New Commissioners are sworn into office

From left: Commissioners John Dotson, Brian Stiehler, new Commissioner Marc Hehn accompanied by his wife Betsy, take the oath of office at last Thursday's Town Board meeting.

Macon County Clerk of Court Vic Perry swore in the new commissioners at the Thursday, Dec. 12 Town Board meeting.

After the ceremony, each commissioner gave his thoughts about the next four years.

Newcomer Marc Hehn read from a Christmas card he sent out to voters.

"Merry Christmas! Let's continue to believe in our community and ourselves. In doing so by working together I believe we can achieve a fully staffed hospital and fully staffed medical practices on the plateau," he said. "Whenever there's a need there is an opportunity. Mr. Mayor, I look forward to working with you and all the commis-

Williamses to fund pool house renovations

An addition to the agenda which was accepted at the start of Thursday's Town Board meeting was a request from Art Williams to renovate the interior of the pool house at the Rec Park.

Recreation Director Lester Norris said the town had been approached by Williams who offered funding to renovate the interior of

A Duke Power update

At Thursday night's Town Board meeting, Kevin O'Donnell with NOVA Energy Consultants, Inc., who is the liaison between the town and Duke Power, had some news for commissioners that went over like a lead balloon.

Highlands Police Department gave about 16 area kids a magical day of shopping for Christmas gifts, hitting up The Factory in Franklin, and then wrapping all their goodies at the Episcopal Church of the Incarnation in Highlands on Saturday through Shop with a Cop (SWAC).

"We participate in Shop with a Cop because we enjoy spending time with the kids," said HPD Detective Andrea Holland. "When we deal with people, we may only see the bad, on this day, all we see is the good. It's nice to get away from

Issues on the horizon

Let me do a brief follow-up to several items covered at the last Highlands Town Board meeting. It was a unique session with the swearing in of Marc Hehn, a new commissioner, and Commissioners Buz Dotson and Brian Stiehler for their four-year term.

Kevin O'Donnell, our Nova Energy consultant, gave an update on the status of the town's Duke Energy wholesale electric contract. The contract is complicated and fluid. Kevin monitors the continuous execution of the contract to ensure our interests are represented. He challenged a charge in this year's contract that netted the town a $64,000 refund. Refunds are applied toward operating costs to help keep rates down. For at least four years we have had no significant rate increases. That has not been the case with Duke retail customers. Kevin informed us that Duke retail customers may be facing a built-in 50% rate increase over the next decade to cover the rebuilding of Duke's electric grid. As a wholesale customer, the Town of Highlands will not be a part of those rate increases.

Highlands Mayor

With that said, Kevin does expect Duke to increase our wholesale rate next year. There is a rate formula in our contract with Duke that determines these increases. For several years we have not passed these increases to customers but the coming year may be different.

Coal ash fees were again brought up by Kevin. The NC Utilities Commission granted 100% of the costs Duke requested for coal ash recovery. That ruling meant higher fees for Duke customers. The NC Attorney General and the NC Utilities Public Staff filed a suit that will be heard by the NC Supreme Court. The plaintiffs contend that the NC Utilities Commission awarded Duke excessive recovery costs when compared to similar cases in nearby states. If the court rules for the plaintiffs, there's a good chance the current coal ash fees could be reduced.

In 2028 the town will have to renegotiate a contract with Duke, or find another supplier. Kevin advised us to start this process around 2025. It will be important to explore opinions concerning how and with whom to purchase electricity.

The new fire station is moving forward. The board approved a request to seek qualifications for a contractor/manager position. This position would oversee the entire building construction. The contractor/manager would call for bids from subcontractors for all building phases. The manager would consult with the town and architect in determining which subcontractors make the best bids. This type of construction management has proven to be an effective way of containing building costs.

I also appointed members of the board to working committees for next year. These committees work with staff in studying specific issues and making proposals and recommendations to the entire board. For example, we have a public safety committee, a land use committee, a finance committee and a recreation committee to name just a few. As always, I will be appreciative of all the time and work the committees will do this year.

Commissioner Brian Stiehler said he looks forward to another four years of working with fellow commissioners and town staff.

