Board takes first step toward ETJ

By Kim Lewicki

By now everyone knows the Land Use Planning committee recommended declaring extra territorial jurisdiction a mile out from the town limit. At the August 17 Town Board meeting, commissioners voted 4 to 1 to seriously consider it, but they want to preface their final decision with an intensive public education campaign prior to a public hearing set for Oct. 12. “People need to understand there is a big difference between ETJ and annexation,” said Commissioner Amy Patterson. “They’ll either consider it protective

Police chief to entice recruits with police cars

With four law enforcement agencies drawing from the same labor pool, Highlands Police Chief Bill Harrell is looking for whatever it takes to sweeten the deal and entice officers to come up to Highlands and stay.

Since 1993, the department has lost an average of five officers every two years – in 2005 it lost seven but two of those retired out.

Currently, the force is down by three officers – one of which is needed to fill the Student Resource Officer at Highlands School – and time is of the essence, said Harrell. Every candidate he has talked to lately has opted to go elsewhere – mainly to the Macon County Sheriff Department – for better fringe benefits.

School Resource Officers (SRO) collaborate on-site with the school administration to investigate crime on school property, incorporate crime prevention into the school curriculum and enhance communication with the community through the school setting. By being active in the school, SROs provide individual mentoring to students fostering a positive image.

Over the last few years the Sheriff’s Department has staffed Highlands School with an SRO shared by Franklin High School and Highlands. Highlands School Principal Monica Sommengard said last year, the SRO was called to Franklin High School often, so instead of coming to Highlands the contracted two days a week, the officer could only come about every 15 school days. The town, county and school board agreed having an SRO at Highlands School – and time is of the essence – mainly to the Macon County Sheriff Department – for better fringe benefits.

Changes for the 2005-06 school year

For the past two years, Highlands’ Newspaper has worked with the Highlands School journalism class to re-establish the school newspaper, The Mountain Trail. Through a joint decision made between Principal Jack Brooks, journalism teacher Beverly Van Hook and Highlands’ Newspaper, the original version that had been defunct for several years, was resurrected into a real, stand-alone tabloid-sized newspaper published once a month by the journalism class with the help of Highlands’ Newspaper.

Because the product required the same work skills as a real newspaper, the bench mark for the students was set high. The first issue came out Sept. 19, 2003 and has been successfully published for the past two years. Since Highlands’ Newspaper’s inception July 13, 2003, we have tried to “put a new face” on the news, and this included the school news. We wanted to cover it, but with a twist.

For more than 15 years, school news was written by Van Hook’s creative writing class and sent to The Highlander newspaper. During my five-year tenure at The Highlander, we grouped the articles and photos sent over by the school under a “School News” heading and ran them each week, sometimes twice a week. Over the past two years, Van Hook continued sending The Highlander news and photos, and worked with the journalism class to produce The Mountain Trail with Highlands’ Newspaper – two creative ways to approach the same subject.

Beginning with this edition, you will find a section devoted to school news and activities. (See pages 12-13). In fact, in the weeks to come, we will have a parent/student forum, where questions pertaining to school issues can be asked and hopefully answered by the school administration. We believe this will help keep the lines of communication open between parents, teachers, students and the administrators. We will encourage the administration, both on the local and county level to answer the questions.

On a sad note we’ve learned that Van Hook will not be returning to Highlands School. She will be a technology facilitator at Asheville Middle School where as an instructional technology specialist, she will provide training and support to the staff on technology integration. She will also work with students and other teachers using computers in the on-going instructional program. Among other duties, she will lead students and teachers in technology curriculum activities, and conduct staff development activities in all areas of technology integration.

Van Hook has been teaching since 1981 when she was granted a graduate teaching assistantship at WCU. She continued to teach English 100, 101, and 102 part-time at WCU even after she was hired by Macon County in the fall of 1987. She also taught part-time for Southwestern Community College and for Tri-County Community College in Murphy. She taught both English and speech classes at the community colleges. And taught some of SCC’s first Huskin’s Bill classes, traveling to the old Camp Lab School (K-12) in Cullowhee and to Sylva Webster High School (Now Smoky Mountain High) to teach dual enrollment English classes.

