of the easement is usually controlled by the property owner and can change.

2) APPURTESTANT EASEMENT joins land together and transfers with the property the easement is on when the property is conveyed. One property is called a servient property while the other is the dominant property. It’s not rocket science to figure out if you are the owner of the servient property, your land use is determined by the dominant property.

RIGHTS-OF-WAY

This allows another to pass through your property. Anyone can pass through your land via a rights-of-way, and it’s considered a public right of way.

The effects of these two encumbrances could determine your use of the property.

What can you do? Several things. Ask your Realtor for help first, but go ahead and do some digging on your own.

First of all, whether you’re buying or selling, it’s a good thing to get a SURVEY, or if there is an existing survey, have it updated. Just because the seller said there have been no changes to the property since they’ve owned it, the surrounding properties could have made changes unknown to the seller.

We’ve seen decks that have had to be partially removed because half of it was on a neighboring property, a few feet of the edge of an addition to a home had to be cut back, gazebos torn down, fences moved, etc.

Another thing you can do is go to the county website and look up the deed of the property. There’s a lot of boiler plate language used like: Together with the improvements thereon, and the rights, privileges, and appurtenances, belonging thereto, (it may go on to include known easements, etc. But wait, there’s more!) Subject however to enforceable (a) covenants, restrictions and easements of record, (b) easements for roads or utilities shown on property plat, (c) easements for public or private road or utilities, rights of way not of record, (d) zoning restrictions or other regulations imposed by government authorities (e) liens for real estate taxes not yet due and payable. (There could be more). Did you catch that part in (e) not of record? That’s right, a recorded deed is a wonderful thing, but it can’t encompass everything, that’s what attorneys are for, more on that later.

While we’re talking about rights-of-way, it’s a good time to bring up fences. In the Robert Frost poem, Mending Wall, the neighbor stated “Good fences make good neighbors,” but the poet wondered further “Before I built a wall I’d ask to know, what I was walling in or walling out, and to whom I was like to give offence.” Wouldn’t it be great if we all pondered those questions before building?

According to NOLO.com, NC doesn’t have a specific law regarding boundary fences, but there IS usually a local town ordinance or zoning restriction. Always check with local authorities before going to the expense of constructing a fence or wall, or even adding a driveway.

Now, that promise to say something about attorneys. I’m not one. What I’ve typed here is information gleaned from different internet sources and my own imaginative mind. My words will not help you in a court of law, trust me on that one. Please seek professional legal advice concerning rights-of-way disputes, survey disputes, boundary disputes, just about any dispute for that matter.

Remember, a little kindness goes a long way. It’s easy to get riled up when you think you’ve been taken advantage of by a neighbor or municipality. There’s a way to stand your ground without becoming a doormat.

In the olden days, before so many rules and regulations were involved, consider this local history note, circa 1930s: There was a man on Billy Cabin Road who was building a fence. When the neighbor asked “Why are you putting this fence a foot over on your side of the property?” The man replied, “What’s a foot between friends.”

recession,” said Kuppers.

The Republican and Democrat candidates are espousing the same issues, but Kuppers’ and Price’s solutions are diametrically opposed to Davis’ and Meadows’ hardline GOP rhetoric. Kuppers and Price claim that rhetoric hasn’t helped “normal working people” in Western North Carolina much in the past decade.

“What was wrong in 2008 is still wrong in 2018,” said Kuppers.

Education, the opioid crisis, Medicaid expansion, health care, jobs, infrastructure including broadband expansion, are the topics high on the list of “musts” for Kuppers and Price.

“These guys [Davis and Meadows] want to stay in their seats for the long-term. I want to get in and get stuff done now. I can’t wait for something to happen. I’m ready to pummel a good idea and get it done in the next two or three terms at the most.”

Education – Kuppers said sure, Davis and the NC Republican-run Senate gave teachers raises but the insurance premiums are eating it up.

