Study shows plenty of land for future growth

By Kim Lewicki

The bottom line is Highlands has enough vacant land to support future growth.

That’s how Eleanor Matthews with Marketek summed up the findings of her company’s growth analysis study at the April 21 Town Board meeting.

Marketek used data from the 2000 Census, GIS findings and various other data bases to project population growth and to provide an inventory of land available for residential development in the town.

“The juncture between these two trends is a good platform for you to do some land use and infrastructure planning for the future,” she said. Though the study projects the number of seasonal and year-round households to only increase a total of 42 each year from 2003 to 2025 – which translates to a total of 112 people each year – Matthews said those figures are based on what statisticians see now.

“Those figures could increase based on decisions you make that...”

Public works committee outlines plan

By Kim Lewicki

The public works committee met last week to discuss everything from planters and sidewalks, to litter and land acquisition.

At the April 21 Town Board meeting, Town Administrator Richard Betz presented the board with the committee’s recommendations.

High on the list was cleaning up and formalizing the entrances to town now cluttered with various church and civic organization signs.

Commissioners said there is nothing in the town ordinance prohibiting the signage and agreed that if an ordinance was adopted people could “just move the signs outside the town limits.”

“We need to talk to the county to see if it will entertain adopting a sign ordinance,” said Commissioner Herb James.

Commissioner Amy Patterson said banning signs wouldn’t work. “It’s true. They will just move them down the road. It’s better if we do something so that we have some kind of control over the appearance.”

Committee member John Cleaveland agreed to submit some “entrance” designs he’s seen in other cities for consideration.

Open-air vegetable market coming

By Kim Lewicki

It took some haggling — and as a result officials will work to close a loophole in the ordinance — but very soon Highlands will have an open-air vegetable market to add to its charm.

At the April 15 Zoning Board meeting, members deliberated over whether to allow a new temporary structure to be built in the setback on the August Produce property on U.S. 64 west. Temporary structures in the setback have been allowed in the past, but members wondered if the action represented “the spirit of the ordinance.”

Dear Editor,

On behalf of the Highlands Chamber of Commerce, I want to thank all the citizens and groups who came out for the Gorge Road Cleanup last Saturday. It shows that many people including a lot of our young people care about Highlands and preserving our beauty.

I hesitate to single anyone out but special thanks need to go several who went above and beyond. Jack Philpott, Lambert Chandler, and Mike King put up the signs and area designations. Tay and Tamara Bronaugh prepared the hamburgers and hot dogs for our workers. Doc Wilson provided the cooker. Bryson’s helped with the food. The US Forest Service picked up the bagged trash. Special thanks also to the Highlands Rotary Club, the Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, and the many individuals who gave up their Saturday morning to help our town.

Citizens clean up Gorge Rd

Dear Editor,

Adam Sackman and Nathan Heffington were two of the youths who turned out for the semi-annual litter pick up along U.S. 64 west from Highlands to Cliffside Lake. 100 32-gallon bags of garbage were filled. Hubcaps are a normal find along the road, but this year Nathan found a complete toilet. Not a toilet seat.

Changes at HealthTracks

Dear editor,

I want to thank the many people of Highlands, Cashiers and surrounding communities who have allowed HealthTracks to serve them for the last 10 years. It has been my opportunity to help the hospital provide our communities with health and wellness options that were not available in this area before HealthTracks. It has been a great pleasure in seeing many of you pursue healthier choices that have made a difference in your quality of life and health.

I also want to take this opportunity to thank The Highlander, The Cashiers Chronicle, and The Highlands Newspaper, along with WHLC radio, for their support in helping to publicize our various fitness programs and activities.

I am retiring from the hospital to become the director of health and fitness at the Country Club of Sapphire Valley. I again want to thank you as my clients and friends for supporting HealthTracks during a decade of growth, and I ask you to continue your support of HealthTracks and Highlands-Cashiers Hospital. God bless.

Mayor calls for Congressional support to restore area lakes

After more than a decade of effort, including close collaboration with both the Mirror Lake Improvement Association (MLIA) and Lake Sequoyah Improvement Association (LSIA), and numerous interactions with government entities, the town of Highlands is now working closely with members of the North Carolina congressional delegation to secure needed federal support.

Highlands Mayor Buck Trott in March visited the offices of influential lawmakers in Congress to discuss the Town’s Water Remediation and Preservation Project. The project is intended to restore Highlands area lakes including Lake Sequoyah and Mirror Lake.

Mayor Trott wanted to impress upon Members of Congress the extent of the water resources problem facing the Town which impacts upon the western North Carolina region.

He provided a detailed synopsis of the silt and sedimentation of the lakes and highlighted how water quality would continue to be eroded should the situation not be remedied. “The folks I met with were very perceptive and had a genuine interest in preserving the Highlands area lakes,” said Mayor Trott.

The purpose of the meetings was to urge lawmakers to support federal funding for the project in the annual appropriations cycle.

“I felt very positive about the conversations, this is what we need to get this thing done,” he said.

Lake Sequoyah, the primary water supply for the town of Highlands, was formed in the late 1920s when a dam was engineered across the Cullasaja River.

A serious silting problem in the lake began with the building boom in Highlands which affects the other three lakes that feed into Lake Sequoyah as well. The build up of silt has been the source of numerous studies and is of tremendous concern for people living in and around the town as it is a threat to the natural resource base of Highlands.

In 2003 officials decided that more needed to be done and sooner rather than later. They focused their energies on remedying the problem facing the community and banded together to find a solution.

