Heavy wet snow wreaked mayhem this weekend in Highlands

No one knows if this is an emerging pattern or just coincidence, but winter storm Diego dropped up to 14 inches in Highlands and Cashiers Saturday through Monday, Dec. 8-10, mimicking winter storm Benji that dropped 15 inches of snow in 2017, Dec. 7-9.

“The biggest difference between this event and others in the past that I have seen is how heavy the snow was this time,” said Fire Chief Ryan Gearhart. “Roofs and awnings collapsing, rhodos weighed down onto the roads.”

Citizens in various areas of town and outside the town limits – which are under Duke’s or Haywood’s purview – were without power for 12 hours or more just to have it come on and go out again over the three-day period.

“When power went out again today [Monday] after having just recovered from not having power for 12 hours, I just cried,” said one citizen who lives in town. “I can camp on the ground in a tent and climb six miles up to stay in a cabin without facilities, but I was just miserable during this storm.”

“Slick roads and ice accumulated on trees and limbs that broke off caused outages at a rate almost faster than crews could fix them,” said Public Service Director Lamar Nix.

To help, Nix hired two contract electric crews who arrived Sunday.

“As of Monday morning, power was back on for some while crews continue to work on the rest,” he said.

Gearhart said his department’s calls ran the gamut of downed trees,

The Literacy Council has a new home

Thanks to its successful programs, the Literacy Council has outgrown its space in the Peggy Crosby Community Center. Its new home will be in the old post office building in Highlands Plaza next to Bryson’s Food Store.

At the beginning of 2017, The Literacy Council underwent new management. Each program was carefully evaluated and restructured to ensure effectiveness and a strong impact for its participants. The newly structured programs proved to be incredibly successful.

Highlands and Blue Zones

At the November Town Board meeting, commissioners gave the nod to exploring the possibility of Highlands becoming a Blue Zones Community®

What’s a Blue Zones Community®? It’s literally a happy place where people eat healthy, exercise, enjoy their friends and community and live productively to a ripe old age.

Specifically, it’s an area in which citizens, schools, employers, restaurants, grocery stores, and community leaders come together to optimize residents’ longevity and well-being by impacting environment, policy, and social networks – which makes healthy choices easier.

Blue Zones founder Dan Buettner is a National Geographic Fellow and New York Times best-seller.
This past weekend we were all victims of that frustrating winter storm. Our town electric crews were the most frustrated. With the constant falling trees, limbs and power poles, they struggled to keep the power lines intact. One line was put back up another would fall. I want to thank them for all their hard work and long hours of service. Their work is dangerous, especially in storm conditions, and I always worry about their safety. I also want to thank all the town crews and staff that worked beyond the normal call of duty during this unique winter storm.

Tonight we have a Town Board meeting at the Highlands Community Center next to the ball field. The meeting begins at 7 pm with an opening public comment period.

The board will hold a public hearing concerning a loan to finance the construction of the aerial portion of the fiber optic network. After this hearing, the town will seek permission from the NC Local Government Commission to take out the loan. The loan and approval process will take several months before construction can begin.

The board will hear a report from Cassie Wilson of Martin and Starnes Associates concerning the annual town audit. That audit has also been sent to the Local Government Commission where their accountants will review and analyze the town audit and finances.

Lamar Nix, Director of Public Works, will make a recommendation that the town hire through DOT the paving company who has the state contract to pave Main and 4th streets. While here, the contractor would also pave a section of 5th Street and Carolina Way. The town was already planning to pave these streets. Hiring the state contractor to do this work while paving the state projects should save money for the town.

The board will review the tree planning proposal for the center section of Main Street. This project has been in development for several months with the design changing over a series of meetings. The latest plan is a sealed down design that has DOT approval.

In my report, I will review the North Carolina Attorney General’s statement concerning the Mission HCA sale and the creation of the Dogwood Health Trust that was issued last week. Stein stated his office would carefully review all aspects of the Mission Health system – including Highlands Mayor Pat Taylor and Franklin Mayor Bob Scott – are pushing for more assurances that their communities won’t be shortchanged if the system’s proposed sale to HCA Healthcare goes through.