“Raleigh gives with one hand and takes away with the other,” he said. “North Carolina used to be a pillar in the nation when it came to education, now we rank 39, worse than Mississippi. That’s just not right.”

Kuppers has been teaching high school civics and coaching basketball and football for 18-years so he knows what teachers do and what they need.

He said House Bill 514, which was written into the state’s 2018-’19 budget to allow municipalities to use local tax proceeds to fund education, is just another way for North Carolina’s GOP-run House and Senate to shed their responsibility to fund public education. (see “Local taxes could fund public schools” on page 1).

“That’s a slippery slope. Maybe Highlands could afford to do that, but not Franklin. Then you have schools that aren’t equal,” said Kuppers.

He also said college tuition must be addressed.

“Sure you can now go to Western Carolina University for $500 a semester but there are so many hidden costs it’s more expensive than ever.”

He also said the minimum wage has to be addressed if young people are expected to be a viable part of communities in the state.

But his passion for public education is his second career. His first was a 25-year stint with the U.S. Submarine Service from which he retired in 2000. He was Chief of Staff for NATO’s Submarine Force Eastern Atlantic in Northwood, United Kingdom, and later Commanding Officer of the Trident Training Facility in Kings Bay, GA.

“We in the military know how to get things done. We figure out the mission and we get it done,” he said. “We know what it means to represent something bigger than ourselves. And that’s what I intend to do at the state level.”

The opioid crisis, Medicaid expansion and health care are related at this point in time in North Carolina.

“Medicaid expansion is good all the way around; even Republican Governor of Ohio John Kasich knows that!” he said. “He took the expansion and why shouldn’t we? We pay into it. Why should that money go to the states all around us that opted in?”

Medicaid expansion was part of President Obama’s path to affordable health care for all. Expanding the Medicaid income

Mountain Findings donates record $135,000

Setting a record for the amount of donations as well as the number of organizations receiving donations, volunteers voted to donate $135,000 to 44 charitable organizations in the Highlands area. These organizations touch all of our lives and having the ability to make these donations is the reason our volunteers dedicate their time to making Mountain Findings a success. We would be remiss not to thank all the people who donate to and shop at Mountain Findings. Give yourself a pat on the back because each of you are vital to our success.

LANDMARK REALTY GROUP ANNOUNCES NEW BROKER-IN-CHARGE AND GENERAL MANAGER, CAROL WILSON

Landmark Realty Group is pleased to announce that our new Broker-in-Charge at the Frank Allen Road office will be Carol Wilson. Carol has been with Landmark as a broker since 2014. In addition, she will assume responsibility of General Manager for Landmark Realty Group across the Plateau. She will focus on the company’s growth and future as well as providing resources for the continued success for each individual broker.

Prior to joining Landmark and moving from Charlotte over five years ago, she held a variety of management and leadership positions as well as owning her own company in England.

This is an exciting opportunity for Carol. She will be leading Landmark Real Estate Sales and Vacation Rentals along with its dedicated employees and brokers to reach new levels of success on the Plateau. Even though her real estate path is taking a slightly different direction, she will continue to be a resource for all her past, present and future clients and friends.

Landmark has got you covered on all points of the compass - Cashiers to Glenville and Lake Toxaway to Highlands along with the local knowledge and professionalism which keeps us the #1 real estate company on the Plateau.

guidelines enabled those who made too much money to be covered by Medicaid but too little to afford a comprehensive health plan, to get medical coverage.

Not taking advantage of the expansion has shifted millions to other states and forced people to seek medical attention at emergency rooms. By law, emergency services must be provided to anyone who walks through the door whether they can pay for services or not. This, of course, has put a huge financial burden on North Carolina medical facilities forcing them to close their doors or consolidate.

Kuppers said even the opioid crisis could be alleviated somewhat if people who now fall through the Medicaid hole had coverage for medical care and rehabilitation services.

Though it’s not perfect, systematically disassembling the Affordable Care Act on the federal level further affects the overall health of North Carolina.