In the spring of last year, a task force, named the Lakes Restoration Task Force, was formed. The task force consisted of representatives from the Mirror Lake Improvement Association (MLIA), the Lake Sequoyah Improvement Association (LSIA), the Upper Cullasaja Watershed Association (UCWA), and the Town Board.

On August 6, the Town Board voted unanimously to take the lead on the project to restore the lakes, now known as the Water Remediation and Preservation Project.

Town officials have worked for some time to address the silting of the lakes, and has made expenditures towards that end. But it became clear that the town needed some outside support from the federal government to truly mitigate the problem effectively. “We have already made large expenditures and time to address the situation, and I’m confident that with the right help we can apply a long term solution to our water problem,” said Mayor Trott.

Trott said he’s optimistic that the support of North Carolina lawmakers will enable the town to carry out the Water Remediation and Preservation Project.

As I am sitting down to write this weekly column late one Monday evening, I am struck by my loss for words or ideas. It’s probably due to the frantic pace I am traveling in life right now. It’s temporarily, thank goodness, but it has a way of sucking out my creativity. It may be that I just have to sleep on it and begin again in the wee hours of the morning. Good morning!

Since I was struggling again this morning with what words to put on paper, it finally came to me. Why not write about “words”? I just need a few words to write this column and hold the hope that in some small way my words might influence you to stop and think, if only for a moment. Just how important is using the “right” word? I hate you. I love you. Feel any different after reading those few words? What about it you heard them over and over, either in your own head or from the mouth of someone else?

In today’s world it is hard to pick up a newspaper or turn on the television without being barraged with news about violence.

Poet Maya Angelou talks about the power of words. She said that words are like little energy pellets that shoot forth into the invisible reality of life. I remember when she was on the Oprah show and she talked about the fact that even though we cannot see words, they become energy that fills a room, home, environment, and our minds. She went so far as to say that they stick to our surrounding walls. Even if you don’t agree with the above, it might be worth giving it some thought.

When you reflect on negative words, the toxicity permeates the air. Words that form in your head carry as much power, maybe even more, than the spoken word. Sometimes the words rummaging about in your mind carry even more weight because we may not recognize the impact that they are leaving in our life.

Remember the saying, sticks and stones can break my bones but words can never hurt me? I wonder.

A delightful friend of mine, Jodi Walker, wrote a book, Share a Kind Word.

She talks about how to use the infinite power of words to enhance your life at home and work, highlighting the important of spreading kind words.

Words influence your actions and the actions of others. What words do you want to speak? Words of encouragement and compassion or words that dilute your energy and that of the universe? Kind words can create a powerful, positive energy that can flow like a fall leaf blowing through the wind without ever touching the ground.

A few tips:
1. Begin to monitor your words.
2. Take time to observe how others receive your words.
3. Track your “kind” words.
4. Recognize how you have impacted others at the end of the day.
5. Celebrate the dream to transform the world – one word at a time.

“Our lives are what our thoughts create, and our words plant the seeds of kindness.” Jodi Walker

The police and ‘Mother Teresa’ –
A blessed event

By Fred Wooldridge

Columnist

She barely reached five feet in height and with her shoulders slumped forward, she looked even shorter. We called her Mother Teresa because cops love to give nicknames to people who are weird or unusual. Mother Teresa was most definitely unusual.

Each morning, just after dawn, she would dress in her dark cloak and place her prayer cloth over her head. Picking up her cane with a Jewish flag attached, she would leave her tiny efficiency and head for work. On most mornings, a cardboard box of Matzo-thins hung from a string around her arm. Even though she only lived a short distance from police headquarters on Miami Beach, it took her quite some time to get to work, shuffling along, but determined to complete her mission.

Mother Teresa’s self appointed job was to bless things: everything, in fact. Starting in the police motor pool, she would pull a self made gizmo from her cloak with feathers on the end. Standing in front of each squad car, she would recite her blessing, otherwise she would shock visitors standing at the urinals by blessing them as they completed their mission. Then, off to the Chief’s office to give him her morning blessing. Finding the door locked, she would demand to enter. If the Chief was not busy, he would walk out to get his morning blessing.

Rand Soellner’s home designs feature beautiful Mountain timber elevations with wide, open plans with tall ceilings and the most value-engineered systems available. “I am just completing a knoll top design for a client in Glenville, NC that has 5 bedrooms, 5 bathrooms, Great Room-Kitchen-Dining, Family Room, Loft-Study, and attached 2- car garage with driveway and sitework. The builder has quoted a price of $275,000. This is about half to one-third of normal prices for nice mountain homes on the Highlands-Cashiers-Toxaway Plateau,” said Soellner.

The key to this kind of success is in designing a plan that meets the client’s needs and orients to mountain views, keeping foundation costs low, using/creating value-oriented systems that are solid, then working with local Realtors and appraisers to have the look and features that will appreciate in value when people want to resell the home.

Rand Soellner Architect shares office space in Wright Square, in Highlands, next to Nantahala Realty.

NL West
Los Angeles Dodgers — The Good: Eric Gagne is automatic at the end of games with a plus fastball, knee buckling curve and nasty changeup. The Bad: The Dodger lineup has looked good so far, but there isn’t a lot of power to support the pitching. The Ugly: The Dodgers starting pitching includes Jeff Weaver and Wilson Alvarez.

San Diego Padres — The Good: The Fajahs (thanks Austin Powers) have arguably the best lineup in the national league with Giles, Klesko, and Phil Nevin providing power and infielders Mark Loretta and Khalil Green providing the speed. The Bad: The starting pitching is young and talented, but not proven and could dig the Fajahs a hole to start the season before finding their groove. Boomer Wells looks like your neighborhood beat cop but can still get the job done at 40 years old. The Ugly: The bullpen behind Trevor Hoffman and Jay Witasick leaves much to be desired.