I recently wrote AG Stein outlining my recent experience at H-C Hospital as it pertained to ambulance wait-time.

I sent him the Oct 25 issue in which I published the letter I sent to HC Hospital President/CNO Jackie Medland, MC Emergency Services Director Warren Cabe, MC Commission Chair Jim Tate, MC Commission Vice Chair Ronnie Beale, HC Hospital Foundation Board Member Sam Lucas, MC Manager Derek Roland and Mayor Pat Taylor on Wednesday, Oct. 17 pertaining to the woeeful access to ambulance service in Highlands.

Hoping AG Stein will step up

Mayor AG Stein will step up

AG Stein can demand sustainable healthcare

I also sent him the Nov. 1 edition where many letters-to-the-editor told of similar experiences and expressed concerns regarding timely, quality health services available at the H-C Hospital.

The purpose of my letter was not to reiterate what happened to me, but rather, using it as an example, suggest that he insist that the surgical unit Mission shut down at H-C Hospital more than five years ago be reopened at least as an ER surgical unit. Such a move would mean money for the hospital which would likely guarantee its future.

I wrote in part:
“The mayor says he doesn’t want services to deteriorate – unfortunately, they already have. I am writing to see if you have any leverage to reverse the process as part of the HCA/Mission deal.

“I recently had an emergency appendectomy – which ended up being a burst appendix.

“Once I got to the place of treatment, all went well. That isn’t the issue.

“The issue is once diagnosed, I had to wait three hours for an ambulance to take me 20 miles down the mountain to Angel Medical Center in Franklin where ‘little’ surgeries are now done.

“The reason for this is about five years ago, Mission closed the surgical unit in Highlands. Angel in Franklin or Mission in Asheville are now the only options for surgeries.

“After waiting three hours for an ambulance, I then had to endure the 35-minute ride down the mountain in the ambulance, only to wait another two hours for the on-call surgical team to reconvene at Angel.

While waiting for an ambulance in Highlands, the ER doctor was fuming ... begging for transport ... and said if he at least had an ER surgery unit in Highlands, I could have been in and out.

business. So, it was obviously a money thing.

“However, HCA has lots of money and Highlands and Cashiers are different places now.

“Perhaps you could stipulate that for communities in Western NC like Highlands and Cashiers where ambulances have to navigate curvy, mountain roads in all kinds of weather to get to a surgical unit … and if there is a hospital in those communities capable of housing an ER surgical unit … HCA should make it operational.

“It would be a win-win. Citizens would have better access to healthcare and small, rural hospitals could become a financial asset to HCA which would likely guarantee their long-term existence.

“This would alleviate the load for the EMS departments’ ambulance fleet in rural, mountainous counties and would endear people to HCA and their local hospital.”

AG Stein responded to my letter saying such feedback ensures he hears the full range of issues and the correspondence will be included in his file to assist in the thorough review of the proposed acquisition.

On Nov. 27, Mission Health responded to my Oct 17 letter saying everything regarding my case was done by procedure. That though the HC Foundation purchased the ambulance, it was “to ensure those in their homes in Macon County wouldn’t need to experience extended wait times to reach emergency care.”

The changes we need at H-C Hospital involve – on some level – the reinstatement of services; particularly an ER surgical unit which would clearly bring money in, alleviate at least some of the stress put on the Macon and Jackson counties EMS ambulance fleets and most importantly, would ensure needed services at our local hospital for the citizens of both Highlands and Cashiers.

County can only do so much with the fleet of ambulances he has at his command, taking care of a county the size of Macon. For instance, due to mountainous terrain it takes two hours to drive from Highlands at the eastern end of the county to Nantahala at the western end.

“Five years ago, when Mission closed the surgery unit, Highlands was a different place. Now there are more full-time residents than ever before, second-home residents staying 6-8 months and visitors staying Thursday through Sunday year-round.

“All of these people are potential patients. Not to mention those in Cashiers.

“My primary care physician said people usually only have to wait an hour and half for an ambulance – which I say is still too long, and that doesn’t include the 35-minute drive down the mountain.