"You guys definitely pull the heavy weight. It's a pleasure working in focus with you and for long-range planning."

Commissioner John Dotson agreed with Stiehler.

"I'd like to say we have a fabulous town staff and crew. It's been an absolute pleasure to have worked with them over these years and I look forward to four more years and continued 'good hard works,' he said.

Mayor Taylor also commended outgoing Commissioner Eric Pierson for his hard work and commitment over the last eight years and presented him with a plaque and a gift certificate which he said is standard procedure when a commissioner leaves office.

the pool house including the foyer, dressing rooms, and office area.

Norris said the renovation will be extensive and will be on the same footprint.

"It will include leveling and tiling the floor, tiling walls and showers, replacing lockers, lighting, interior and exit doors, counters, sinks and repainting the ceilings in the dressing rooms," he said. "In the office area, it will encompass tiling the floor and the base of the walls – we found some rot in the wall and that will corrected."

In addition, in the office area, a new granite countertop at the check-in station will be installed as well as new cabinets, lifeguard lockers, storage shelving and lighting, painting and the addition of a kitchenette.

Norris said he expects the work to begin in January and to take two to three months. There will be some interruptions, but he said the plan is to keep the pool open as much as possible.

"We will do one dressing room at a time and the other will be shared or the men may have to go next door," he said. "This is still a plan in process because it came up so quickly. We are still ironing out the details."

Norris requested approval by the Town Board that

Life Is, Indeed, Wonderful

Every Christmas, I attempt to recall times when the holidays were extra special. These days they seem to be about doing our part to keep America's retail sector afloat, outdoing our neighbors with elaborate decorations, and pigging out on too much of too many good things. Sometimes it's difficult to recall memories reflecting something other than excess.

Bud Katz

More than once I've invested in close-watching Frank Capra's masterpiece film, It's a Wonderful Life. I watched, as I now do every year, James Stewart's George Bailey come to life in glorious black and white. I watched how the filmmakers created winter in a small, upstate New York town, Bedford Falls, on a movie lot in sunny Encino, California, and I watched, mesmerized, as George and his future film wife, Mary Hatch, danced the Charleston before ending up in the swimming pool hidden under the floor of the gymnasium in Bedford Falls, but actually in Beverly Hills High School.

Christmas is often referred to as magical. Film is also magical; it's a means by which we are transported from our normal lives into worlds of fantasy, places we'd never otherwise visit, alongside both real people and fictional characters we'd likely not ever encounter in so-called real life. We, of course, meet George, an ordinary, yet extraordinary family man with a wife, four children, an old, drafty house, and a business under siege by Henry Potter, an especially egregious adversary. George found a secret weapon, ... an Angel Second Class named Clarence Oddbody, sent down from above to help George through his difficulties and, in so doing, earn his wings.

Through film, we've met extra-terrestrials, war heroes, superheroes, cowboys, talking mice, ducks, lions, raccoons and trees, kings and queens, gods and monsters, cops and robbers, and a gazillion representations of Santa Claus, surely one of the most durable and enduring icons of the season.

It's a Wonderful Life is now considered a Christmas classic and is the subject of intense scholarly and academic study in film schools and classes in American culture. It's also, according to the Hollywood Reporter, one of the top 20 most watched films ever.

Christmas is actually a supporting player in It's a Wonderful Life, which, at its core, is the story of a discouraged, suicidal man who always put his own hopes and dreams aside in favor of those of others. It's also about how the life of one person can impact the lives and futures of many others.

I doubt George is a metaphor of any kind, or of anyone, in either the film or the short story, The Greatest Gift, by Philip Van Doren Stern, but it would be easy to draw some parallels with the life of another man associated with Christmas.

George Bailey was taught to care about others growing up in a family including a doting mother and a saintly father. He surrounded himself with an odd cohort of men and a couple of women. One, Mary, was pure and chaste. She became George's wife. The other, Violet, was neither pure nor chaste, but helped George get through his ordeals. He navigated his world despite the devilish machinations of Henry Potter, a most powerful antagonist. George participated in a couple of minor miracles, but life seemed always to be stacked against him. In the end, he was prepared to surrender his own life for the benefit of his beloved family.