San Francisco Giants — The Good: Duh, Barry Bonds. What more needs to be said? The guy is the best hitter of our generation and perhaps the best of all time, with or without a steroid controversy. Big muscles don’t mean less strikeouts, a .600 OBP and a zillion walks. The Bad: The rotation is in dire straits behind Jason Schmidt and Kirk Reuter. The Ugly: The lineup around Bonds is littered with mediocrity, and the bullpen is a mess. Felix Rodriguez hasn’t thrown a slider in 2 years.

Colorado Rockies — The Good: The Rockies have the best kept secret in the majors in Todd Helton. The guy is an amazing ballplayer. The Bad: The pen was so bad last year that they are hoping Shawn Chacon can become John Smoltz in the closers role—great idea, but how do they get to him? The Ugly: Starting pitching? In Coors? Dream on my friends—until the Rockies get a duo like Schilling and Randy or Rocket and Pettite they have no shot.

Arizona Diamondbacks — The Good: The Snakes have some good young talent in the lineup that will get better as the season progresses. The Bad: Randy Johnson ain’t getting any younger, and will still win 15 games this year, but won’t be quite as dominant as he starts his downward slide. The Ugly: Closer Matt Mantei is pitching with an arm made of chewing gum and bailing wire, and the rest of the pen isn’t solid enough to handle the top lineups.

NL CENTRAL
Houston Astros — The Good: Starting Pitching, and lots of it. Lots of variety in styles and a good mix of youth and experience. The Bad: Bagwell and Biggio are getting older, but they can still provide offense to go along with Berkman and Morgan Ensberg—who is going to have a monster year. The Ugly: Closer Octavio Dotel has not looked comfortable, and the Astros have to have a reliable closer to finish games for Pettite, Rocket, and Oswalt. I definitely foresee a trade for Ugie Urbina in their future.

Chicago Cubs — The Good: Starting Pitching. Even with Prior out they still have three great young arms in Zambrano, Clement and Wood—however, with the way Dusty overworks pitchers look for them to be gassed in September. The Bad: The bullpen is full of talent but lacks defined roles. Borowski is a great guy to root for but he really doesn’t have closing stuff and would be a great setup man. Farnsworth has closers stuff but lacks the control and mentality. Latroy Hawkins might be a good option if Borowski falters. The Ugly: The Cubs have the potential to be the worst defensive team in baseball. 3B ARam is an error machine, and the outfield doesn’t have the speed and range to be effective.

St. Louis Cardinals — The Good: Their lineup is fantastic and can beat you with a 3 run blast or string together some hits. Oh yeah, they have a pretty good player by the name of Albert something or other—maybe you have heard of him. The Bad: Their starters need more depth. Matt Morris is coming back from injury and Woody Williams can’t keep working miracles. The Ugly: Setup man Steve Kline’s hat—it hasn’t been washed in a decade.

Pittsburgh Pirates — The Good: The Bucs have good young starters in Kip Wells, Kris Benson, Oliver Perez and Ryan Vogelsong. Unfortunately they can’t afford Benson and will trade him for some prospects in April. The Bad: The majors worst bullpen last year didn’t exactly improve this year adding Jose Mesa, which automatically ruins any bullpen mojo. The Ugly: Lloyd McClendon’s dreams. After getting this team to stay out of the cellar the last two years with absolutely no talent, Lloyd has to be kicking himself at the thought of another August fire sale.

Cincinnati Reds — The Good: The Reds have a solid lineup with Adam Dunn, Griffey and Sean Casey. The Bad: Their bullpen is horrid after losing Chris Reitsma and moving Danny Graves back into the closers role. The Ugly: Starting Pitching, and range to be effective.

Milwaukee Brewers — The Good: The Brew Crew are at least trying to develop some pitching. Danny Kolb looks like a good one in the bullpen. The Bad: Scott Depardieu is positively brilliant in this role, far and away the best work of his career, and was obviously having the time of his life doing it. The beautiful Roxanne, played by the beautiful Anne Brochet also does a wonderful job, sighing, swooning, longing, the whole bit. Even the role of Christian, that could often be played by a cardboard cutout in most film or stage versions of this story, is well and fully played by Vincent Perez.

For those not familiar with the storyline of one of the most famous love stories of all time, in brief, Cyrano, the brilliant warrior poet can do anything, fight 100 swordsmen, compose hilarious acidic poetry off the cuff, leap over walls and tables and people, but he cannot tell the beautiful Roxanne that he loves her. He worships from afar, convinced that with his enormous nose, he is too ugly to be loved. Roxanne loves Christian, and Cyrano, who's heart is as big as his nose, will do anything to ensure her happiness, composes wonderfully romantic love letters for the handsome but tongue tied Christian. Love, intrigue, and tragedy ensue, Cyrano keeps his secret to the end, Roxanne finds out the truth just in time for the tears to fall.

An amazing production, and at 17 million dollars to produce, the most expensive film in French film history, requiring a cast of 2,000, 14 different sets, and 1,000 weapons, the film garnered a list of awards longer than, well, a really big nose. The English subtitles do justice to the poetry and dialogue, reproducing the meter and meaning of the story perfectly. A must see for fans of French film, romance, Depardieu, and period pieces.

Some similar films are Much Ado about Nothing, Three Musketeers (any of the versions, there are many), Man in the Iron Mask, Jean de Florette, Les Miserables, Queen Margot, and more. A good reworking of the story was done by Steve Martin, titled Roxanne, is also worth giving a look.

