HCA Healthcare gets approval for new Angel Medical Center in Franklin

The new facility will continue to cater to Highlands/Cashiers patients

By Brittney Lofthouse

The new facility will continue to cater to Highlands/Cashiers patients. At the town of Franklin’s Planning Board meeting Monday night, the board OK’d a special-use permit for the Angel Hospital replacement facility – the first step in making the facility a reality.

Citizens discuss lack of area healthcare

By Brian O’Shea

Pam Kerr, Mary Jane Bills, and Ellen Haug organized the “Concerned Citizens Health Forum” to discuss issues with the existing and future health needs in the Highlands-Cashiers area.

Of primary concern was the lack of doctors and support staff to properly serve the Plateau. Kerr said the only primary care physician currently in Cashiers is Dr. Thomas Duncan who has practices in both Highlands and Cashiers.

The problem is, Dr. Duncan is set to retire in September. So, who’s responsibility is it to retain new doctors?

HCA Healthcare bought Mission Health in February of this year for approx. $1.5B. The deal entailed the purchase of six hospitals in Western North Carolina, which includes Highlands-Cashiers Hospital and its satellites, therefore the responsibility falls on HCA.

The $1.5B went into the newly formed Highlands-Cashiers Health Foundation (formerly Highlands Hospital Foundation), which is required to give $75M annually to grants aimed at improving healthcare in WNC.

Macon County School System’s Teacher of the Year and Support Person of the Year for each school was announced last week. For Highlands School, math teacher Gina Billingsley was voted “Teacher of the Year.” The title of “Support Person of the Year” went to administrative assistant/bookkeeper, Annette Jenkins. Ballots were handed out and the Highlands School staff voted. “So essentially their peers voted for them,” said Assistant Principal Sarah Holbrooks.

AHEC funds Smart Boards for HS Middle School

Continuing the initiative to enhance learning resources at Highlands School, the Advance Highlands Education Committee (AHEC) has funded and installed six Promethean “ActivPanels” in the Middle School.

The first six installed ActivPanels are dedicated to Anne Tate, a 27-year teacher at the Highlands School, and were donated by her brother and sister-in-law, Dennis and Sheryl Wilson. Mrs. Tate, joined by current Highlands School teachers Stephanie Smathers and Gina Billingsley, got the chance to experiment with the newly installed technology on Monday, July 8, 2019.

Promethean ActivPanels have the appearance of an 85” smart tablet affixed to the wall and are designed to promote student attentiveness and engagement, which has a positive impact on comprehension and knowledge.

he buzz last week was why the mayor removed the trash dumpsters at the recreation center. I have gotten feedback about the decision.

I did not make a unitary decision to remove the dumpsters. It was a decision made by both me and the Town Manager after visiting the site and discussing the situation with Public Works Director Lamar Nix and Director of Recreation Lester Norris. The Town Board was also notified.

After seeing the huge amount of garbage that had accumulated at the site, and how garbage was carelessly thrown into recycling bins, the decision was made. The recreation center was becoming a trash dumping ground replete with odors and liquid runoff.

Last fall a recycling trailer was placed at the recreation center as a convenience for local residents. A sign posted above the trailer stated that household garbage for local residents. A sign posted above the trailer stated that household garbage should be taken to the Buck Creek for dumping ground replete with odors and liquid runoff.

I have observed people using the dumpsters on several occasions. Folks would pull up with SUVs, station wagons and trucks packed with garbage bags and cardboard. As I witnessed bag after bag being thrown into the dumpsters, I came to realize that many folks were using these dumpsters as their sole means of disposing garbage.

This site has always been monitored by cameras, rather than having an attendant on location. Recent camera footage has been matched to vehicles and local addresses. Many are county addresses, so my suspicion that the town has been providing trash services for county residents has been confirmed. We have a cooperative agreement with the Macon County Solid Waste Department in operating and supporting the recycling trailer for everyone, whether they live in the town or county, but no agreement exists with regard to household garbage.

People tell me the town can’t just remove the dumpsters and say it is not their problem. I agree with that contention. On the other hand, disposal of trash is everyone’s problem, and it will take both the town and county to find a solution. The Town Board will discuss the issue at the July meeting tonight.

