Compromise reached for Main Street

After commissioners nixed the NC DOT plan for beautifying Main Street that involved the center walkway and parallel parking, the Land Use Committee was asked to get with the agency to see if the town’s original plan could be resurrected. It involved curbed, tree planters set at the ends of a few center, diagonal parking spaces from 3rd to 5th streets.

Originally, NC DOT rejected the plan because the agency requires eight feet from a tree trunk to the travel-way on roads posted at 25 mph or less.

Cross topper compromise reached for town tree

For this year only, all faiths are invited to participate

Twice now in recent weeks a Facebook debate based on misinformation fueled a movement – this time to put a cross back on top of the town Christmas tree in K-H Founders Park. (The previous debate was about Main Street beautification plans.)

The cross was on the Christmas tree at the town lighting Saturday night but was removed and according to town officials, the symbol of the cross was not the reason.

Last year, the wind caught the star topper on the original Christmas tree in the park and snapped the top off – an action that affected the growth of the tree, said Town Manager Josh Ward. The tree suffered other problems as well, which is why a new tree was sought and planted elsewhere in the park.

Highlands 3rd highway marker goes up near Historical Village

Folks gathered along the roadside near the Highlands Historical Society on N. 4th Street last Tuesday morning for the unveiling of Highlands’ third NC Highway Historical Marker – which represents three of the 12 markers in Macon County – this one honoring Mary Lapham for her innovative method of curing tuberculosis. Historical Society Archivist Ran Shaffner said Lapham’s lung collapse therapy method resulted in helping hundreds of patients who were deemed lost causes. “Lapham was the first physician in the U.S. to adopt this treatment successfully,” he said.

Clarifying the Christmas Tree topper issue

Plans for the new town Christmas Tree began over a year ago. The tree was transported from Spruce Pine and replanted in the park in late winter. Professional arborists informed the parks and recreation committee that winter was the perfect time to relocate a large tree. Our staff and the committee were also advised not to trim the limbs of the tree, nor heavily decorate it this first year. Placing an ornament at the top of the lead branch this first year was not to be done.

The previous town tree had been topped with a star. During last year’s Christmas celebrations, high winds had caused the top to break out of the tree. The parks and recreation committee’s plan this year was not to place any ornament on top of this new tree since it has fragile first year growth.

When I arrived at the town lighting to see the cross ornament mounted on top of the tree, I was very dismayed and frustrated, not because it was a cross, but because the plan which had been in the making for months had not been followed. I feared we could be right back in a situation where the top branch of the new tree would be broken and future growth impaired. So, the removal of the cross on top of the town Christmas tree was not driven by animus toward any specific religious symbol. My discussions with the town manager at the town lighting that someone overheard, were in the context of why the original plan had not been followed, and who had arbitrarily decided to place the cross on top of this fragile tree. My response was out of frustration and momentary confusion. I apologize if anyone took offense.

My best information is that the self-fabricated cross was placed on the tree by a town employee after the tree had been officially decorated by the town crew. Apparently, he failed to understand that when the decision was made not to top the tree with the star owned by the town, that meant no topping whatsoever. The employee had no authorization to do what was done. I suspect if the cross had never been placed on the tree, this controversy would not have developed.

With that said, the group that held a vigil around the Christmas Tree on Monday night will be accepted. Views expressed are not necessarily those of Highlands Newspaper.
HIGHGATE, HIGHLANDS
Rise above it all at one of the highest altitudes in Highlands - the Highgate community. Nestled in this upscale private community within a four minute drive to downtown Highlands, this house will not disappoint. With relaxing wooded and long range mountain views, it is a true respite. The home boasts an open floor plan with high ceilings, five large bedrooms — each with a bath — and a lower level with separate deck. The main floor master suite has its own fireplace along with “his and hers” bathrooms. This home is wonderful for entertaining, easily flowing from the large screened porch with wood-burning fireplace into the well-appointed gourmet kitchen with separate “clean up” area. There is a lower level wine storage room. Professionally landscaped 2.12 acre lot with fire pit and plenty of parking for guests.

