5k-10k run raises $20,000 for HS

By Brian O'Shea
Plateau Daily News

Droves of runners, supporters, and volunteers descended upon Kelsey-Hutchinson Founders Park on Saturday for the 7th annual Rotary Club of Highlands Twilight 5k/10k. After the race, runners drank cold beer and jammed out to the band High 5. Almost $20k was raised to help purchase more ActivPanels for Highlands School, in addition to the “smartboards” already purchased by the Advanced Highlands Education Committee (AHEC).

Free breakfast program still on for schools ‘20–’19

By Brittney Lofthouse

It’s a story that makes the headlines all too often in our nation. “Anonymous donor pays off lunch debt for an entire school.”

While the story is always heart-warming, it raises a more important question as to why students across the country are not only having to battle fractions and spelling tests, but also figure out if they will get to eat that day.

According to the School Nutrition Association, at the end of the 2016-2017 school year, 75% of schools in the nation reported having unpaid student meal debt. That debt has kept children from graduating, prevented them from having a warm meal during the day, or shammed them among their peers. Families’ inability to pay for school lunches is becoming an increasing problem.

Of the school districts with unpaid student meal debt, 40.2% said the number of students without adequate funds increased last school year, SNA found.

County gives PAC $60,000

Cindy Trevathan, PAC Board of Directors member, made a presentation to commissioners soliciting their support for the project. The commissioners have been very supportive to several community centers throughout the county and have been instrumental as well as financially supportive in helping the larger Cowee School Arts and Heritage Center. County allocates $30,000 for ActivPanels at Highlands School

At its August meeting, the Macon County Board of Commissioners voted unanimously to allocate $60,000 to the renovation and expansion of the Highlands Performing Arts Center (PAC). The allocation will be a two-year commitment from the county for the project with $30,000 allocated each year in the budget under economic development.

Performing Arts Center (PAC)

Macon County Board of Commissioners presented the proposal to the commissioners soliciting their support for the project. The commissioners have been very supportive to several community centers throughout the county and have been instrumental as well as financially supportive in helping the larger Cowee School Arts and Heritage Center.

New faces, new classes, at Highlands School

There are more teachers and classes this year at Highlands School as well as more students enrolled for the 2019-20 school year.

According to Principal Brian Jetter, there are 370 students enrolled which is up from last year’s 341. A final count will be taken 10 days after school starts.

Due to state requirements concerning elementary class sizes, there is an additional kindergarten.

I returned to Highlands Sunday night after visiting with family members. We did three days of fishing on the San Juan River in New Mexico. My travels always make me appreciate living in Highlands.

The San Juan is a great trout river and the surrounding landscape is dramatic and beautiful. The people were very warm and welcoming. One of my nephews from LaLa Land asked me if we had trout fishing in Western Carolina. I responded that we have over 3,000 miles of trout streams that are probably the best in the country. I can’t wait for him to visit Highlands and see what this plateau has to offer.

Yes, other regions have great attractions and maybe it’s a mayoral exaggeration, but I still believe we have the best place to live and to visit. The big question will be how this community continues to maintain a tremendous quality of life and also welcomes visitors who share a similar interest in quality experiences. I know many Highlands citizens share similar thoughts. Bringing more and more people here for day-trips and short-term party events may not be in our long-term best interest.

With the changes in the Highlands Chamber of Commerce and the upcoming election, I suspect this issue will be a topic of intense discussion. The town also needs to move quickly in developing a new comprehensive plan in 2020. I believe the best way to achieve this goal is to bring in a professional consulting organization that can guide our planning board through the process.

Tonight is the August Highlands Town Board Meeting at the Highlands Community Building beginning at 7.

I am asking the board to support a resolution for cameras on the Gorge Road. These cameras would be radar activated and photograph trucks that willfully disregard warning signs and continue on the Gorge Road. Special, local legislation will be needed for these cameras. The resolution is the initial step.

The architectural agreement for designing the new fire department will also be reviewed. The fire department and town staff are moving this process forward without delay.