These and about 5,000 other titles, on VHS and DVD, are available at Movie Stop, stop on by and give them a look.
become indignant and pull a short, dead palm branch from her cloak, wave it in the air violently, placing a very loud curse on everyone around her. Eventually, an officer would be called to escort her from the building. When he would gently grab her arm, she would resist as best she could, putting a double whammy curse on her assailant as she was forcefully escorted from the building. In her excitement, she would lose control of her bladder, which really made a mess.

We only had her committed once. The psychiatrist’s report concluded that, while she was a might eccentric, she was harmless. She loved God and felt her calling was to bless everything within her reach. Surely a large police department could tolerate a person who only blesses things, the report concluded.

For reasons I will never understand, I became the only person on planet Earth that could escort this woman from the building without a battle or a mess on the floor. The janitors loved me. It became a ritual. I would approach her smiling, extending my arm in a gentlemanly fashion and say, “Madam, may I have the honor?” After a quick blessing, she would slide her arm into mine and we would slowly leave the building. There was a bond between us.

Mother Teresa’s visits lasted for about five years. Eventually she got so old she was unable to climb the front steps and had to settle for just blessing the motor pool and any officers who might be passing. She once got arrested in a supermarket for refusing to leave until she was finished blessing the cabbage. They, too, had the mops out.

I once drove by Mother Teresa, standing, slump shouldered, in a blinding, cold rain, clinging to a stop sign post and staring into space as her drenched cardboard Matzo box disintegrated. Like the rest of the world, I passed her by. Even though I am certain she would have refused my offer of a ride, I still regret, to this day, not stopping.

Abruptly, she stopped visiting us. Weeks later, her badly decomposed body was found on the floor of her flat. She had died of heart failure. We later learned she was not born Jewish, but a Catholic Pole, fleeing Poland with her parents just before Hitler took the country. (Most folks don’t realize that Hitler also murdered many Catholics.) Somewhere along the way, she adopted the Jewish faith. What happened after that was unclear. She had entered the US through Ellis Island and was alone in the world. No family, no friends, just a crazy old coot, who had absolutely no one in her life.

I can’t think of anything worse than being completely alone in the world. God was her only friend and that was fine with her. We buried her at paupers’ field, next to One Arm Whitey, a derelict with a nasty disposition. She deserved better than to have to lie next to him.

I miss Mother Teresa. You know what? Her blessing would feel pretty good right now.
Highlands’ Historical Society’s Historic Village damaged by vandals

By Wiley Sloan
Contributor

Over the past seven or eight days, the Highland’s Historic Society’s Prince House at the Highlands Historic Village has been vandalized. Three window panes have been broken.

Luther Turner, President of the Society, discovered the first damage on Tuesday, April 20. A rock was found lying in the floor of the office area. It had apparently been hurled through a window on the east side of the building. (the side closest to the Recreation Park). The second broken window was discovered a couple of days later when a board member went to the house to repair the window. Tuesday April 27, Turner found another broken window pane.

The society will try to replace the panes with the same old, wavy glass that was broken.

Turner reported the incident to the police who said additional patrols would keep watch on the Prince House. Town officials said security cameras would be installed on the property to help the police in their investigation.

“Luckily, so far, the damage that has occurred has not been excessively expensive,” said Turner. “The bigger concern is that someone shows so little respect for historic properties here in the area. The Historic Society works diligently to promote the heritage of our community and we are disappointed that there are folks who do not respect the property.” If anyone has any information about the person or persons who have caused this damage, please call the Historic Society at 787-1050.

Posednik is killing people but has no lineup protection and ain’t getting any. The Ugly: The Bratwurst races, Bud Selig’s hair, need I go on?

NL EAST

Florida Marlins — The Good: The Marlins have a dominant staff, with Beckett and Penny both in the upper 90s, Pavano with a great sinking fastball and Willis with a great heater as well, no one can touch these guys when they are on. The Bad: The lineup will miss Pudge but looks to replace him with Luis Castillo, who looks like a phenom. The Ugly: Having Armando Benitez closing is always a scary prospect, plus you have to wonder about Chad Fox’s arm strength after pitching a career high in innings last year.

Philadelphia Phillies — The Good: This is supposed to be their year, with the addition of closer Billy Wagner who throws the best lefty smokeball around. The bullpen looks set with underrated Rheal Cormier setting up and Wagner shutting the door. The Bad: Lineup inconsistency will plague this team all season. Pat Burrell is a head case and they depend entirely too much on Jim Thome. The Ugly: The starters look like they could be headed for a total breakdown. Vincente Padilla has not improved since setting the league on fire a couple of years ago. Kevin Millwood keeps losing steam on his fastball and the back of their rotation is lacking a power arm.

Atlanta Braves — The Good: John Smoltz closing games is about as good as it gets. He could be starting his down slide as he is getting older, but an older Smoltz is still better than most. The Bad: Their lineup is getting thinner with the loss of Sheffield and Lopez-the Braves are going to have to score runs with speed and timely hitting rather than pure power. The Ugly: Gone are the days of Maddux and Glavine-the Braves have some arms, but Jaret Wright has to continue using the REJUVENATOR (trademark Ryan and Josh) and Mike Hampton and Russ Ortiz must keep the Braves in ballgames.

New York Mets — The Good: Piazza may be fresher at the end of the year by taking some time off from behind the plate, and Kaz Matsui will make an impact at the top of the order. The Bad: Their defense is horrid, which hurts pitchers Tom Glavine and Al Leiter because they don’t strike many guys out. The Ugly: Braden Looper closing? 47-year old John Franco out. The Bad: Their lineup is getting thinner with the loss of Sheffield and Lopez-the Braves are going to have to score runs with speed and timely hitting rather than pure power. The Ugly: Gone are the days of Maddux and Glavine-the Braves have some arms, but Jaret Wright has to continue using the REJUVENATOR (trademark Ryan and Josh) and Mike Hampton and Russ Ortiz must keep the Braves in ballgames.