MLS# 89486 | Offered for $2,800,000

TRILLIUM LINKS & LAKE CLUB
This is not your normal country club home! Gorgeous four bedroom home with so much to offer: master on the main level, three fireplaces, lower level family room, wine cellar, guest room, and plenty of storage. The outdoor living space is wonderful and boasts a hot tub, a playhouse for the kids, and a yard that you could only dream of in the mountains. Fabulous amenities come with being a member of Trillium (golfing, pool, kids’ camp, immediate lake access, boat slips, croquet, indoor/outdoor tennis just to mention a few). Have dinner at the clubhouse, take in a round of golf, or just enjoy the day out on Lake Glenville, the lake with the highest elevation east of the Mississippi.

instead of eight. Nix said the maximum he could get with the desired design was five feet.
If the answer is no, then Nix said the other option was a tree planter or two, each in the middle of a parking space down the middle of each block – 3rd to 4th and 4th to 5th streets.
Unlike the preferred scenario, that design would severely shorten the spaces occupied by the trees – not take them away but make them more suitable for motorcycles or mini-cars, something Bob Mills of Nancys Fancys thought would be a good thing.
Though some don’t want any changes to Main Street, by the end of the 45-minute discussion everyone agreed a few extra trees on Main Street either at the ends of a few spaces or in the middle, if that is the only option … would be OK.
“I don’t think everyone is against a tree or two; I think it’s the overkill that got to everyone. I am still not for all those trees with curbing, but a tree or two, I would look at that,” said Commissioner Calloway who was originally adamantly opposed to changing the street.
Chamber member and Director of Marketing and Public Relations for OIEI Amanda Sullivan said she was glad a compromise had been reached.
“I love that we are coming to some sort of compromise where we have some green features down Main Street. This makes it easier to do some photography and market the downtown area in a visually compelling way,” she said. “I think what people have come around to is a viable solution if we can make it work. From a marketing perspective, I love the idea of being able to shoot a business across Main Street.

“Once the top snaps off, it just bushes out and never gets its shape back,” said Ward. “We want to be careful with this new tree until the top is strong enough to withstand the wind.”

At the advice of an arborist, the Rec Park Committee, made up of Commissioners Amy Patterson and Brian Stiehler, instructed the town not to put anything on the top of the new tree for at least a year.

However, Ward said while decorating the tree, the town’s electric crew thought something should be on top, so they put up a cross thinking the wind would pass around it rather than push against it.

Mayor Pat Taylor said when he saw the cross Saturday night, he was concerned – not because it was a cross, though he believes the star the town traditionally puts atop its tree is more ecumenical in nature – but because the town was instructed not to chance the top snapping off. That being said, the action was unauthorized.

“Obviously, people have misunderstood the reason for the removal of the cross; it was done to protect the tree,” said the mayor.

Commissioner Brian Stiehler, who is an agronomist and horticulturalist, and who was involved in the selection and placement of the new tree in the park, said it’s critical at this point not to do anything to destroy the shape of the tree from here on out.

“Once the top snaps off, it grows into a bush and isn’t a tree anymore,” he said.

Over the year, the new Christmas tree will be professionally trimmed and if it is strong enough next year, the star will likely be put on top.

*See CROSS page 8
“I hate that this has been blown up this way. It’s a big misunderstanding,” said Stiehler. “Even on the mayor’s weekly broadcast he told people not to expect anything on the top of the tree this year.”

Though some are saying taking the cross down is like taking “Christ” out of Christmas, there are others who prefer a star.

For many, the star represents the symbol of Advent – the coming of the Messiah – and the cross represents his death and resurrection.

Highlands, like most towns and cities is comprised of all kinds of people of all kinds of faiths – Jews, Catholics, Muslims, Buddhists, and a myriad of Protestant denominations. In any case, many relate to the star in an ecumenical way.

In fact, Commissioner Stiehler, who wasn’t at the tree lighting this year, got two calls later that night from citizens concerned that a cross was on the tree instead of the traditional star.

However, Monday night, about 30 people gathered in the park to peacefully protest the removal of the cross and requested it be put back on top of the tree.

Opening with the hymn Amazing Grace, Dr. Mark Ford, pastor of First Baptist Church Highlands, spoke to the crowd – many of whom were his parishioners.

“We are here on this cold night to declare that Christmas is about Christ who came for one reason; he came to show the love of God and to die for our sins.

“And because of that, we think this Christmas tree should have THE symbol of Christ on it which is the cross.

“I would declare to you as Christians, we have suffered enough and have been marginalized by society. We are seeing ourselves pushed to the margins by political correctness and by political institutions and even other religious institutions that basically want us to be quiet.

“I understand why. But I would say to you, as Christians we may get pushed to the margins, but we should go with the clear message that we believe in Jesus Christ and he is the reason for this season.

“We need to keep praying and expressing our sentiments. We are not here in any form of violence or any form of anger, we are here to say to our mayor and our town, please put the cross back on this tree because in this public square in this day I believe we have a right to have that cross up there.