The board will hear a report from the Public Works Committee concerning solid waste management, especially as it relates to the bear issues. I anticipate the board approving a plan that will require the use of toter. Residents would have about a year to make this conversion.

The staff will request the transfer of additional town reserve funds to the North Carolina Capital Management Trust Fund. The town carries large reserve balances during the year that could be placed in this fully protected fund. Our Town Manager and Finance Director transferred funds from the scholarship and similar funds to this state fund last January. Since then the town has netted about $80,000 in interest. Additional town funds could be placed in the NC Management Trust Fund and earn a return for taxpayers. The good news is the town can withdraw money within a day from this trust fund without penalties.

In keeping in line with what the county has done for other community centers and projects, the board agreed to show its support to the Highlands PAC project. The board also recognized the significant impact the performing arts in Highlands has contributed to the economy.

“I recommend we support the project and show our interest by allocating $30,000 a year for two years; this is in line with what we have done with Cowee School and other community centers throughout the county,” said Vice-Chairman Ronnie Beale in his motion to the board. “The performing arts in Highlands has had a significant impact on the economy of the town and county.”

Trevathan told the board that 100 private donors have raised $10 million for the original project which includes renovating and expanding the existing PAC. She said an additional two to three million dollars is needed to finish the project but said the project was made possible with an anonymous donation of $5 million dollars.

School lunch debt has become such a problem across the nation, some states have actually passed legislation prohibiting schools from singling out students and “shaming” them for having unpaid charges.

At the end of last school year, Macon County racked up about $2,000 in unpaid school lunch debt.

“Most parents pay by the end of the fiscal year,” said David Lightner, Nutrition Director for Macon County Schools. “It is not as big of a problem in Macon County as it is in other counties across the US, however, it is something we continue to face every year.”

Dr. Baldwin noted that while it’s not as much of a problem in Macon County as it is elsewhere in the country it’s an issue the school is constantly struggling to address.

“Principals are put in the awkward position of contacting parents to make them aware of any school debt,” said Baldwin. “We would much prefer that principals dedicate their time to improving safety and instruction. Once the lunch debt exceeds a certain amount, the school system turns to our board attorney to write the parents a letter in attempt to collect the payment for lunches. We have taken the additional step of litigation to collect the money, but this has occurred very infrequently. Most of the time parents pay for their child’s lunches. However, when we are unable to collect the full amount, the school system must then refund the school lunch program from our general fund balance. As you can imagine, this diminishes our ability to purchase classroom instructional materials, books, and safety equipment. Most importantly, school debt has a negative impact on all of our students.”

Federal programs allow families in financial hardships to apply for free and reduced lunches, which help, but it doesn’t fully address the issue.

Although the average price of a middle school lunch is $2.68, the cost can add up for families, especially those with several children. In June, the Macon County Board of Education approved a 10-cent increase for school meals across the district. Elementary lunches in Macon County

The Price is Right!

Sometimes it feels like each new season of selling real estate is like that game show, The Price is Right. The new listings are grouped together with all the old listings on stage, and buyers from the audience try to bid what they think should be the closest correct sales price. The person with the best answer gets selected to play the game. “You’re the next contestant on This Sale is Right.”

Believe it or not, there is a happy price medium, it just takes longer for some to find it. Why is that? Because we’re all human. There are some sellers still stuck in the pre-recession pricing strategy: “List high, doesn’t matter how long it takes, eventually it will sell.”

There are some buyers still stuck in the height of recession: “Offer 20%-25% less than asking, if the sellers really want to sell, we will end up with a decent price; they’ll snap up my quick cash closing.”

Take a look at the last decade – these are closings in the Highlands Township:

Young Men and their Guns

A food festival in California's Santa Clara County, a shopping center in El Paso, Texas. A bar in Dayton, Ohio's historic downtown. These are locations of the three most recent mass shootings in our country.

We know the motive of the 20-year old shooter in the El Paso event, where at least 20 were killed. By the time you read this more of the 23 others who were wounded may have died. He used a semi-automatic AK-47-type weapon. He posted his intentions on the Internet. He wanted to kill Mexicans.