As things turned out, Clarence helped George realize how different the world around him would have been had George never been born. And, we know our real world would have been different but for the birth and death of Jesus Christ.

I think it's important, during these festive times, to consider the possibility that we're all here for some purpose; perhaps, to impact the lives of others instead of focusing just on ourselves.

I plan to watch It's a Wonderful Life, in black and white of course, and I plan to enjoy as much of the season as possible right here at home, in Highlands. I plan to express gratitude for those I love, for those who love me, and for whatever good I can find in a troubled world.

I believe in the title of Capra's film. It IS a wonderful life. Heck, as the song says, It's the Most Wonderful Time of the Year. And let's not lose sight of what George Bailey learned; that every time a bell rings, an angel gets his wings. Good job, Clarence.

'The Magic Flute' at PAC Sat, Dec. 21 ... free for children

The Highlands Performing Arts Center will present an encore performance of the MET Opera's Holiday Classic, Mozart's The Magic Flute on Saturday, December 21 at 1pm. Julie Taymor's (of Lion King fame) kaleidoscopic production returns this holiday season. The winning ensemble includes tenor Matthew Polenzani, baritone Nathan Gunn, and bass René Pape in this abridged, English-language version of Mozart's classic fable. Bring the whole family and create a new holiday tradition, there is no charge for children accompanied by an adult. A family holiday favorite you won't want to miss. Taymor's fanciful sets, costumes and puppets won rave reviews ... Like most fairy tales the magic flute is a mysterious story of good and evil. Naturally, Ms. Taymor's production makes the opera's monsters quite charming, like the puppet bears who are enchanted by Tamino's magic flute. Tickets are available online at Highlandspac.org or highlandspacperformingarts.com or at the door. 507 Chestnut Street Highlands.

Valley Medical Center, in Ronceverte, WV.

As CEO of Berwick Hospital Center, Tom helped to rebuild their primary care physician base and also led efforts to bring about significant improvements in patient experience scores, safety and quality outcomes.

Chief Primary Care Physician at Highlands Cashiers Hospital Dr. Patti Wheeler, who is also on the Hospital Corporation of America (HCA) board, introduced Neal and said she feels very good about him and the hospital's future with him at the helm.

"He has had a lot of experience. He is familiar with communities that are similar to ours which I think is a blessing," she said. "He is here to stay and isn't using this position to climb the ladder. That's why we are excited to have him as a part of the community. I think he is a great asset and I look forward to working with him."

Mayor Pat Taylor said Neal has a wonderful record of improving doctors and staff and creating new programs.

"I really look forward to hearing from Neal and his staff about all the plans and innovations he has in mind for our hospital," said Taylor.

Neal who began as a nurse almost 30 years ago said he got into healthcare because he liked taking care of people.

"I feel that being able to serve in the health care field is one of the most rewarding things you can do," he said.

He moved into the administration sector about 15 years ago when he went to Hilton Head where he served in a variety of roles.

The one that was of particular interest to the community and the hospital there was the work he did in recruiting.

"During my time there I served as business development officer. I recruited about 36 positions to that market. We did open some services – a breast health center in Bluffton, and a new medical office building," he said.

His last stop prior to coming to Highlands was at Berwick Hospital Center in Berwick, PA.

"I restored a lot of services there – they had lost seven primary care positions in the few years prior to me getting there. So that job was really about trying to restore those primary care positions. We recruited six back to the hospital and were able to really get that going."

While living in Hilton Head, he and his family vacationed in Hayesville, NC so he was glad to hear of the position in Highlands. He and his wife bought a house on Little Bear Pen.

"Being part of healthcare in a rural setting means being part of the community. I won't give plans. I am going to listen and learn first. Get to know what the needs are, who the people are and then I will come back and tell you where it is. I will assure you that recruiting doctors is one of the things we need to do. There's no question about that – what other services we can add? That's just one thing you'll have to wait and hear what I have to say," he said.

He said he has learned that there are really great people at Highlands Cashiers Hospital.

"The level of commitment, the professionalism, the dedication – is incredible. I am proud to be a part of this organization and I look forward to being part of the community for some time to come."