This is an issue Price and Kuppers hammer home.

Federal employees – congressmen and senators included – currently have the Gold ACA plan for which the federal government provides a 72 percent subsidy which means employees pay approximately 28 percent of their annual healthcare premiums through pre-tax payroll deductions.

During the mark-up of the ACA bill, lawmakers inserted a provision (Section 1312(d)(3)(D)) that required members of Congress and designated congressional staff members to obtain their health insurance through ACA exchanges – like everyone else – rather than continue to receive their healthcare coverage through the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program (FEHBP). If the Affordable Care Act is repealed, members of Congress have a fallback plan. They would be able to return to the FEHBP which is an even sweeter plan.

For Kuppers and Price jobs are tied to on-the-ground infrastructure, which is disintegrating across the region and nation but also to tech jobs which require broad-
Silence, please

Archbishop John Erbelding

In today’s busy world there rarely seems to be any time for a quiet moment alone. And, when we do find it, many of us seem frightened at the sound -- or lack of sound -- and seek to change it. When we walk into an empty room often the first thing we reach for is the TV control. We tend to choke our solitude with music, or talk, or sounds to which we don’t even listen. It’s there simply to fill a vacuum; and, when it’s gone, we become nervous at its absence.

It may be time to learn again to be alone, to re-experience the quality of solitude, to allow life with all its fullness to rush back into our consciousness. To be alone and to think deeply about one’s own life is important to our personal sense of well-being. It’s part of the process of developing a well-defined personal philosophy of life.

Most of us would probably agree that we would like a few undisturbed minutes but somehow just can’t find the time. Perhaps the trick is to schedule some time alone each day, even if it’s just for a quarter of an hour. And it doesn’t have to be in some dark corner. You can be alone with your thoughts in a park, in a museum, in a house of worship, or in a library. You can be alone while soaking in the tub, knitting a sweater, or working in the woodshop or in the garden. The important thing is to share a moment with yourself: undistrurbed by the rush of other’s demands and interests, the unending stream of emails that clutter our lives. Our first duty in our silence should be to listen and follow the command of Psalm 46:10: “Be still and know that I am God.”

Lives built around a daily moment of solitude seem to have a greater comfort zone in dealing with daily challenges. They have an eternal perspective to help meet daily pressures. They have a greater comfort zone in dealing with daily challenges. They have an eternal perspective to help meet daily pressures. There’s a rest in knowing that we’re not alone.

Perhaps the most important reward of solitude is that it keeps us in touch with spiritual values. When we lose the light of Christ, we lose the purpose of life; and when the purpose of living is forgotten, the universe becomes meaningless.

If we are serious about understanding ourselves and our purpose in this existence, then we need to find time to think about it. We should not be afraid of the quiet in our lives, but cherish it and use it as a tool in assessing where we are along life’s eternal road.

I would like to be able to reach out to you through this page and ask you to walk once again with me in the Cloisters retreat on a Sunday afternoon of dappled sunlight or sit in the Monastery of the Holy Spirit, the faint sound of distant men’s voices singing Gregorian chants and now in our new-jointed souls repeat, “Be still and know that I am.”

band expansion which currently requires public and private partnerships. Most private companies aren't interested in rural WNC.

“The government is making this difficult. I met someone last week who had moved to Western North Carolina but was leaving because he couldn't work without reliable broadband,” said Kuppers.

Asked how he could get the vote Kuppers said he and Price need young voters, unaffiliated voters and voters in the military.

“We have to give young people and people who are unaffiliated a reason to vote. We have to go where they are, meet them on their turf and we have to be blunt with them. We have to tell them we need them to vote.”

Kuppers said there are 1,600 young registered voters in Macon County and he has probably taught 500 of them and coached 200.

He said he believes he and Price have a chance to win with those numbers.

“This November is about turnout. It's not about me or Jim Davis, it's about you the voters, the kids in the classroom and it's not even about the next election; it's bigger than that ... it's about the next day, week and year.”