Montreal/Puerto Rico Expos — The Good: Well…Jose Vidro will play hard because he is in a contract year. The Bad: The starters lose their ace to the Evil Empire and now depend on Livan Hernandez to be the number one guy. I repeat, Livan Hernandez is their number one starter. The Ugly: The Expos “home” schedule-it’s bad enough having to play in two separate home cities, but it is even worse when they are thousands of miles apart. Bud Selig should be ashamed of this situation.
Considering what he’s been through, he’s doing amazingly well

Reverend Stephen Hines
The Episcopal Church of the Incarnation

Did you see the following news item a few months back? (Reuters). In an amazing story of canine survival, a dog named Dosha has shown she has nearly as many lives as the average cat.

Dosha was his by a car near her owner’s Clearlake, Calif., home on April 15. Next a police officer shot her in the heat to put her out of her misery. Then, presumed dead, she was put in a freezer at the local animal control center.

Two hours later, when the veterinarian opened the door to the freezer, she was shocked to find Dosha, a 10-month-old mixed-breed dog, standing upright in a plastic orange bag – the equivalent of a human body bag.

Appearing on NBC’s Today Show, Dosha seemed in fine spirits. “She’s doing amazingly well,” said veterinarian Deborah Sally, “considering what she’s been through.”

One can almost imagine the disciples saying the same thing about Jesus after the resurrection: “He’s doing amazingly well, considering what he’s been through.” But of course there is a huge difference between the two experiences. Dosha escaped death with an amazing amount of luck. Jesus, on the one hand, conquered death by surrendering his self – his ego – to God, totally, 100 percent. With that in mind we pray that the God who raised Jesus form the dead will help us die daily to sin that we may live in the power of Jesus’ resurrection.

From Highlands to the sea

In November 2003, Bruce Oliver started planning a kayaking trip that would test his endurance and that of his son, Worth. The two decided to paddle the Savannah River.

The headwaters of the Savannah start here in Highlands and flow for more than 350 miles to the Atlantic Ocean.

Bruce and Worth embarked on their two-month trip on March 25. They packed two sea kayaks with enough food and gear to last them four weeks. Since March 25 they have portaged four dams, rough-camped on islands and abandoned campground, survived thunder storms and met some incredible people.

Along the way Cindy Oliver, Bruce’s wife and Worth’s mom, has been meeting them to restock supplies. She will pick them up in Savannah on Tybee Island and haul them back to Highlands as soon as she gets the call.

Contributor

It begins at Whiteside Mountain as a drop and comes out in springs at places like Terrapin Mountain or Norton Creek. We all know streams that feed the Cahtooga which joins up with the Chauga and Seneca rivers to become the Savannah River. Westfork, Overflow, Clear Creek, all begin the journey south from here. Worth and I decided to join them – to see the land and people who share life with this river we call the Savannah.

My family and I have walked the mountains and paddled the headwaters and yet we were unprepared for the sight of Osprey nesting and hunting Lake Russell. The late night call of the Blue Herons on Lake Hartwell woke us up, and the amorous call of turkey toms serenaded us at breakfast.

Many have forgotten or never heard the whippoorwill, screech owl or the strange bark of a fox when it discovers who is camping in its territory.

We have become so busy building, making, doing that we have forgotten we were created not as human doings but human beings. Worth and I have spent time just learning how to breathe again, how to listen and how to depend on each other for everything.

This isn’t some safe-guide tour. Worth and I decided at the beginning to finish this trip no matter how hard or how dangerous.

The best part of this journey has been seeing my 15-year-old son become a man. When others see problems, he sees possibilities. When others see barriers, he has learned to wait for God to open the next door and most importantly, he is learning not to measure himself against other men, but against himself.

If Highlands should ever do another Iron Man Contest, I would like to propose a new event – portaging 300 pounds of boats and gear over Lake Thurmond Dam. We have portaged four dams and short of the Lord’s help, I would not have made it. Worth did fine, but it took it out of the Old Man.

Well, we are past the dams and headed for the city of Savannah, Ga., 200 miles away. We hope to finish in 20 more days. We miss the mountains.

When Bruce and Worth return they will furnish Highlands’ Newspaper with a follow-up article about their journey.

Bruce, 48, and Worth, 15, Oliver left from Yonah Dam in Toccoa, Ga. and began their 350 mile trek to the Atlantic Ocean and Savannah, Ga. Cindy says Bruce has lost 20 pounds and Worth has grown three inches since March.
A life saved through the miracle of love

By Sally Hanson

There’s a lucky feline who lives in the Signature Properties office at Highlands Cove. Her name is Mira, short for Miracle because that’s what she is. Mira was the only kitten produced from a feral cat’s litter. She was born near the Signature Properties office, where her mother had given birth to a previous litter some time earlier.

Three weeks after Mira was born, her mother abandoned her outside the office. When Signature Properties agent Gina McDonald saw Mira rolling around rather than walking, she knew something was wrong with the kitten.

After an initial vet consultation, Gina was told that a sure-fire diagnosis couldn’t be made without running tests. “The veterinarian didn’t have the facilities or equipment to conduct these particular tests,” said Gina. “He told me to keep her and see if she got better, because there was a chance she would outgrow her problems.”