A few of my favorite things

As I pondered what to write about for Christmas, I mentally thumbed through previous columns on Christmas music, Christmas cats, and Christmas trips. What would it be this year? Initially, I considered favorite childhood Christmas gifts.

Spying yet another buck passing through our front yard expanded my thinking beyond Christmas gifts to thoughts of my favorite things year round—the things that inspire awe or a sense of contentment. With a nod to Richard Rodgers and Julie Andrews, here's what came to mind.

No matter that I see deer daily, I always pause as they pass through the yard. Some, like the bucks, are majestic. Others like the Bambis, as I call them, are adorable. Watching the adolescents kick up their heels and nip at each other brings a sense of joy.

Seeing a hawk take flight or land nearby is an awe-inspiring sight. Not long ago, we spotted a wild turkey strutting through the backyard. How wonderful to have our own private nature preserve.

What would we do without our four-legged children? Whenever Banjo is snoring gently at my feet or Puddin' is purring in my lap, I can't help but smile and sigh. On chilly nights, Puddin' joins us in bed and lies tucked against my side or on my back. I try to remain still so as not to disturb that little ball of warmth. Banjo? He contentedly lies by the side of the bed, and these days, I wake him in the morning instead of vice-versa.

The first sight of bluebirds inspecting the house put up especially for them is an early spring pleasure. There seem always to be two couples vying for the right to move in, and the colorful scene is a delight.

Similarly, the sound of the Carolina wrens singing on the back deck is a sign they'll soon start readying the nest between the screened porch and the chimney. They return to that spot year after year, and we look forward to the chirping babies come summer.

When it turns cold, I'm reminded that the fire in the wood-burning stove is one of my favorite things. Unlike some fireplaces, it's not only pretty; it also puts out heat and provides cozy warmth throughout the winter.

Add a snowy day, and I'm in heaven—as long as I'm not stuck on the road. There's something indescribably peaceful about the silence experienced during a snowfall. An undisturbed yard of pure white is a sight to behold. Undisturbed, that is until we let the dog out the front door. That's a comical sight—Banjo frolicking in the snow, especially when it's deep enough to tickle his belly.

Any time of year, books top my list of favorite things. My day is not complete without reading a few chapters before I turn off the bedside lamp. Somehow, cold weather makes reading even more pleasurable, and the emails from the library alerting me that a book is waiting for me make my day.

This time of year, it's only natural that Christmas decorations make my list of favorite things: the crocheted angel tree topper, the bubble light nightlight, the colorful glass Woolworths ornaments that were my mother's, my Richie Bear from Rich's, and the two stuffed bears from Lord & Taylor's.

My list isn't lengthy. It's a list of the simple pleasures in life—the things that bring me joy. What's on your list of favorite things? Whatever it may be, I wish you and yours joy this holiday season and throughout the year.

The idea of SWAC is to take children who may have seen a different side of law enforcement or whose parents may have fallen on hard times and brighten up their Christmas.

Each child receives $100 to purchase gifts for themselves, but they have to buy one gift for someone else. The children's names are given to law enforcement by teachers and members of the community.

Holland said the money is raised throughout the year through fundraisers and donations.

Once all the shopping was finished and the kids had spent some time jumping on trampolines at The Factory, they headed back up the mountain to the Episcopal Church to wrap up their goods.

"The Episcopal church began participating several years ago," said Holland. "They provide wrapping paper for the gifts, coats, hats, and other items for the children. They have been instrumental in making our experiences with the kids brighter."

Holland said they took about 16 children shopping this year and last year all tolled, Macon County took about 200 kids shopping.

It's a wonderful life

Pat Gleeson, Owner, BIC

George says, "You look older without your clothes on," which reminds all of us to have more fun, seek frivolity, and head outside to see the moon (you never know what else you'll witness).

Then there's George's Guardian Angel Clarence, who rescued George from his suicide attempt and tells us "No man is a failure who has friends," and "Each man's life touches so many other lives," and the defining line of the entire movie "You see George, you've really had A Wonderful Life."