“The explanation that was given to me by the mayor was that to put any kind of topper on the tree it may damage that tree. Because of that they were going to hold off putting any kind of topper up there, star or cross.

“And if that is the ‘legitimate’ reason, and the reason we can’t have anything up there because we are worried about the health of this tree, I would ask, if nothing else, bring it down a foot or two and put it out front and let the whole world still see that the reason for the symbols like Christmas trees and wreaths is because of Christ.

Appalachian Christmas Chorale is set for Dec 8 & 9

By Luke Osteen

This year’s Highlands Community Chorale’s Christmas performance, “An Appalachian Christmas: Traditions Old and New” is a calculated celebration of the musical heritage of this little corner of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

“It’s really the music that lies beneath our feet – these songs are in the soil and they pop up,” says Chorale Director Les Scott. “The sound we’re going to present isn’t bluegrass. Bluegrass came about in the 1940s. This is old-time music, plain and simple. It runs deep in this area and it resonates, even today.”

The songs performed for “An Appalachian Christmas” were spared the fate of fading from memory by the careful scholarship of John Jacob Niles. Roaming the Southern Appalachians in the 1920s and 30s, Niles would transcribe the songs that he heard in rural churches, mountain homes, and tent revivals. Thanks to his labors, many of these deeply spiritual songs have been celebrated around the world. Niles himself helped to foster their acceptance. His self-made dulcimers, he was always attired in white.

Niles himself helped to foster their acceptance. Also strengthening the Appalachian connection are the readings scattered throughout the evening. These include stories from people in the Foxfire community, and homilies from Dr. Fred Craddock, internationally-recognized theologian and pastor of Cherry Log Community Church, just outside of Blue Ridge, Georgia. Gospel readings are taken from Dr. Clarence Jordan’s “Cotton Patch Gospels,” a reverent retelling of the familiar Nativity accounts.

All the joyful voices, all the readings, all the universal themes embedded in the performance, are built upon an Appalachian orchestral sound created by Scott. “We’ll have guitars and banjos, fiddles, dulcimers, mandolins, a military drum, spoons and a washboard,” he says. “It’ll be a mountain sound, but it’ll full and rich and reverent, as you would have found it 100 years ago.”

Come celebrate the music of Christmas with the Chorale on Saturday, December 8, at 5 p.m. or on Sunday, December 9, at 5 p.m. at Highlands United Methodist Church, located at 315 Main Street. There’ll be a reception following the Sunday performance.

Admission is free, but donations are accepted. For more information, call (828) 526-3376.

Harris Regional accepting applications for 2019 Ascent Partnership nurse practitioner tuition support program

Harris Regional Hospital and Swain Community Hospital are joining Western Carolina University to announce a call for applicants for The Ascent Partnership nurse practitioner tuition support program for the 2019 fall semester start.

The Ascent Partnership is the formal relationship between WCU and the hospitals. In the partnership, the hospitals provide full tuition coverage each year for two selected nurse practitioner students who commit to a minimum of three years of employment by the hospitals after graduation.

Since The Ascent Partnership began in 2015, three WCU nurse practitioner students have successfully participated in the program. The program’s first graduate, Carrie Saunders, FNP, cares for patients at Harris Regional Hospital Urgent Care in the Walmart Plaza. Caroline Rooney, RN and Hannah Caplinger, RN are expected to complete the nurse practitioner program in August 2019.

The main requirement for consideration of partnership funding is for the student to have been formally accepted to the WCU nurse practitioner program. An application, interview, and reference process are also included.

To apply please visit www.myharrisregional.com/ascent or (828) 586-7100.

Pat Allen Realty Group awarded membership in exclusive Leading Real Estate Companies of the World®

Pat Allen of Pat Allen Realty Group is pleased to announce their affiliation with Leading Real Estate Companies of the World®. “This is truly an honor since it is by invitation only,” says Pat.

With members in over 70 countries, LeadingRE has connections in all corners of the world—with membership extended only to firms that are proven leaders in the markets they serve and share values encompassing local insight, global worldview, trusted experience, high performance and community giving. At a time when a lot of people talk about being “global,” LeadingRE truly lives it—having built a powerful international presence long before being global was in fashion.