The shooter in Gilroy, who killed three and then took his own life, used a WASR-10, semi-automatic weapon and, according to eyewitness testimony, appeared to be shooting at random. This one, from his own social media profiles, had no apparent underlying political agenda; he just wanted to kill people. He bought the gun when he was 19.

The Dayton shooter arrived well-prepared. He brought a .223 caliber, high-capacity rifle with more than one, 100-round drum magazines. He wore protective body armor and ear protectors, so as to muffle the noise. Nine died, including the shooter's own sister, before police, who responded within 30 seconds, killed the 24-year old perpetrator.

Mass shootings in the United States are now so commonplace, so woven into the fabric of our lives, they don't generate the same level of outrage as before. National television news, which, by the way, has as its top priority to instill fear into its viewing audience, occasionally doesn't lead its nightly newscast with the story.

The Los Angeles Times recently completed a two-year project investigating what commonalities exist among those who bring weapons into so-called 'soft targets' with the sole intent of killing as many people as possible before either killing themselves, being killed by police, or being taken into custody. There are four consistent characteristics associated with 160 mass shooters they tracked since 1966, including the either obvious or surprising fact that they are overwhelmingly young, angry, suicidal, white males.

First, the vast majority of mass shooters experienced childhood trauma and exposure to violence at a young age, which established a precursor to visible mental health concerns. Second, practically every mass shooter had experienced a crisis in the weeks or months leading up to the shooting. Third, most shooters had studied the actions of other shooters online, so as to obtain validation for their motives. Fourth, and here is where the rubber meets the road, all the shooters had the means to carry out their plans.

The scariest part of this overwhelmingly American condition is that our Constitution, and our values, with regard to gun ownership, privacy, ever lower taxes, and the elusive notion of freedom, make 'solving' this problem somewhere between extremely difficult and impossible. As any law enforcement professional will tell you, there is almost no way to stop someone from committing a mass shooting if the shooter is ready to give up his own life. But, there are ways to reduce the frequency of these events without sacrificing our rights to own guns, to free speech, and to privacy.

First, ‘soft targets’ need to be hardened, with security measures such as metal detectors and visible police presence. And, assault-type weapons need to be better controlled, with age restrictions, permit-to-purchase licensing, universal background checks, and red flag laws designed to keep them out of the hands of vulnerable individuals and/or people in crisis.

Second, the media shouldn't provide oxygen to mass shooters; stop mentioning names of perpetrators, shorten video coverage, and don't print 'manifestos' that sick, twisted people want to share with the world.

Third, the NRA and their enablers in Congress, if they believe guns aren't a part of the problem, should funnel real funding toward adolescent and young adult mental health initiatives so as to identify and help remediate these damaged, angry, alienated young men, most of whom don’t care whether they or others live or die.

Fourth, social media and other Internet organizations should, of their own volition, severely restrict access to sites containing hate speech, blatantly racist, xenophobic, white nationalist, and misogynistic content that helps feed the fires of hatred and bigotry lying within those who might see such material as validating their anger.

And, as far as our President, whose daily, angry tweets feed the problem, is concerned, if, as he claims, he wants to Make America Great Again, perhaps he can start by considering steps he can personally take to help make America safe again.

For 2019-20 there is an Individual Class max size and a Max Average of ALL Classes (in that grade level) within the Local Education Agency (LEA) for grades K-3.
For 2019-20, the Individual Class max size is 22. The Max Average of ALL Classes (in that grade level) within the LEA is 19.
“We have two kindergarten classes because we have a total of 27 kindergarten students enrolled which exceeds the Individual Class max of 22,” said Principal Jetter.
There are 14 students in one kindergarten class; 13 in the other; 22 students in 1st grade; 14 in one 2nd grade and 13 in the other; and 20 in the 3rd grade.
The new elementary teacher assistant Stephanie McConnell will work both second-grade classes – one with Cynthia Henderson and one with Robyn Hessling. There isn’t enough funding for each second-grade class to have a full-time teacher assistant.
Due to numbers, there is also an additional sixth-grade homeroom and another high school history class.
The two 6th-grade teachers are new hire Sherrie King and Joy Archer.
There are also two high school history teachers – new hire Caleb Brown who is also the Boys Varsity Soccer team coach and Chris Green.
Spanish is online this year. there are 16 students signed up for Spanish first semester and 12 for second semester.
Open House is tonight, Aug. 22 from 4-6 p.m. Students and families are encouraged to visit the school so students can get acquainted with their teachers and the school.
The first day of school is Monday, Aug. 26.