Cue the tears please, because I'm so thankful for my friends. Highlands is the friendliest place in the U.S. (besides Bedford Falls). Listen to the bells in downtown Highlands this week and remember what Clarence said, "Every time a bell rings, an Angel gets his wings." (God's Speed Mal).

In closing, some of you may be deciding. You've been dreaming, considering, deliberating, or procrastinating about investing in property in Highlands or Cashiers. Remember what a neighbor yelled to George and Mary that night in the street, "Why don't you kiss her, instead of talking her to death." ... a lesson for all of us!

Merry Christmas! Remember, the next full Moon is January 10th!

in Bedford Falls back then was difficult because of Mr. Potter's greediness. But once the right people got involved, buying and selling in Bedford Falls became possible for all.

A healthy and thriving Bedford Falls is a lot like Highlands and Cashiers, NC. There's no better way to explain it than with a few lines from this classic movie!

George Bailey (Jimmy Stewart) had some of the best. "What is it you want Mary? You want the moon? Just say the word, and I'll throw a lasso around it and pull it down."

Highlands and Cashiers are chock-full of people, businesses, and yes Real Estate Professionals who will lasso the moon for you.

George's line to Old Man Potter as he defended the Building & Loan "My Father died a much richer man than you'll ever be." George's Dad helped people finance nice homes, but Potter took their cash and forced people to live in slums. One of my favorites is what George says to Mary when they're outside looking at the moon. Mary's robe accidentally falls off hooked on a holly bush.

O'Donnell, referring to arbitrating with Duke for the lowest rates possible. "We may just let them shop the market themselves. I prefer that. I think the choice needs to be in the hands of the citizens. What started and was snuffed out 18-20 years ago has come full circle and I do believe some time in the next 10 years you will have retail de-regulation in states and you may not have to buy power on behalf of the town's citizens by that time. Individual homeowners could do it. There are 16 states that are allowing and doing that right now and given that Duke's rates are getting way out of focus relative to the market, you are going to see more states allowing customers to do that."

That scenario, though likely good for consumers, could se-

"Welcome Christmas While We Stand, Heart to Heart and Hand to Hand..."

- Dr. Suess (from The Grinch Who Stole Christmas).

This week, several unique, mournful, interesting, and inspiring things occurred in Highlands.

The moon was full (called the "Cold Moon," and one of the prettiest I've ever seen); we lost a good friend to brain cancer way too early; and I watched a million late-night Christmas movies, when I wasn't watching the moon. Namely, The Grinch (original cartoon), White Christmas (my favorite), and It's A Wonderful Life which I saw three times because it's on 10 cable channels at the same time. You can't miss it.

All through the film, I was mesmerized by the lines in the movie and their meaning, which related well to the events of the week. I think that It's A Wonderful Life is as much about Real Estate as it is Christmas. Buying a home

What does Einstein have to do with Christmas?

By Dr. Gary Hewins
Senior Pastor
Community Bible Church

Christmas is many things to many people and seemingly nothing to many others. Whatever your perspective, you have to admit that the holiday season is typically a time to connect more with others, look at one another face-to-face, enjoy a meal together and exchange gifts. Christmas, aside from any faith component, is a holiday where people tend to care for one another more and care about other matters less.

The purpose of Christmas hasn't changed but I think our world has changed drastically. Without realizing it, we have slowly and subtly morphed into a culture that is far less "Christ-masy" or holiday-minded. We now connect more using technology and connect less on a personal, intimate basis. Albert Einstein said the following in April of 1946:

"I fear the day that technology will surpass our human interaction. The world will have a generation of idiots. I believe that the abominable deterioration of ethical standards stems primarily from the mechanization and depersonalization of our lives---a disastrous by product of science and technology. Nostra Culpa (we are to blame)."

What did this man see in the spring of 1946 that remotely compares to technology in 2019? There is a great prophetic truth in Albert's assertion. We remain frenetic, hurried and we seem to think that technology will create for us more time to do other things, but it does not. It didn't do so in 1946 and it won't come close in 2019 and it may be even more tragic 30 years from now.

We have to become far more intentional about the way we approach life and intimacy, otherwise communication will be so diluted and endangered that we will only be able to relate through text rather than embrace or laugh together.