Mira continued to display the same symptoms, so Gina took her to Greenville to have the tests done by a specialist. The vet said he’s seen cats with Mira’s condition before – he suspected it was cerebral dysplasia.

Cerebral dysplasia is a neurological disorder in which proper coordination never develops in the animal’s brain. Since definitive tests would have cost $3,000-$4,000, Gina opted to take his word for it.

Mira can’t walk, feed herself, or properly clean herself. She can only see shapes, and rolls along the floor to get around but she is often carried. When her “moms” call her name she responds immediately, turning towards them to set her blue on the vicinity of their faces.

Mira receives around-the-clock care from Gina and her co-workers Kim James and Soni Welch at Signature Properties who feed her and perform any necessary cleaning duties.

“Gina said there is a problem with stray animals in the Highlands area, as well as the rest of the nation. “People don’t get their animals spayed and neutered as they should,” she says, “especially outdoor animals. They will reproduce.”

In addition to Mira, the staff at Signature Properties also looks after Mira’s parents and her two siblings from that previous litter. The kittens were altered, but the parents are very wild and haven’t allowed themselves to be caught, yet. All four live outdoors.

Mira is an example of the good that comes when citizens care for animals in need. Sadly, homeless animals must fend for themselves — not every animal is as lucky at Mira and her feral family.
ITC presents two free performances of 'Voices from the High School'

The high school students in The Instant Theatre Company’s free acting classes have been training since October. This Thursday they’ll be out of the classroom and performing in Voices from the High School, a play by Peter Dee.

Free to the public, the dramatic-comedy will perform Thursday and Friday (April 22 & 23) at 7:30pm at the Martin-Lipscomb Performing Arts Center in Highlands.

"It covers the spectrum in terms of the lifestyle of the modern teenager," commented director, Adam Heffernan. "Even though it was written in 1982, the script, without exception, is relevant to today. There are scenes ranging from teenage pregnancy to falling in love with Shakespeare to Senior/Freshman rivalry. The cast is having a lot of fun with it."

Since these are free performances, tickets are going fast. To reserve seats for Voices from the High School, please call (828) 342-9197. The production is sponsored by Jolie’s of Highlands and Brick Oven/Movie Stop.

Stephanie Nieuwendijk, owner of Dutchman’s Designs and Weddings by Design, can take that task for planning for a wedding and turn it into a blessing.

Growing up in Sydney, Australia, Stephanie has traveled Europe and the USA for more than 20 years developing her craft and signature floral design style, expressing an international flair in all her creations.

She has always loved flowers and the spectrum of color surrounding them. Some time in the Deep South reinforced this love and began a new direction for Stephanie, in the dried flower business. Search on for missing person

By Kim Lewicki

The Jackson County Sheriff’s Dept. is searching for a Highlands man missing since April 7.

Nigel Ian Kirkland, 23, was last seen Wednesday, April 7 at Signal Ridge Marina on Lake Glenville following an employee party on the lake. Witnesses said they last saw him going to his blue-green Dodge Caravan in the parking lot. “It is presumed he left in the van,” said Jackson County Sheriff Jimmy Ashe. “Because the van is no longer parked at the marina.”

Ashe said Kirkland, an employee of Cyprus Restaurant in Highlands, has a history of “disappearing.” “But his mother said he’s never been gone for this extended period of time.”

Kirkland’s mother, Joy Barge, last saw her son around April 3 before he left Atlanta for Highlands. She phoned him on April 10 but couldn’t reach him, so she called his employer and other contacts and learned he was last seen at the marina.

On Tuesday, April 20, the sheriff’s dept. and the Glenville-Cashiers Rescue Squad did a shoreline search by boat of Lake Glenville but came up with nothing. On Wednesday, April 21, the USFS helicopter flew the lake and highway area. On Thursday, the North Carolina Highway Patrol helicopter flew the roads looking for signs of a motor vehicle accident.

Also, Macon County and Jackson County sheriff deputies are patrolling area roads in case he had an accident, said Ashe.

“We’re just trying to cover all the bases. If anyone knows of Kirkland’s whereabouts, call the Jackson County Sheriff Dept. at (828) 586-8901.

Mountain Lakes 5-K set for May 1

Runners and fitness walkers alike are invited to participate in the Mountain Lakes 5-K Race, scheduled for Saturday, May 1, at 9 a.m.

The event is the annual fundraiser for the Highlands Roadrunners Club, and organizers are expecting good attendance for the race, now in its fifth year.

“We already have a lot of out-of-town runners signed up, but would also like to have good local participation,” said Race Director Richard Betz.

“Our goal as a running club is to encourage life-long fitness, and running or walking is the key to it for a lot of us,” Betz said. “Whether it’s keeping your weight off, maintaining good muscle tone, even having more energy; you name it—beginning and staying with a program of running or fitness walking can definitely help.

The 5-K (3.1-mile) course is a loop that begins on US 64 in front of the Highlands Civic Center, circles around Lake Ravenel and Harris Lake, and finishes on Laurel Street beside First Citizens Bank. Traffic control will be provided throughout the course by police and volunteers. Betz said that fitness walkers are encouraged to participate, and that the course is relatively easy. However, since part of the route is on an unpaved gravel road, strollers are not recommended. Powerade, courtesy of Coca Cola Company, and fruit, courtesy of Mountain Fresh Fine Foods, will be available at the finish line.

Pre-registered runners can pick up their numbers and race packets at the Civic Center on the morning of the race beginning at 7:30 a.m. Race-day registration will also take place that morning at the Civic Center. Race-day registration will be $17 per person.