“If we can’t have an ambulance at our disposal up here on the top of this expensive, affluent mountain town, then we at least need an ER surgical unit for ‘little’ surgeries which could be manned with on-call personnel, just like at Angel, if necessary.

“Furthermore, the lack of dependable ambulance service is now affecting the real estate industry, which besides tourism, fuels Highlands’ economy, which in turn fills Macon County’s coffers.

“A man came to my office and told me that three of his friends, who bought into Highlands years ago, are selling and leaving because now that they are older and more in need of dependable hospital services, they aren’t available without traveling long distances. When they bought in, they were.

“Something needs to be done.

“Perhaps you can help in some way.

“When Mission closed the surgical unit, it did so because it said there wasn’t enough business. So, it was obviously a money thing.

“However, HCA has lots of money and Highlands and Cashiers are different places now.

“Perhaps you could stipulate that for communities in Western NC like Highlands and Cashiers where ambulances have to navigate curvy, mountain roads in all kinds of weather to get to a surgical unit … and if there is a hospital in those communities capable of housing an ER surgical unit … HCA should make it operational.

A cross on a Christmas tree is unheard of

It’s the most wonderful time of the year — to be offended.
Leave aside the well-meaned arboreal advice and the culture-war kerfuffle and ask the obvious question: When has anyone, ever, put a cross on top of their Christmas tree? Surely, it’s almost always a star — the Star of Bethlehem. Or secondly, an angel.
As an arch reactionary, I am sorry that the town caved in to a small faction who seem to know what makes them mad but know nothing about the history of Christmas or how it’s been celebrated in Highlands.
My first job was working at my mom’s Christmas Tree shop in Highlands, c. 1978. Nobody ever asked for a cross to put on top of their tree.
When I worked on the conservative editorial and arts pages of a large national newspaper, I reviewed books and museum exhibitions exploring the history of Christmas in the U.S., and also contributed calendar listings focused on Christmas celebrations around the country. I don’t recall a single cross-capped tree. I’m not claiming it has never happened, just that it must be very, very, rare. Let peace return to our town.
South Carolina author William Gilmore Simms (who was in awe of our “highlands” plateau) described the healing powers of the season in his 1852 plantation novel “The Golden Christmas:” “Everybody was becoming amiable. Care was kicked under the table, and lay crouching there, silent and trembling, like a beaten hound, not daring to crunch even his own bones aloud.”

““We are so excited to be moving to our new building,” said Bonnie Potts, Executive Director of The Literacy Council. “There is a very large need in our community for free educational services and we are thrilled that we will be able to accommodate more students and grow our programs. We are very grateful to the Peggy Crosby Center for their years of support.”

New programs will include adult workshops such as a financial literacy class and a nutritional workshop. Financial literacy will teach participants how to create budgets, pay off debt, and save for the future. Nutritional literacy will focus on healthy eating habits and how to prepare quick and healthy meals.

For more information about The Literacy Council’s move, please contact Bonnie Potts at bpotts@maconcliteracy.org.

The Highlands Literacy Council is leaving PCC

Changes are occurring at the Peggy Crosby Center (PCC). As a reminder, the Mission of PCC is to provide affordable office space to organizations offering community services.

This month the Literacy Council of Highlands (LCH) will be leaving PCC for a larger space that better suits LCH’s ongoing mission and operations. PCC and LCH have been together for 20 years; and LCH’s departure is sad for PCC, but very gratifying that a tenant-partner is growing to serve more Highlands residents.

PCC and LCH have been meeting and discussing LCH’s space needs since March. This led to proposals that PCC hoped would allow LCH to remain at PCC. However, LCH has determined that they require larger and more flexible space than this 70-year-old building can achieve.

LCH is expanding the number of people they are serving and desires to allow their clients (especially the students) a more relaxed, less formal environment than can be attained in a multi-tenant property.

LCH requested that PCC give them a six-month lease to July, 2019. PCC operates on an annual break-even budget, keeping rents as low as possible for all tenants. Losing tenants mid-year would cause PCC to have to re-evaluate the rents we charge all PCC’s tenants. PCC did offer LCH a one-year lease for 2019, as PCC does all tenants. One year leases are uncommon in real estate properties; but PCC feels this is part of its mission, allowing tenants to expand or contract annually as needs change. This does create financial risk for PCC, but is important in achieving our mission.