Here is a reminder, God loves you and He intentionally sent His Son to live in this world as your representative. This advent of Christ is actually a wonderful adventure. He doesn't want to text you "lol" he wants to hear you laugh as he gives you cause to laugh. He isn't so interested in sending you an emoji face, He has a greater interest in seeing you seek His face. He made the birds in such a way that they themselves "tweet." He loves you, and more than that, he demonstrated that love on your behalf.

As this world pulls on you to objectify others, keep empathy alive. As this world wallows in polarity and divisiveness, crave unity and collaboration. Enjoy your Christmas in December but keep it in your heart throughout the winter. Love others.

Write a hand-written letter. Knock on someone's door, share a cup of tea. Look into another's eyes. Touch someone's heart. Give something of you to them. It's Christmas! Be personal for God is personal. Be generous as God is generous. Be gracious as he is gracious. It's Christmas! Connect. Share. Laugh. Enjoy. Feast. And do it in person wherever possible! Merry Christmas.

"Do not be afraid, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which will be to all people. For there is born to you this day in the city of David a Savior, who is Christ the Lord. And this will be the sign to you: You will find a Babe wrapped in swaddling cloths, lying in a manger."

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying: "Glory to God in the highest, And on earth peace, goodwill toward men!" (Luke 2:10-14)

verely cripple Highlands' bottom line since profits from its electric enterprise fund pays for much of Highlands capital outlay needs and more.

But the possibility of Highlands getting out of the electric business is years away. The town's contract with Duke is up in 2028 and no one knows if North Carolina will deregulate retail power. But, O'Donnell said in 2028 the town can either negotiate with Duke for lower prices or buy wholesale power from another company.

According to O'Donnell there are market opportunities if Highlands decides to make a move. He suggested beginning to shop for power in five years at which point Duke will likely try to entice with lower rates.

"There are several municipalities and universities who have bought power on the open market and they wouldn't have done that if the costs weren't lower," said O'Donnell.

Namely, Kings Mountain, Concord, Black Creek,

lot of money according to press reports."

O'Donnell was at the meeting to update commissioners on Duke's position and to announce the possibility of rate hikes in 2020 but he offered a lot more information.

"We will have a rate hike from Duke in 2020. The exact amount will be known in the next several days. Once we get the final wholesale rate forecast from Duke, NOVA will work with town staff to examine whether a retail rate increase is needed," he said.

Highlands' wholesale contract costs are tied to Duke's coal ash cleanup efforts and to whatever the NC Utilities Commission decides concerning Duke's requests and responsibility. So far, the NC Utilities Commission (NCUC) has sided with Duke and allowed basically whatever it wants concerning costs.

"The NCUC decided to give Duke 100% coal ash cost recovery, even though the NC coal ash law is more stringent than the federal rule," said O'Donnell. "NC Public Staff and the Attorney General appealed the case to NC Supreme Court. Oral arguments are set for some time in April. It's possible our rates could go down with an order from the NC Supreme Court."

He said there are two components to the wholesale bill – demand and energy. O'Donnell said Duke's demand rate is going to go up because it is in the process of replacing their coal generating plants.

"The good news is the energy costs will go down due to natural gas prices," said O'Donnell.

Evidently, natural gas prices fell to the floor this past summer. In Pennsylvania and the Marcellus area fracking has occurred so now the U.S. is competing with Saudi Arabia as number one in the production of oil.

"In the Marcellus area they are still trying to get the oil out and one of the byproducts is natural gas. There is so much in some places they are actually flaring the gas because they are really going after the oil. Gas is a byproduct. We want the natural gas, but there's not enough pipeline in the Marcellus area to get the gas out. As a result, natural gas prices have gone down and that will help offset the demand rate increase from Duke," he said.

O'Donnell said Duke's rates are going up and it will be filing cases to increase rates by 10% every two years for the next 10 years. So, its retail rates will be looking at a 50% increase over the next 10 years.

Mayor Pat Taylor said Highlands' rates have been "pretty flat" over the last several years because Highlands is a wholesale customer so it's immune from retail rate increases.