Cats know their names

This comes as no surprise to me why this pronouncement all over the news? Are humans truly unaware of this simple fact? Of course, we cats know our names, but as the many articles note, we don’t always respond when called. Duh! Why should we come running just because you say our names? Tell me, do two-legged children always come when called?

It cracks me up that someone took time to research this topic and publish the findings in the journal “Nature.” Was it necessary to study 78 cats to discover that we respond to people calling our names? We do two-legged children not do this? The researchers studied cats in homes with only one cat, multi-cat homes, and cat cafes, and they found we’re able to distinguish our names from other cats or dogs and from similar-sounding words.

As do I, the cats in this study responded to their names by “moving their heads, wiggling their ears and meowing.” I, of course, do more than that. On occasion, I come when called or I leap into a lap or onto the bed to snuggle with Mum or Dad, but again, only if I feel so inclined.

For example, when my pet parents return home after a trip, I understand them when they call my name over and over, but I’m certainly not going to run to them. My taking my time to appear delivers the unspoken message that I’m miffed.

My Dad often adds a “G” to the end of my name and places the accent on the second syllable – Pu-DING. No matter, I recognize my name. Other times, my pet parents use different intonations when they speak to me. When I’m eying the rotisserie chicken on the kitchen counter, I can tell by the way Mum says Puddin’ that she means, “Don’t you dare.” The result, of course, is that I wait until she walks out of the kitchen before I leap. I’m no dummy.

Rumor has it that there’s a move afoot to teach cats new words. Seriously? I think I can safely speak for all cats when I say we do not care to be trained. We’ll learn whatever words we choose. As a writer, I know plenty of words, and I’m self-taught.

If you have a cat, you already know that they’re also alert to human moods – no words needed. That’s why I spent lots of time in bed with Mum when she had surgery this year. She needed me to help her feel better. Please note, all of these cat behaviors are voluntary.

I also have the amazing ability to note when Mum moves toward the stairs. I watch from Dad’s lap to see whether she walks past the stairs or up them. If she passes by the stairs, I stay put. If she starts up the stairs, I leap down and dash ahead of her into her office – where kitty treats are dispensed. Again, no words required.

Sometimes, I wait at the foot of the stairs to see whether she turns toward her office or her bedroom. I don’t follow her into the bedroom unless it’s bedtime when I watch her wash her face and get ready for bed. Then I choose a sleep spot for the evening. I may wander from chair to bed to desk during the night, but I stay close by. Enough said. No research is required to establish that I know my name and my place.

cost $2.65, 5th-8th cost $2.85 and high school students cost $2.95. Reduced rate lunches are .40 cents. School lunches have steadily increased about 10 cents per year over the last few years.

Though students from low-income families can receive assistance, not all families apply and some are deemed ineligible. Students from families whose incomes are at or below 130% of the poverty level qualify for free school meals. Children whose family incomes are between 130% and 185% of the poverty level are eligible for reduced-price meals.

For the 2018-'19 school year, 130% of the poverty level was $32,630 for a family of four, according to SNA.

If a debt isn’t paid, the school must reimburse the federal government, which presents a problem for schools that don’t have extra funds in the budget to do so.

The federal government does offers universal school meals in some areas, including Macon County, if a majority of the student body is eligible for assistance.

Because the aggregate population of Macon County is below the poverty line, every school in Macon County receives free breakfast.

Since the poverty level at East Franklin Elementary School and Union Academy are predominately low-income, those students are all provided with free lunches.