If PCC has vacant spaces requiring construction, PCC needs the renovations to occur in the winter when Highlands’ contractors are more available to timely meet construction deadlines. This allows PCC to have spaces ready quickly and replace lost income as soon as possible.

When PCC realized that LCH’s best alternatives would not include PCC, its Board developed plans that will not require PCC to raise rents. These plans could be implemented in January, 2019 or 2020. LCH has decided to move this year.

PCC is allocating $65,000 of reserves to renovate LCH’s spaces and absorb rent loss. Hopefully this is a worst-case scenario. Meanwhile, PCC’s other planned and unapproved projects are on hold until PCC has better knowledge of funds availability.

PCC has been proud to have LCH as a tenant-partner and to serve an organization which serves others in the ways LCH has and will. Based upon rents LCH has been paying, PCC believes it has been LCH’s biggest supporter. PCC determined it has been saving LCH in rent and other costs at least $40,000 to $50,000 per year.

If you know of organizations who have space needs, please have them contact PCC at (828)526-9938. PCC needs to refill the LCH spaces very quickly.

Thanks to the Literacy Council of Highlands and all PCC tenant-partners for creating the PCC community. Please join all of us in wishing the Literacy Council of Highlands continued success in serving the Highlands community.

downed power lines and stuck vehicles.

The traffic lights at 4th and Main streets were damaged when a tree limb broke off and hit them on the way down, causing them to hang precariously.

Nix said NC DOT fixed them Monday.

The most visible destruction is at the Performing Arts Center on Chestnut Street and the lumber shed behind Reeves Hardware where heavy snow caused “mayhem” just like on the Allstate commercial.

According to PAC Director Mary Adair Trumbly the destruction and collapsed porte cochere will be cleared away in time for the Highlands Cashiers Players Holiday Program tonight, Thursday.

According to Cindy Trevathan, on the Building Committee of the PAC Board, their insurance agent has been contacted and plans to rebuild are in the works.

“After talking to our architect Paul Schmitt, our plan is to repair it incorporating the new design so work on it won’t be done twice,” she said.

As per the architectural plans for the new complex, the porte cochere will be a little higher and a different shape.

Jim Luke, manager of Reeves Hardware said they are still assessing damage.

“This happened Sunday. No one was in it. At this point, there is no timeframe on repairs,” he said.

Like the PAC, the structure in the building lot behind Reeves was scheduled to be completely renovated this coming year.

Temperatures are rising during the day now, so the snow and ice are melting but once night falls and temperatures drop below 32 degrees there are icy roads to contend with in the morning.

Macon County Schools were closed or delayed Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday due to forecasted snow and icy roads in the morning which meant buses couldn’t run.

selling author. He founded Blue Zones to put the world's best practices in longevity and well-being to work in people's lives. He and his doctor brother Tony envision Blue Zones across the country and the world.

Mayor Pat Taylor first brought up the subject in his "Mayor on Duty" column a few months back. He heard Dan Buettner speak at a League of Municipality meeting and the concept inspired him.

Sally Taylor, ex-Highlands School art teacher and wife of Mayor Pat Taylor, introduced the philosophy to commissioners asking only that they allow her to take the steps to investigate what it would take for Highlands to make the grade – and to agree to Phase 1 which is sitting for a 2-hour presentation by Buettner.

Phase 1 won't cost the town anything – she has been donated the funds for Buettner's speaking fee. Phase 2 includes a two-day examination of Highlands to see where improvements can be made which is where funds from the town would be needed if the town chose to implement Blue Zones suggestions.

Sally said she isn't sure what the group would suggest for Highlands because she and the mayor said Highlands is ahead of the game compared to other areas. There are sidewalks throughout town, the Greenway, hiking trails, a vibrant spiritual community and places to exercise, play and gather.