“Being a local and independent firm allows us to concentrate on our specific area,” says Pat. “We work full-time and understand the obligations we have to our clients. We don’t overprice to secure listings and fully assist our clients throughout the buying or selling process, in efforts to assist them in making the right decisions for them, keeping their best interests in mind. This is not a hobby, but a profession that requires knowledge and experience and we take our job seriously. We train our brokers to make sure our clients are well represented from the beginning of our relationships until well after our successful closings. Our willingness to work as a team and not compete with each other sets us apart from other firms.”

Pat Allen Realty Group’s ongoing involvement in the local community and its willingness to give back was one of the reasons Leading Real Estate Companies of the World chose Pat Allen Realty Group to represent them in the area. Pat Allen Realty Group sponsors multiple non-profits and serves on various boards in support of the entire plateau. Other factors of consideration were the firm’s demonstration of strong local insight as well as the consistent growth Pat Allen Realty Group has shown year over year. The firm’s success is strongly attributed to the basis of the company’s core values, which include providing exceptional customer service to its clients and approaching all with honesty and integrity.

“Being selected as a member of Leading Real Estate Company of the World® takes us to a new level and we are here to help with your wants, needs and desires. Thank you all for your support in the past that has led to our current successes. We look forward to a bright future! Stop by Pat Allen Realty Group at 295 Dillard Road and meet our team, says Pat. We are here for you.”

cross back up and do it for the people of this town who still have faith in Christ,” said Pastor Ford.

Once the town realized the original tree planted in the park wasn’t healthy and therefore not growing, another tree was sought and a new location in the park decided upon. It debuted at the town lighting, Saturday, Nov. 24.

Art and Angela William paid for the new tree – somewhere in the vicinity of $12,000 – and in-kind services from various companies in town took care of transporting it, digging the hole and planting the tree.

“We want to protect the tree. Why jeopardize it?” said Stiehler.

In the spirit of compromise, however – for this year only – Mayor Taylor has now said the cross can be placed lower on the tree where it won’t damage the new top. In addition, other faiths have been invited to put a symbol on the tree, too.

Romberg named BIC of Landmark’s Highlands office

Carol Wilson, General Manager of Landmark Realty and Vacation Rentals, announced that Carl Romberg of Highlands has been chosen as the new Broker in Charge for the Landmark office in Highlands.

“We know that Carl is a true asset and will put his extensive business and real estate experience to work for us in Highlands,” Wilson said. “Landmark was founded on the Plateau in 2004 offering boutique real estate services and we know that Carl will make a valuable contribution to our leadership team and the real estate community of the Plateau as we continue to expand and grow.”

Prior to his appointment to Broker in Charge, Romberg served as a Realtor in the Highlands office since April of 2016 when he made Highlands his primary residence rather than a beloved second home for 15 years.

Carl is a native of Northeast Georgia and grew up with a love of the outdoors and the mountains, inspired by family trips and via his journey to become an Eagle Scout. He attended the Georgia Institute of Technology and received a Bachelor of Science in Industrial Management while actively exploring his love of architecture, landscape and design. Carl bought his first home, renovated it and resold it within a year of his college graduation. He parlayed the proceeds into another home and built his real estate expertise and portfolio while serving as a fulltime project manager for Martha Sanders and Company specializing in commercial office and high-end residential interiors in Atlanta, GA.

Romberg shifted his focus to finance and became First Vice President of Sun Trust Bank working in commercial banking and credit analysis for seven years. Forging relationships with banking, insurance and retirement colleagues while working as a financial manager at Habersham Gardens in Atlanta for three years, Carl continued to buy, renovate and sell investment homes.

The family business brought him back to Gainesville, GA for 15 years. As a third generation owner of City Ice Company, Carl served as the Chief Financial Officer of Citisco, Inc. and Direct South, Inc. and focused on financial and operational management. Upon the sale of the business, Carl moved to Highlands full-time instead of a seasonal resident and began to focus solely on the business of real estate. Working on a full portfolio of real estate listings and serving as a trusted and experienced resource for buyer, sellers and investment rentals. Romberg is well regarded for his tireless work ethic and his desire to consistently exceed the expectations of his clients and colleagues.

Carl and his spouse, Bret Herbert, live in Highlands with their dog, Lucy. They enjoy gardening and entertaining and frequent visits from their daughters. Carl has always been active in the community with a specific focus on the North Georgia Food Bank, the United Way and the local Chamber of Commerce. He has a passion for the visual arts and community visioning.
Macon County Sheriff Robbie Holland, spoke at the Rotary Club of Highlands on Nov. 13. He was introduced by Rotary Club member, Brian McClellan. Sheriff Holland discussed the Shop with a Cop program, which he started 25 years ago. The program has grown from initially 16 children to now between 300 to 400 children, who are each given a $100 gift certificate to use to buy Christmas presents for themselves, and at least one other person. Children are identified by law enforcement officers in the county. All of the children involved are taken to local stores by a law enforcement officer, who can assist with their shopping and, if necessary, even supplement the money needed to make purchases. Holland said the Rotary Club of Highlands has helped longer and more than any other organization.