A challenge is to find a centrally located property to build and operate a recycling and convenience center. Our experience at the recreation center makes it clear a center will have to be staffed. How we build this center without folks saying, “not near me,” is another challenge.

the idea that residents might drop off a bag or two of household garbage. It was a trial, wait-and-see effort.

Over the months, sanitation crews saw a growing demand, so additional dumpsters and pickups were added. The situation became so critical that three dumpsters would be filled and overflow daily. Crews had to transport these large loads and incur tipping fees at the Rich Gap transfer station. In other words, the Town of Highlands was providing a de facto trash service for people not living and paying taxes within the town limits.

Highlands Cashiers Health Foundation Board Member Paul Robshaw said HCA has assured HCHF they are working diligently to hire new doctors, but it is difficult attracting them to the area and keeping them here. Enticements to lure doctors to the Plateau include offering memberships at country clubs, but it is still a difficult process.

After Thursday’s meeting, Robshaw said he understands the community’s frustration.

“HCA is calling the shots here,” said Robshaw. “What the community is asking for is justified, they need doctors, but it’s challenging for HCA to get them here.”

Those in attendance asked why some of the annual $75M in grant money is not being used to hire doctors and Robshaw said the nonprofit HCHF cannot give money to for-profit HCA.

Walter Clark, Chairman of HCHF, attended the meeting to hear the concerns of the people. As a Cashiers resident, he said he understands there is a shortage of doctors, both in Cashiers and Highlands.

“I went to feel the tenor of meeting, to hear concerns, and see if we could help,” said Clark. “It was a good-will gesture. To hear people’s voice and see what we could do.”

Clark said HCHF can’t go out and hire physicians, but HCA/Mission can. However, HCMP can help recruit physicians to feed into whatever system is available in Highlands or Cashiers.

He said there are two issues at play; a physician shortage, and the possibility of a consolidated multi-use facility in Cashiers.

He said there are two issues at play; a physician shortage, and the possibility of a consolidated multi-use facility in Cashiers.

“These are two totally separate things and I wish I had the answer,” said Clark. “The physician shortage situation needs to be handled first and foremost. A new facility is hypothetical and is a possibility way down the road.”

The HCHF owns 8.04 acres in Cashiers, which was bought 10 years ago with the idea of building a health park on the property. HCHF has no intention of building the facility, but a developer could build one. Clark said nothing is in the works as of now.

However, since HCA/Mission owns the facility across from High Hampton on Highway 107 and a clinic facility on Slab Town Road in Cashiers, Walters said he believes HCA/Mission would like to consolidate the two in one location as a multi-purpose clinic at some point.

Development and consolidation may be in the discussion phase, but Kerr said HCA is forcing Dr. Duncan into retirement and the solution in the meantime is to have a travelling doctor come to the area to provide medical services, which she said is not enough.

Vision Cashiers is another entity in the mix. It is a nonprofit organization formed last year which took over the Village Conservancy – and it consists of seven task forces led by community members concerned about education, housing, and health and wellness.

Vision Cashiers would like to recruit physicians, too – retired and semi-retired – to fill the void in Cashiers and in Highlands. This is nothing new. For decades Highlands-Cashiers Hospital and then Mission recruited semi-retired or retired primary care physicians.

Over the years, younger recruits just don’t stay -- usually leaving after a few years -- and no one says why.

Clark said independent doctors are a possibility – like Dr. Scott Baker in Highlands – but it’s extremely costly to open and operate an independent practice.

Back in Cashiers, a petition has been created to generate support for retaining Dr. Duncan until a transition to new doctors is made.

“The goal is to get HCA to renegotiate with Dr. Duncan to stay until a full-time doctor is hired and in place.

Downtown: Highlands

Our State Magazine

A posh downtown and abundant natural beauty offer plenty of ways to relax and reset in this quiet mountain retreat.

There's a reason people come to Highlands during the summer: It's cool. At more than 4,000 feet, this mountain town has summer temperatures averaging 76 degrees, a welcome respite from the hot, muggy dog days of lower elevations.