Sponsors for the event this year include the Highlands Chamber of Commerce, Country Club Properties, Highlands Printing, Wilson Gas. As in past year, proceeds will go toward fitness-related programs in the local community. The club awards a number of scholarships each year to Highlands School graduates who carry on some type of fitness activities while continuing their education. The club has also used the proceeds from past races to help purchase fitness equipment for Highlands School, HealthTracks at Highlands-Cashiers Hospital, and the Highlands Recreation Park. The Highlands Roadrunners Club is a non-profit organization, and entry fees and contributions are tax-deductible.

OEL names Executive Chef

Francois J. Ternes has been named executive chef of the newly renovated Old Edwards Inn and Spa in Highlands which will open in June.

His responsibilities will include supervision of all aspects of the Old Edwards Inn and Spa’s food service, restaurants and catering operations at The Farm, a 30-acre special events facility.

Since 1994, Ternes has held the position of catering chef at Walt Disney World’s flagship Grand Floridian Resort and Spa in Orlando, Fla., where he was responsible for event catering in a 45,000-square-foot convention facility. Prior to the Orlando position, he was executive sous chef at the Doral Golf Resort and Spa in Miami, Fla., and executive chef of the Crescent Hotel in Phoenix, Ariz. Both were sister properties of The Phoenician resort in Scottsdale, Ariz.
Banker joins Land Trust board

A retired banking and financial expert is the newest board member of the Highlands-Cashiers Land Trust. Howard L. McMillan, Jr., who is the past president of Highlands Falls Country Club, is from Jackson, MS., where he currently is executive in residence at the Else School of Management at Millsaps College.

McMillan was president of Deposit Guaranty National Bank and Deposit Guaranty Corp. where he served as chairman when he retired. He also served as financial advisor with Morgan Stanley’s wealth management program.

“I am looking forward to serving on the land trust board because I think the Highlands area is one of the most beautiful areas in the country,” McMillan said. “I would like to think I might play a small part in preserving this beauty for future generations.”

His professional affiliations include being past president of the American Bankers Association. He was a director of the Federal Reserve Bank, Atlanta.

“We are very pleased that Howard agreed to serve on our board,” said Bill Stiefel, president of the Highlands-Cashiers Land Trust. “He will make a valuable contribution in helping us develop the financial tools we need to achieve our conservation mission.”

Organizations he was either president or chairman of include The Metro Jackson (MS) Chamber of Commerce, United Way of the Capital Area, Country Club of Jackson, Mississippi Symphony Orchestra Association, University of Mississippi Alumni Association, Mississippi Baptist Health Systems Board of Trustees, Metropolitan Jackson Crime Commission, Century Club Charities and chairman of Deacons of the First Baptist Church of Jackson. He is a member of the Univ. of Miss. Alumni Hall of Fame.

A graduate of the Univ. of Miss. in 1960 with a degree in finance, McMillan also attended the L.S.U. School of Banking of the South and Harvard Business School of Administration.

Rick and Helene Seigel of 4 1/2 Street Inn

This year’s ‘Be a Star for a Child’ event will be much more comfortable thanks to the members of Mountain Laurel.

Tennis-pro Darren McGillivray is also donating a free tennis lesson to the benefit.

The Highlands community has quite a few benefits and fund-raising events, so I posed the question, “Why are you always willing to participate in community events?”

To some of Carpe Diem Farm’s donors for the upcoming ‘Be a Star for a Child’.

Julie Potts, owner of Bed and Bath Designs is always willing to help with events in the Highlands Community. Her store is a treasure trove for discerning people who want a special look for their home. One can spend hours wandering around, discovering stylish, graceful and elegant pieces tucked away here and there.

“I love to support the community that supports me, said Julie. “Part of the reason for doing business is to help one another and do what we can. My child goes to school here and I have bonded with the community. I want to do all I can to help because I really love Highlands. I only have to walk outside in the morning to realize how fortunate I am to live here.”

Rick and Helene Siegel of 41/2 St Inn lived in Atlanta for many years where Rick was a single parent of two sons.

Working hard to support his family he did not have time to participate in the community, as he would have liked. When

Rick and Helene came into his life, “the most fortunate thing that ever happened to me,” everything changed.”

One of the boys is now a senior at Georgia Tech and the other is working on his master’s degree in administration. “I think they have turned out so well because of Helene’s influence.”

When Rick and Helene moved to Highlands they said they felt “accepted” right from the beginning. “Highlands is such a warm giving place. I think the word community means being part of something special,” they said. “I have always been a most fortunate person,” said Rick. “If I step on a nail, it comes up between my toes.

Doesn’t the name “Wolfgang’s” just make your mouth water? It should, because ‘Wolfgang’s on Main’ is one of the finest restaurants around.

Now it’s your chance to learn some of Wolfgang’s secrets. You can bid for ‘Chef for the Day’ gift certificate at the auction, and have a special day to assist Wolfgang in preparing appetizers and entrees, get one on one instruction in preparing appetizers and entrees, prepare the ‘special’ for the day, and even receive a chef’s coat to keep.

These gift certificates usually are priced at $500 per person. Wolfgang will donate part of the day’s sales to your favorite local charity.

A magical man has come to Highlands. Shaun Moss of ‘Sparkle’ magic show has donated his magical show just for you. Moving from Sylva in October, Shaun came to Highlands to work at WHLC Radio Station, and his wife is working at Regions Bank.

They have felt really welcomed here and Shaun is also able to practice his magical art. “I think it’s important that the community works together. Nothing can be accomplished without this spirit. It’s especially important to support children’s needs – that’s why it gives me such joy to work with children and see them smile.”