She taught at Highlands School for 18 years and during her tenure was elected “Teacher of the Year” by her peers and was one of the first Highlands School teachers to earn her National Board Teacher Certification.

Van Hook will be missed. Jim and I have worked with her in a writing, desktop publishing and technology capacity in her classes at Highlands School since 1997 – a year before my previous stint with The Highlander newspaper began. She was a role model for Highlands School students as well as new teachers. Though known as a tough teacher, students who have gone on to college say her demanding curriculum and teaching style prepared them for work expected in college.

She helped resurrect The Mountain Trail newspaper and insisted that the students do all the work themselves – we were not to do the newspaper for them, she said. She understood that students learned by doing – that it was the actual work experience that taught them to write, take photographs, lay out and design the newspaper and learn the required software and hardware.

Beverly Van Hook is a true teacher.

Why should I be mayor of Highlands?

Plain and simple, I am for world peace and want to control growth in Highlands. That's it. How could you not want to vote for me once I have said those two things? I know, I know, there is little peace in the world, growth in Highlands is at runaway speed and there is nothing anyone can really do about it. So what? Notice I didn't say I would control growth? I'm just for it. So, good people of Highlands, as your next mayor, just let me say I am for world peace and controlling growth in Highlands.

To run for office, I must first trash the reputations of all my opponents. This is called mud-slinging and is totally acceptable in the political arena. Trashing an opponent to make one look better is what I do best. Did I mention I am for world peace? I don't think any of my opponents has said that.

The only person I will not trash is Amy Patterson, only because I am terrified of this woman. This very competent veterinarian has the physical stature of a little Yorky but the disposition of a Rottweiler. When she says she is for controlling growth in Highlands, she means it. I can't stand politicians who mean what they say. As your Mayor, I promise I will never do that.

I once watched her put her foot on the head of a hog-tied 400 pound boar and cut its tusks out with a set of bolt cutters. Whoa. This is why all the Macon County Commissioners are terrified of her. She would be awesome in Iraq. In my opinion, she can be whatever she wants to be. I still have nightmares of her chasing me with bolt cutters.

Moving on, I first met Larry Rogers in 1972 when he brought his backhoe out to my property and dug a big hole in my backyard for my septic tank. Then, he returned two days later to fill in the hole but, instead, fell into the tank. I rest my case.

Why should I be mayor of Highlands? See WOOLDRIDGE page 8
Town Board for more police cars so he could entice law enforcement officers to work at the Highlands Police Department. And he believes take-home cars might be the key.

"I need tools to secure good, quality people and to build a professional department to ensure a high quality of life for the Highlands community," he said.

The Jackson County Sheriff Department, Macon County Sheriff Department and the Franklin Police Department all include a vehicle as part of an officer's package.

And Harrell believes that's what it's going to take to get officers to come to Highlands and stay. "Every candidate we've spoken to said "no, because there's no take home car," he said. "A car is part of the package. It means as much pinning on a badge and strapping on a gun."

At Wednesday's Town Board meeting, commissioners agreed to amend the budget to increase the police department's capital outlay budget from $22,000 to $100,000 so six used vehicles can be purchased. The funds will come from the town's general reserve, but could come from another reserve fund.

"We have very healthy reserves so it won't be a problem," said Town Administrator Richard Betz.

With the potential of 11 officers, the department is six cars down but Harrell says for about $60,000 he can buy four used Crown Victorias with low mileage, and for about another $30,000 he can buy two used four-wheel drive jeeps — all with three-year, 36,000 mile warranties.

"With our topography and terrain we really need more 4-wheel drive vehicles, anyway," he said. "We don't really need turbo-boost police interceptor vehicles for high speed chases." The department currently has four cars and one jeep.