“But this is just a lifestyle adopted by the whole community … whose benefits are measurable,” said Sally. “There is an increase in well-being, lower health care costs, improved productivity in people because they feel better, and people are motivated by friends and family. Our community could become an innovator in preventative health.”

According to Buettner, when community comes together, it creates permanent changes which can be measured by the Gallup Healthwise Well Being Index. However, at least 25,000 people are needed to participate – which is why Sally is reaching out to communities beyond Highlands envisioning a Blue Zone region to include Franklin, Cashiers and Sylva.

Metrics used to judge happiness include residents having trust (in their police, neighbors, and local government); good walkability and people-friendly design (sidewalks and safe streets); access to nature (parks, open spaces, trees); civic engagement; clean environment; access to affordable dental care; access to healthy food; and high rates of healthy behaviors (restrictions on smoking, less drug abuse, less obesity).

Specifically, Blue Zones Communities put family ahead of other concerns, they smoke less, are semi-vegetarianism where the majority of food consumed is derived from plants; moderate alcohol intake, especially wine; there is constant moderate physical activity which is considered an inseparable part of life; social engagement where people of all ages are socially active and integrated into their communities; engagement in spirituality or religion; and legumes are commonly consumed.

According to Dr. Clark with the HC Hospital Foundation, a potential stakeholder in the movement, this lifestyle leads to longer lifespans and less healthcare costs.

Princess Puddin’s search for snuggle spots

With the temps cooling down, it was time for me to search for the best winter snuggle spots. Heaven forbid I be unprepared for cold weather. When the temps are warm, I can be found in plain sight stretched out on the wood floor or atop the back of Mum’s recliner, where I can swish my tail across her face while I look out the front door. For cooler temps, I need new spots.

If the mood strikes, I may recline on one of the couches, and I may even curl up in one of the kitty beds perfectly positioned in the middle of each one. Frankly, I much prefer to lie between the kitty bed and the couch pillows, though Mum is never happy with that scenario. “Puddin’,” she fusses as she picks me up and places me in a round fleece bed, “Why can’t you get in your bed?” She doesn’t seem to understand the attraction of lying on a clean couch cushion, and she’s none too pleased when I hop right back onto the couch.

I know all about couches and kitty beds, so I did my Goldilocks act to find additional snuggle spots. Mum says a girl can never have too many shoes; I say a kitty can never have too many snuggle spots.

The first one I tried was a kitty size basket next to the hearth. I spent lots of time there last winter when the wood burning stove was going. It’s nice and toasty, and it’s ideally positioned so I can lift my head to see Mum, Dad, and Lord Banjo. When I know all is well, I drop my pretty kitty face back into snooze position for another few hours, unless of course I notice someone head for the kitchen or Mum go to her office, where the kitty treats are hidden.

Next, I found a new perch in a basket of comfy throws hidden at the end of a couch. It took Mum a while to find her office, where the kitty treats are hidden.

The third spot was the large metal log holder on the hearth. I spent lots of time there last winter when the wood burning stove was going. It’s nice and toasty, and it’s ideally positioned so I can lift my head to see Mum, Dad, and Lord Banjo. When I know all is well, I drop my pretty kitty face back into snooze position for another few hours, unless of course I notice someone head for the kitchen or Mum go to her office, where the kitty treats are hidden.

I’ve gone back to it a few times, but I’m not yet sure it’s a keeper. “Mum,” I’ve meowed, “It would be way better to have another perch.” Mum says a girl can never have too many shoes; I say a kitty can never have too many snuggle spots.

The fourth spot was a comfy basket of twisted paper. “Mum,” I’ve meowed, “It would be way better to have another perch.” Mum says a girl can never have too many shoes; I say a kitty can never have too many snuggle spots.

The metal container is usually filled with lumpy, uncomfortable logs, so I’ve never tried it before. Right now, it’s filled with newspapers and some fun brown packing paper. I do love packing paper, especially the big twisted pieces that come in the Amazon boxes that seem to arrive daily. When a box full of twisted paper stays in the kitchen a few days, I burrow deep into it and purr.