According to Superintendent Dr. Chris Baldwin, 2,610 students received free and reduced lunch prices across the district. About 2,900 students took advantage of the free breakfast district-wide.

“Macon County Schools was reimbursed $1,799,805.68 for those meals by the end of school year 2018-’19,” said Dr. Baldwin.

Macon County Schools Nutrition Director David Lightner said the program is still on.

“We will continue to operate the School Breakfast Program, National School Lunch Program, and offer Universal Free Breakfast for 2019-’20,” said Lightner.

“These guys train hard and it shows out on the field, they’re giving it everything they got,” said Brown.

East Henderson may have put two on the board, but it could have been a whole lot worse if not for the efforts of Tate who repeatedly dove to make saves throughout the game.

“We did outstanding compared to what I thought we were going to do tonight,” said Tate. “I’m really impressed with our performance.”

Helping keep the pressure off Tate was Highlands Jeffrey Olvera who was in the thick of it in the box more often than not.

“It was a good start to the season since we’ve only been playing about a month,” said Olvera. “To tie a team this good shows potential for the rest of the season.”

Highlands Collin Stoltzfus said there’s work to be done but they hung in there.

“It could have gone better,” said Stoltzfus. “The midfield was getting the ball up the whole game and the defense held the line, but we need to pass more, and pass better.”

Highlands next plays against Smoky Mountain in Sylva at 6 p.m. on Aug. 28.
Selwyn (Drew) Andrew Chalker is this year’s recipient of the Bel Canto scholarship. The annual scholarship is awarded to a Highlands School graduate who has an interest in the visual arts or music.

Drew’s interest in music began when he was very young. His father and both grandfathers shared a love of playing the guitar and they passed this mutual love on to him. Drew remembers all three of them spending hours teaching him notes and chords. “This time together was bonding and enhanced our relationships. I hope to pass this love of playing an instrument on to my own child one day. When I am playing the guitar, I feel I can forget the stress of the day.”

Drew learned first-hand the many decisions facing him and relied on his love of music, finding it “a healthy coping mechanism to deal with what each day throws at me.”

During his Senior year, Drew played the guitar and enjoys listening to all types of music. He and his friends play their own compositions as well as covering new and old tunes from various artists. “Drew has a natural talent for music. Music has always been a part of his life and I’m certain will be a part of the lives of his future family,” said Highlands School Music teacher Marcia Franklin. “He was also an accomplished trumpet player and received several band awards.”

Drew plans to attend Western North Carolina University and will study Business and Sports Management /Marketing. Music will provide a gateway to his career choice due to the significant role it plays in promoting athletes and products.
What is it to believe in Christ and recite the Nicene Creed and still embrace hatred and bigotry? Does it make sense to proclaim Jesus Christ one’s Lord in faith and not to accomplish His will in love (Jn. 14:15)? This type of faith is not Scriptural faith—it is hypocrisy. It is of little value for us to confess faith in Christ and hold to historical doctrine and practices while ignoring our calling to equally seek in love to reconcile to the Lord the godless, marginalized, and outcast.

If the church is to fulfill its role to call our nation—in this case the United States of America—to faith in Christ, it must clearly be seen as a “burning fire of love.” Simply, the Lord’s people should be the leading force for reconciliation to God and to one another. The church as God’s people is to be the place where all other fires of reconciliation to God and to one another. The church as God’s people is to be the place where all other fires of righteousness and holiness is the consummation, the comingling of righteousness and love. This fire of love and righteousness is the consummation, the comingling of righteousness and holiness.

It should be clarified here that this fire of love does not extinguish the fire of God’s righteousness. God’s holiness is the consummation, the comingling of righteousness and love. This fire of love and righteousness will both drive people to their knees in repentance, and equally draw people to God’s all-gracious and all-encompassing love.

The churches of the Reformation have accomplished some important things in bringing people back to the fundamentals of the faith—Christ alone, Scripture alone, grace alone, and faith alone. But despite this orthodoxy, we have a long way to go to accomplish the “greatest of these is love” (1 Cor. 13:13).