Since it was established in 1875, Highlands has welcomed the weary to relax and rejuvenate in nature. In the late 19th and early 20th centuries, wealthy businessmen made the town their summer escape (some still do), and a hillside nearby was home to one of the state's first tuberculosis sanatoriums, where fresh air was considered the best medicine. Nowadays, cool temperatures and natural beauty are still major draws, but downtown, people can rejuvenate in other ways, too: luxurious lodging and spa treatments, fine dining and shopping, hiking and golf. Surrounded by forests, rivers, and waterfalls, and far from chain restaurants and big-box stores, travelers and summertime residents take a break from the demands of everyday life, just as they've done for nearly 150 years.

Mountain Findings continues to distribute profits to area nonprofits

Mountain Findings (your community thrift shop) continues its legacy of helping area non-profits by distributing the earnings from the retail operations to area organizations. This year’s donations totaling $181,750 go to 43 organizations whose primary missions are to make our communities a better place to live. At its annual meeting held on June 27th, the Mountain Findings volunteers awarded donations to those organizations that submitted specific, defined requests as well as to numerous continuing needs at other organizations.

A reminder is sent to charitable organizations each year, alerting them that decisions are made on an annual basis and not guaranteed. Mountain Findings does not have a formal application, a letter or e-mail is sufficient.

These donations are made possible by all of the generous donors of gently used items and by our dedicated shoppers. You are the real reason Mountain Findings is a success. Since its inception in 1969 Mountain Findings has returned more than $1.4 million back to the community.

Wouldn't you like to be a part of this exciting community-endeavor? Volunteers are needed to staff the shop’s two venues—the Cottage where you will find, china, crystal, glassware, linens, small furniture and art plus electronics and small appliances. The new Furniture warehouse which opened in 2017 is filled with sofas, chairs, chests, china cabinets, bookcases, dining tables & chairs, art, rugs, lamps and more.

Open daily Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. from May 1 through October 31, volunteers work in 3-hour shifts. Call 828-526-9929 to volunteer.

and to get immediate support for Duncan who currently has a five-week wait for an appointment because he is doing the job of two doctors and has been since January. HCA put Dr. Duncan in an untenable position without regard to consequences for our community,” said Kerr.

Kerr added that HCA has known this staffing issue would be a problem and is not doing enough to hire more doctors.

“We need the community’s support in impressing the importance of retaining the only primary care doctor here covering Cashiers, Glenville, Sapphire, and Toxaway,” she said. “Dr. Duncan is well regarded by this community as competent and caring. A temporary doctor is not a solution. Extend Dr. Duncan's contract until a full-time doctor is hired, get him the additional support needed to cover two practices now, and get a traveling doctor in now. HCA has let the situation deteriorate since January."

Those in support of Kerr’s goal can sign the petition and drop off petitions at the Albert-Carlton Cashiers Community Library or the Cashiers Rec Center.

I'm sure you’ve read about all the different ways to choose the right realtor for you. You can look at their sales record, years of experience, professional designations, the company they’re with, community service, reviews on Zillow or Realtor.com, recommendations from your friend who bought from them. These are all good ways, of course. But I’d like to go a step further and say that your emotional connection with them is really what you should look for—and it can be there, regardless of whether these things are or aren’t in the picture.

OK, I may be one of those touchy-feely types that believes in the power of the relationship itself. I know that in the therapy world the biggest predictor of successful therapy for individuals is the relationship between the therapist and client—not the type of therapy used. Trust, empathy, compassion, loyalty, a willingness for the therapist to travel this journey with you—are all important. I don’t know why that wouldn’t apply to any relationship when one person is trying to help another person achieve a certain goal. I also know that when I have a real connection with someone I am willing to put forth more effort on their behalf.

I remember several years ago when I was shopping for a new car. I went to a Subaru agency in Greenville and got with the agent on floor duty (much like someone would if they wandered into a real estate agency in Highlands with no previous agent). The agent was courteous, polite, let me drive the car of my choice around, answered my questions and offered to help. He did absolutely nothing wrong from a professional standpoint. I just didn’t connect with him. I can’t tell you why exactly, but some necessary ingredient for me was missing. I knew that I wouldn’t buy a car from him.