It turns out the log holder is not a good spot because it shakes, rattles, and rolls when I climb in, and Mum hears the metal against the stone hearth. Okay, Okay, it doesn’t really roll. No matter what, it’s hard to enjoy a snuggle spot when it’s noisy. Still, it was fun to give it a try. For now, I’ve deemed my two comfy baskets, my kitty beds, and Mum and Dad’s laps the best cold weather choices. But a gal can always change her mind, right?

Princess Puddin’ Penn resides in Georgia with her dad, her mom Kathy Manus Penn, and her canine brother Lord Banjo. Please send comments, compliments, and questions to inkpen119@gmail.com. She appears in “Lord Banjo the Royal Pooch,” a book that can be found on Amazon, at Books Unlimited in Franklin, and at Mountain Paws.
As I write this there’s nearly a foot of snow on the ground in our little enclave east of town. The typically twenty-foot rhododendron separating our home from the Nantahala National Forest have been brought to their knees by the wet, heavy downpour. Our driveway is impassable, thanks to a neighbor’s tree, which saw fit to throw its branches up in surrender, secure in the knowledge, no doubt, that more snow is on the way.

Winter, formally, at least, is still nearly two weeks away. Welcome to our little slice of heaven.

Last year, on this very same weekend, we enjoyed … no, that’s the wrong word, experienced a similar seasonal event. Each year since we became full time residents of Highlands we have experienced at least one snow event that rendered even our beloved Subaru Outback, if not useless, then unnecessary, because we aren’t going anywhere.

Thanks to advances in meteorology television weathercasters seem to be able to more accurately predict when, where and how much snowfall, rainfall, winter mix-fall is going to, well, fall. This gives us ample time to prepare by, as the missus likes to put it, provisioning, from Bryson’s, Ingles, or wherever else we need to head to obtain whatever is necessary to feed us and her beloved backyard birds.

Oh, yes, dear readers. Again, as I write this, Mr. and Mrs. Redbird, a glorious eastern Towhee, two or three nuthatches, titmice, Carolina chickadees, and a whole gaggle of slate-colored Juncos are feeding from pieces of pottery set atop mounds of snow on the back deck. I’d call them a distraction, but they’re actually, in no particular order, a hoot, cackle, chirp and twitter. It’s as if they’ve convened a meeting of the local chapter of their POA just to keep us amused between the momentary power blips, interruptions of our satellite delivered television and the ability of our Internet provider to keep our connectivity up and running.

After nearly forty years of living in Florida, where serious bad weather events, hurricanes, for example, are typically louder, harsher and way more destructive, with the arrival of a foot of snow we get to enjoy a whole other level of beauty, quiet and peacefulness here among the trees, shrubs and yard litter. Of course, occasionally that yard litter comes in the form of the previously mentioned downed tree, which sometimes decides to knock down power lines, or otherwise disturb us from the, let’s call it quietude of a winter weather event.

Of course, we’re lucky. As retirees there’s very little on our calendars that can’t be moved to a day, date or time when conditions are more hospitable. For those Highlanders who must work, get to school, attend appointments with doctors, or with friends, or entertain relatives who want a taste of what we who live here have all the time, with all due respect, please do not underestimate the importance of paying attention to the conditions and the environment.

For those visiting the plateau, if you don’t have to go out during a significant to major snow event, don’t go out. Often, there’s ice underneath all that beautiful snow and I don’t care what you’re driving, no set of wheels is a match for ice. Just like those of questionable intelligence who decide a Category Three hurricane is a good time to break out your boogie board and ride some twelve to 15-foot waves, skiing or tobogganing down a hill or road that might or might not have speed bumps built into it promises to put a real damper on your Sunday afternoon.

This particular winter weather event doesn’t rise to the level of a blizzard, but then again, by Sunday night it wasn’t over. The ‘Weather’ tab on the website for the Highlands Newspaper, www.highlandsinfo.com, told us at least another couple of inches of the white stuff is heading our way Monday before giving way to rain, and then sunshine will render our world more friendly to all.

Those of us who are blessed to live here understand that winter weather is part of the price of admission. We tend to not mess with Mom Nature. We let her do as she will and then either deal with or simply enjoy whatever she decides to deliver.