All these people are stars for Carpe Diem, and also other community events this year. They are business people and busy people who care about, and make time for the community and they make this a beautiful place to live.

The mountains are spectacular, but it’s the community spirit that makes Highlands so special.

We invite you to “Be a Star for a Child” on June 12, starting at 5:30 p.m. By your giving, you will be receiving in so many ways.

Tickets are available from friends such as Wit’s End on Main Street, Highlands Office Supply in the Highlands Plaza or call Carpe Diem directly at 526-2854.
might encourage more growth and then you will have a growth-management issue," she said.

Subdividing parcels is one way the town and township could increase density and provide more housing for future populations, Matthews said.

There are 124 parcels in the town and 572 parcels in the township that are more than five acres in size which makes them good candidates for parcel subdivision, said Matthews.

"These are good figures to know," said Commissioner Hank Ross. "This will help with the land use plan."

Density could also be affected by parcels that are considered "redevelopable." These are lots with buildings valued from $1 to $50,000. In town Marketek says there are 129 redevelopable lots; in the township 341.

But Skip Taylor, in the audience, said anything is redevelopable if there's enough cash. He said people are tearing down homes and commercial buildings and replacing them

Sidewalks on Church and Fifth, the east side of Fourth, in front of the Texaco station and Mountain Fresh Center were recommended by the committee.

Design standards for planters, trash cans, benches and lighting was high on the list. Another subcommittee made up of Commissioner Hank Ross, Town Engineer Lamar Nix, and Town Planner Larry Gantenbein will meet to discuss those items.

More greenery in the middle of Main Street will be investigated through the use of shrubbery inside of expanded or additional planters.

A preliminary plan to install planters without eliminating parking on Main between Third and Second was presented. Commissioners said the parking places in front of Reeves Hardware are deep enough to accommodate some planters and greenery.

Cleaning up streets and alleys and picking up litter has been discussed a lot lately. The committee will walk the alleys and consider enforcing solid waste laws already on the books to regulate the situation. It will also investigate the cost of a street washer.

The committee discussed purchasing the property next to the Stone Lantern behind "Loafer's Bench" and the

From our 4,118 ft. elevation, Mitchell’s Lodge & Cottages has been a part of Highland’s history for 65 years. Nestled on over 4 acres only 2 blocks from town makes Mitchell’s a quiet, relaxing place to stay while being close to everything. For three generations the Mitchell Family has been welcoming guests and has seen Highlands grow from a small town to an exclusive resort. In July 2001, we opened our new Cedar Lodge addition. These rooms and suites combine today’s luxuries with Highland’s mountain charm. Our original rustic log lodge, cabins and cottages still offer all of the comforts of home. Another addition in 2001 was an open air pavilion overlooking our small mountain lake. This is a great place to enjoy a delightful continental breakfast or just sit back by the fire and enjoy a good book. It’s also a great place for your next family reunion or wedding. We hope you will “come home” and stay with the Mitchells on your next visit to Highlands. See you soon!

Earth Day is April 24

Stacy Cannon-Soldo

Earth day is a special day devoted to the earth — awareness about the earth, the possibilities of conserving the earth, and where earth is headed if population growth continues.

This year’s event will be held on Saturday, April 24 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Gazebo on Pine Street.

The day will start out with a yoga class in the grass in hopes of getting people to connect with the earth by putting their bare hands and feet into the earth through asana practice.

- There will be local restaurants offering recipes, information about how eating more consciously will help the environment, and vegetarian and some organic “finger foods” for people to try.
- Local businesses will be giving information on how they are conserving energy, saving plant life, recycling.
- Highlands Whole Life will have a booth set up with cleaning products, hygiene products, etc. and information on how these products will contribute to saving the earth and what the effects are on using toxic chemicals.
- Activities for children including a hike around the grounds to clean up trash, the recycled materials that are collected will then be used to create art.
- A pledge tree will be created using recycled material, the leaves will be used to sell for people to place pledges on how they will personally strive to conserve our planet — turn off water while brushing teeth, turn off lights, etc. Their names will then be put in a drawing to win earth friendly prizes. The proceeds will go to a local not-for-profit org.
- There will be petitions for people to sign asking the town to provide curb side recycling bins and a town composting area to provide support for local organic farmers. There are even plans to start an organic farmers’ market.
- Live music with environmentally friendly messages will be played throughout the celebration.

said Zoning Administrator Larry Gantenbein. “Plus, if we deny the application we are in violation of equal application and equal protection under the law.”

By definition, a temporary structure can be dismantled quickly, doesn’t have electricity or water but can use electricity via an extension cord.

Years ago, the town allowed an open-air temporary structure to be built in the setback at Tate’s Nursery (now Gates Nursery) on U.S. 64 west with a simple zoning permit.

Gantenbein said since it was allowed then it should be allowed now. “The same rules apply. It’s not a setback violation,” he said.

“All this has brought to light the fact that there is an exception in our ordinance for structures deemed ‘temporary’ to be placed in the setback,” said Gantenbein. “But a structure is a structure and nothing should be allowed in the setback.”

He said a simple re-wording will close the loophole. “I’m working on that now,” he said.

August Produce will construct a 15-ft. by 30-ft. open pole shed on its lot on U.S. 64 west opposite Peddler Wagon. August Produce delivers fresh produce to grocery stores and restaurants in Highlands. With the vegetable market coming, the delivery trucks will be housed somewhere off the mountain, “There will be plenty of room for parking,” said owner Lisa Shomper.

The stand will open seven days a week from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. beginning the first week in May. Fresh locally grown produce of all kinds will be for sale – corn, strawberries, melon, cabbage, tomatoes – and more, said Shomper.