These days people don’t wander into real estate offices randomly like they used to when “walk ins” were a large percentage of our market. Today most people start their property searches on the internet and their first communications with agents may be pretty distanced. Still, you can get signs of how it’s going to go, even from far away. If you inquire about a property online, does the agent get back with you promptly and answer your questions to the best of their ability? Do they seem to take an interest in helping you by pointing out some of the things you wouldn’t know about just from looking online? Do they offer to send you other listings that might be of interest to you or have a phone conversation with you so they can find out more about what your goals are for this area?

If you do speak with them on the phone, do they listen more than they talk? Can you tell they are trying to get a picture of what you really want and whether it exists for what you want to spend?

Do they seem genuinely interested in helping you? Do they think of you when listings come up that meet your parameters and send those to you, whether you’re planning a trip soon, or just to educate you on what on the market? Do they keep in touch and follow up? Do you feel like they “get” what you’re looking for and they’re willing to invest their time in you?

And finally, when you meet, do you feel like you’ve found a friend, an ally, someone who is in this with you for the long haul? Do they work hard on your behalf? Are they willing and able to help you navigate all the choices out there and be your guide through the buying process, with its hills and valleys, obstacles and surprises? If so, you’ve found a meaningful connection in a realtor and a person, one that will last beyond the sale and may become a lifelong friendship.

If you’re working with a “ho hum” agent who doesn’t seem all that interested in helping you, move on. Look for the ones that make you smile when you think of them, the ones you’d like to recommend to your best friends. Look not for a run-of-the-mill experience, but one that can create magic when you team up together.

It’s season on the Highlands-Cashiers Plateau. Our day-trippers, weekenders, vacationers, and our treasured summer people are here. This becomes clear as soon as you try to walk into a restaurant, park a car, or navigate a retail shop.

And, it’s all good!

Those of us who live here all year long look forward to the vibrancy, energy, and ringing of cash registers throughout the area. Occasionally though, we are reminded you’re here in some humorous ways.

I volunteer at The Bookworm one afternoon every week, so I manage to come in contact with many first-time visitors. We go through the, “Where’s the nearest Starbucks? Where’s the nearest Olive Garden? Where’s the nearest Macy’s” questions, and always, patiently, I direct these folks, who want to be here and home at the same time, to Ingle’s in Cashiers, Arden, just past Asheville airport, and Haywood Mall in Greenville, respectively.

Some don’t like the answers, but we do what we can.

The amusing questions are also asked with a straight face but it’s sometimes hard to answer them the same way. I won’t address the one about when we turn the waterfalls on and off. We don’t.

“Where do we go to see bears?” That one always gets a quick smile before I realize they are serious.

“Well,” I typically begin, “there is no specific ‘viewing area’ kind of place, if that’s what you’re asking.”

“But, we came up here (from Florida, Atlanta, South Carolina, etc.) to see bears!”

“You do realize,” I say, “that black bears are wild animals, right?”

“But we …”

“We don’t have a zoo here on the plateau,” I say, patiently, “but the truth is, all of us live inside the Nantahala National Forest, so you can stumble across a bear, a coyote, a bobcat, and lots of other animals, birds, flora and …”

“But, isn’t there a place where we can look at them? And take pictures?”

Sigh. At this point I usually direct them to Highlands Hiker or the Visitors Center. I once came close to suggesting that a particularly tenacious young couple camp out in my driveway, but I didn’t do that because they might not have realized I was joking.

Another great question, and by ‘great’ I mean, ‘oh, good grief,’ is, “Why are all the roads around here so twisty? The twisty roads make me nauseous.”

I sympathize. The roads had the same effect on me until I acclimated.

“Do you know where you are?” I ask, and then quickly add, “In geographical terms, I mean?”

Blank stares. “Highlands?”

Sigh. “First, we are in the southern Blue Ridge portion of the Appalachian Mountains. Second, we are positioned in and among actual mountains. Straight roads are, for the most part, not an option. Third, we are, depending where you happen to be standing, at an altitude of approximately 4,000 feet. This means that if where you’re going is up or down a hill or mountain, you can’t go straight up or straight down. You have to kind of wind your way up over gradual inclines or declines.”