LINCOLN COUNTY SHERIFF

In order to determine the best listing price. Listing prices are derived from comparing the subject property to similar homes, preferably in the same area, and with as many of the same characteristics as possible that have sold within the last year. It is crucial to revisit the process at the listing renewal time to ensure the pricing is still on track.

Often when a listing broker delivers the suggested listing price to a seller and they come back with “But I need to get more” or “I’ve got more than that in the house” or “Oh, no, you see, this property is in an estate. The proceeds will be divided between X amount, and we each need X amount”. All of these statements may be true, but it still doesn’t change the suggested listing price.

When listing prices are adjusted too high, the property is likely to become “dead on the market,” and when that happens, there are less showings and hardly any offers.

When a buyer listens to their broker, and has done a little of their own homework, the buying process streamlines into faster closings.

These days, most buyers get their pre-shopping experience from Zillow. While Zillow gets their information from public sources, the “Zestimate” may not work in certain areas that hold their own values, or for unique homes. Zillow should be treated as a tool and is only one source of information. A Realtor can give a buyer information from the local MLS, along with knowledge of the market in general to help guide them with offering prices.

Which brings us back to The Price is Right. What is the right price to offer for a property?

Usually a buyer makes this decision after seeing a few (sometimes a lot) of other properties, they don’t just buy the first one they see (although that does happen). Obviously, a buyer never expects to pay full price, but that happens, too, especially if supply of demand is low.

There are many variables in determining an offering price. The buyer’s ability to pay the price, the seller’s motivation to sell, has the price changed since the property was listed? If so, why? Just because there has been a price drop doesn’t mean the seller is desperate to sell. When there has been a considerable price drop, the buyer should consider a closer gap between the asking price and offer. I use the term “sharpening their pencils,” and sellers and buyers do this after the process has begun with negotiations, but smart shopping beforehand, and seller’s adjusting prices after the initial listing are other ways of sharpening those pencils.

When buyers and sellers are armed with knowledge of the current market, there’s no need for inflated prices or bottom feeders. If a property is priced in line with the current market, the offering price should be within 3% to 8%, and then may be negotiated to a higher price before settling on a final price.

Sometimes, during the due diligence period, the price may be negotiated again. If a listing has the language, or verbally communicated by the seller as “as is,” the price is usually non-negotiable after the contract has been fully executed, meaning a buyer can accept the property, knowing of any defects found, or walk away if it’s before the end of the due diligence period.

The buyers armed with knowledge will be the next contestants on This Price is Right, so come on down!

Construction is underway of the expansion of the PAC to implement a new expanded facility for the performing arts community. The new facility will add an additional 350 seats to the existing 250 seat chamber hall as well as an 85-seat black box for movies and more intimate events. The project will also include the renovations to the existing hall and expansion of the lobby to improve access, visibility and comfort.

The new facility will bring all performing arts together under one roof, a vision of Highlands Mayor Pat Taylor several years ago. The facility will be home to the Highlands Community Players, Highlands Cashiers Chamber Music Festival, Bel Canto, the Highlands Playhouse, youth theater and live streaming of the New York Metropolitan Opera and the National Theatre of London.

“Our mission is to provide a facility that provides world class entertainment at a low cost for all the performing arts in Highlands,” said Trevathan.

To meet this goal, the PAC coordinates concerts and fundraising drives to help offset the operating cost of the facility and keep rents low for the non-profit resident art groups. The expanded facility will provide greater opportunities for community events including conferences, wedding receptions and meetings.

With the expanded facility, operating cost are expected to increase but more revenue from ticket sales will be generated.

The PAC strongly encourages maintaining the traditions and customs of the local area, hosting bluegrass bands and story tellers. Plans are underway to use the expanded facility for an annual Appalachian festival to further celebrate the culture of the area as demonstrated in music, dance and movies.

Arts North Carolina estimates about $2 billion is spent on performing arts in North Carolina; of that 44 percent goes to the organization and $1.2 billion goes to surrounding businesses such as restaurants, hotels and shops.