HCP presents Annual Holiday Program

Need to rev up a little extra holiday spirit this season? The Highlands Cashiers Players’ free annual holiday program of music and dramatic readings will fill the bill!
This year’s program, coordinated by Vangie Rich, begins at 7 p.m. on Dec. 13 at Highlands Performing Center, co-sponsor of the event.

A 12-voice ensemble from The Mountain Voices choir, directed by Beverly Barnett, will sing selections from the Voices’ Christmas program. Local musicians include Susan Clearman playing the accordion, Les Scott playing the dulcimer, Lynleigh McLain and her dad Gregg singing a medley of seasonal songs. Lori Bee and sister April Muehlebach with Dave Mueller playing the mandolin will introduce a new song by Betty Holt, Christmas in Highlands.

Reading their original stories are Luke O’Steen and Vangie Rich and from the Highlands Writers group, Lee Lyons, Wayne Coleman, Jeannie Chambers, and Bud Katz. After the program, a reception with hot cider, cookies and such will be held for audience and performers downstairs at PAC, 507 Chestnut Street.

This program, minus the Mountain Voices, but plus the bell ringers from the Cashiers Methodist Church, will also be performed on Monday, Dec. 17, at the Cashiers Library, 249 Frank Allen Road, co-sponsored by The Friends of the Albert Carlton Cashiers Library. Both programs are free to everyone. No tickets are needed. It’s the Players Christmas gift to the communities.

Both programs are dedicated to the memory of Adair Simon, late president of HCP.

Code Enforcement Official/Animal Control Officer/Police Officer

Primary Reason Why Classification Exists
Performs responsible professional work interpreting, applying and enforcing the unified development ordinance (UDO) and the code of ordinances for the Town. Performs duties as animal control officer. Takes enforcement action as needed as a sworn North Carolina law enforcement officer.

Distinguishing Features of the Class
An employee in this class performs inspections to ensure compliance with the unified development ordinance. The employee will be required to check for violations following complaints and takes appropriate enforcement action when violations and/or fines have not been resolved by the offender. Work also includes interpreting and explaining ordinances and codes to the public and working with owners to comply with the local rules and regulations. Work requires considerable knowledge of local and related state laws, ordinances, and environmental issues, and extensive public contact skills and conflict resolution skills. In addition, the employee will work closely with the Planning and Development Director to identify properties that have been issued zoning certificates and any other approval required. Work also includes processing enforcement paperwork and may require appearance in court cases. The employee is exposed to inside and outside environmental conditions and irate citizens. The employee will be required to be trained in the handling of animals pertaining to the duties of an animal control officer. The employee will be required to be a sworn North Carolina law enforcement officer and take appropriate enforcement action as needed. Work is supervised by the Chief of Police and/or appropriate rank and file according to Highlands Police Policy.

Illustrative Examples of Work
- Makes on-site inspections during development to ensure compliance with the UDO including, setbacks, public water supply, watershed requirements, landscaping, colors, screening, and related appearance issues; enforces sign regulations, subdivision, and flood plain requirements; works with owners on remediation of non-compliance.
- Enforces nuisance regulations, such as, junk vehicles, overgrown lots, and unauthorized accumulations of materials and debris.
- Responds to complaints, investigates and enforces compliance.
- Assists the Planning and Development Director with code issues that should be reviewed for clarity or changes.
- Follows up on actions taken and assures that citizens comply with local ordinances.
- Establishes and maintains records of work activities and follow-up actions.
- Responds to complaints of nuisance animals, ability to quarantine nuisance animals and transport to county shelter.
- Serve as fill-in patrol officer when needed.

Additional Job Duties
- Backs up other department staff.
- Performs related duties as required.

Knowledge, Skills, and Abilities
Must have the ability to interpret local ordinances, rules, and regulations, as well as, the ability to interpret technical plans and drawings related to ordinances. Needs to have skill in conflict resolution. Must be able to work effectively with employees and the general public in code enforcement situations. Must also have the ability to communicate effectively in oral and written form; to interpret planning, zoning and building inspection policies to officials and the general public; and has the ability to document and complete required records and reports.