Blank stares again, so I try another tack.

“Okay. This all used to be Cherokee territory,” I explain. “The Cherokee built … wrong word … they cut, or blazed trails through the forest that helped them, often on horseback, get from one place to another. Many of our paved roads follow those trails. I’m sure you’ve noticed that the roads into and out of Highlands are all two-way, two-lane roads, right?”

This question is typically met with vigorous head nodding and eye clarity.

“Yes! I was going to ask about that! Why are there no four-lane roads? Especially on that crazy road between Highlands and, what’s that place, Franklin?”

Sigh. They are, of course, talking about US Highway 64 West, what locals refer to as the gorge road.

“That road has been designated one of the prettiest scenic drives in the United States,” I say, proudly. “And, it runs alongside and above the Cullasaja Gorge, and Dry Falls, and Bridal Veil Falls, which demonstrates why it’s only one lane each way.” At this point I’m working to keep my voice at a conversational level.

“Okay, thanks,” they say, and head off, in search, I suppose, of Starbucks, or Olive Garden, or Macy’s.

Just to be clear, we’re delighted you’re all here, day trippers, weekenders, vacationers, summer people, etc.

Watch out for bears, pay attention on the roads, and have a wonderful time on our plateau.

THE CURIOUS MIND KNOWS NO BOUNDS

Water tank is almost ready

Mayor Pat Taylor is inside the new Satulah water tank. The new tank holds 600,000 gallons; the old tank held 200,000. The new tank is prestressed concrete; the concrete for the old tank was poured in place and it had deteriorated. It will be on line in about 90 days.
All About Books

• The Ink Penn•

Colorado Mysteries by Stephen White

Books by Stephen White are some of my favorites, but I’d all but forgotten him because he ended his series six years ago. He wrote twenty Alan Gregory mysteries from 1991 – 2013, and I was sorry to see the series end. Most of his fans are likely wishing he’d pick it back up, and for those of you who haven’t encountered his books, you have plenty to look forward to.

Alan Gregory is a psychologist with a practice in Boulder, Colorado who somehow, time after time, finds himself involved in homicide investigations. A cadre of complex well-developed characters appear as regulars in his life throughout all twenty books: his partner Diane Estevez, the beautiful District Attorney Lauren Crowder, and the cranky Detective Sam Purdy.

Gregory is a cyclist who unwinds with long-distance rides through the mountains surrounding Boulder. As someone who used to cycle more regularly and also took quite a few bicycling vacations, I enjoy reading about that aspect of his character. I, however, much prefer cycling flat areas with a hill only here and there—no mountains.

I also enjoy the descriptions of the Colorado scenery and get a kick out of plot points occasionally occurring in towns I’ve visited on vacations. And a dog—there’s usually a dog or two in the books.

One of the main characters has MS, and White says that about “50% of his mail involves readers’ reactions” to that character and that “people who have MS or work with MS patients have been especially supportive.” I have a friend with MS, and I have learned a lot about the disease, how it manifests itself, and its treatment by reading these books.

As with most series, I recommend starting with the first book, “Privileged Information.” It’s been so long, I can’t recall if I read it first or not, but if I didn’t, I know I went back and started at the beginning once I discovered the author. I like to follow characters as they develop so if I stumble across a book in the midst of a series, I feel compelled to find the series start and move forward from there.

Interestingly, I’ve always assumed the 1997 novel “Remote Control” was inspired by the JonBenet Ramsey case, but have since learned the draft of the novel was completed prior to those events. It’s an eerie coincidence.

As a writer, I like to read what a novelist’s process is. White says he doesn’t always know where his characters will end up when he starts a book. Surfing his website, I found he’d participated in a six-word memoir challenge in 2009. I think most writers would appreciate his six words, “Live, read. Love, read. Write, rewrite.” Isn’t that what the writing life is all about?

plans to build a new hospital in Franklin in May 2017, just after announcing it would be shutting down the hospital’s labor and delivery unit. When Mission Hospital finalized the buyout with HCA HealthCare, the state’s approval included a caveat that HCA keep Mission’s original commitment to build the new hospital.

HCA Healthcare, which operates 185 hospitals and 1,800 care sites in 21 states and the United Kingdom, purchased all of Mission Health care for $1.5 billion earlier this year. That includes six hospitals in WNC including two in Macon County, Angel Medical Center and the Highlands-Cashiers Hospital.

Currently, the Highlands-Cashiers Hospital is a weigh-station from where patients are mainly sent either to Angel Medical Center or Mission Health in Asheville for surgical procedures. Therefore, the new hospital would continue to cater to patients in the Highlands/Cashiers area.

During a public comment period on the relocation of Angel Medical Center in December 2017, administrators proposed constructing a two-story, 82,600 sq. ft. hospital with 30 acute-care beds and three operating rooms near the intersection of US Highway 23/441 and Hunnicut Lane in Franklin. This is approximately one mile from the existing hospital. At the time, the project was expected to cost $45 million and be completed in October 2022.

Interestingly, the replacement hospital at 82,500 sq. ft. will be about one-third the size of the current facility which sits at around 140,000 sq. ft.

HCA remains on track with that plan as the town’s planning board approved the required special-use permit Monday night. According to Franklin Town Planner Justin Setser, a special-use permit is required for any building over 30,000 sq. ft. within the city limits. Based on HCA’s application to the town, the proposed facility will be 82,500 sq. ft.

The land where the new hospital is supposed to be built is currently owned by Entegra Bank, but according to the special-use application, HCA is under contract to purchase it. Hunnicut Lane is an extension of East Main Street when it cross US Highway 23/441 near the Entegra corporate center.

The new facility will be a critical-access hospital, meaning it will have no more than 25 beds. The new facility is planned to feature more space for behavioral and mental health patients, a need that has increased in recent years.

Setser said the next step for HCA is for the town of Franklin to hold a public comment period on the special-use permit during the August board meeting of the Franklin Town Council. Following a public comment period, the town would have to approve the special-use permit before the project could move forward.

I
t's hard to believe we are already halfway through summer. In just a few weeks, our children will start back to school.

I still remember, like it was yesterday, the start of another school year. I remember tying up new pairs of shoes, organizing all the perfectly sharpened pencils, and carefully arranging the subject tabs of my binder. But what I remember, maybe more clearly than all the items I packed into my backpack, were the emotions I carried with me on the first day of class. I’m sure you can recall those same feelings of anticipation, uncertainty, excitement, and every other emotion that accompanied you to school after the long days of summer.

While I’m not sure I want to relive those first days of class again, I do find myself longing for that great sense of anticipation that marked so much of my childhood. The kind of anticipation born from the knowledge that there is still more of the world to experience and discover.

Part of the loss of such anticipation is born, I think, from the false notion that growth, discovery, and development are categories reserved for children and youth alone. To put it another way, it is the misguided idea that we adults have already “grown up.”

Thanks be to God, that life in Christ doesn’t allow for such narrow ways of thinking! The Christian tradition, like many other faith traditions, doesn’t assume we will ever stop growing, learning, or discovering more about God and the world he has made. There is a verse in Psalm 27 in which the psalmist declares “You [God] speak in my heart and say, “seek my face.” The psalmist replies: “Your face, Lord, I will seek.” This verse affirms and tells us that the Spirit of God is always reaching out to God’s people in order to draw us out of our own selves and into the fathomless depths of God’s life and love.

Saint Augustine, one of the great Church Fathers, observed that “we seek [God], because [God has] already found us.” What a remarkable claim! But Saint Augustine also asked, “How can you draw close to God if you are already far from your own self?” It seems if we are not in touch with ourselves, it will be very difficult to be in touch with God.

As our children and grandchildren head back to school may we strive to rediscover the great anticipation of our childhood. The first step to such recovery might be getting in touch with our own hearts - what we fear, what we love, what we hope for, and what we most deeply desire. Reading the scripture of our own lives, and an openness to the next human moment, might allow for the kind of anticipation that prayerfully looks for God’s life and action in the world around us.