Town Administrator Richard Betz who conscientiously monitors the Town's budget was against the idea of buying used vehicles. "We've tried it in the past and it just ends up costing us more money," he said.

But with money and time an issue, Harrell would like to initially build up the fleet with used cars and face them out two at a time with new cars as the budget allows.

"We're not going to get anymore good officers, if we don't do something different," said Commissioner Amy Patterson. "Historically we've had a problem recruiting and retaining officers, there's no question about that. The town deserves dedicated, professional officers. It deserves nothing less. Other agencies have had these things for years," she said.

Tuesday night, Betz suggested running help wanted advertisements longer and looking outside the area.

But Harrell said at $13.50 an hour base pay, he just can't get people to bite and come to live in the area, too.

What's worse, over the years, the Basin Law Enforcement Trained-certified labor pool has dwindled drastically. In the class of 2005, 10 candidates started, only five are left for the final test on Aug. 29 and Harrell, who has taught the class, said it's likely only four will pass.

"Three of those four are already spoken for," he said. "That means I can only try for one or two." He said his only option is to draw officers from other agencies to Highlands with a "package" which includes a take-home car.

Betz and Commissioner Herb James said the fact that the town pays insurance for employees and their families should count as a big part of the package. But with most spouses working full time jobs with benefits, it's a benefit many employees don't really need, said Harrell.

He said take-home cars would increase morale, decrease down time, offer quicker response en route to town, and extend the life of the car with just one driver who is responsible for the vehicle. Harrell said an hour a day is wasted per man per shift because officers drive to Highlands dressed in their street clothes in their private vehicles and change into their uniforms to go on shift once they get to Highlands. Before the shift is over, they return to the department to change back into street clothes to drive home.

Betz suggested they drive to work dressed in their uniforms, but Harrell said that jeopardizes his officers safety and he won't ask them to do that. He said if people see a "dressed" police officer in a personal vehicle he and his family can become a target.

Commissioner Dennis DeWolf said not wanting to be identified in a personal car has a lot of merit. "I never before thought of that being an issue," he said.

"Historically, the department loses a lot of people and it costs a lot of money," said Harrell. "It costs $4,000 to outfit a new officer from head to toe and if he leaves, the money's gone."

James suggested decreasing the insurance benefits and increasing salaries, but Harrell said that's not what they want. "Some people are willing to take a pay cut to work in Highlands, as long as they have a car," he said.

Patterson said the police department is long overdue to be revamped.
ANOTHER VIEW

There are two sides to abortion

Nothing demarcates the angry division in our country as distinctly as the issue of abortion. I’m not talking here about the politicians, many of whose motives are patently self-serving and hypocritical. I’m speaking of utterly decent citizens who are passionate in their defense or opposition to abortion. They both, in the best cases, have valid arguments to make. They both deserve a respectful hearing and consideration.

In the din that usually follows mention of the word, or of its disingenuous substitutes—right to life and freedom of choice—reason goes out the window and vanishes in the far reaches of outer space. Any attempt at compromise is met with bitterness or cynicism. Horrific crimes, like Eric Rudolph’s clinic bombings, are committed in the name of anti-abortion. Doctors who perform abortions are threatened and even murdered. On the other hand, those who are passionate in favor of “choice” sometimes callously dismiss the self-evident fact that a potential life has been terminated, and that this may be genuine cause for grieving and distress.

For the sake of brevity—and in no way implying that I’ve done the subject justice—let me summarize the rational arguments given by each side: Those who oppose abortion believe that life begins at conception, or perhaps during the first trimester, and that any attempt to voluntarily terminate the pregnancy constitutes the taking of a human life, or, more dramatically, an instance of “murder.” The pro-abortion contingent argues that every woman has a right to decide what is done to her body—that it is properly between herself and her physician, and none of the government’s business.

As is often the case these days, religion gets involved in much of the discourse, providing the fuel to anti-abortion fanaticism. Conservative Roman Catholics have joined with fundamentalist Protestants to create a powerful political lobby focused on this one emotional issue. Catholic bishops have gone so far as to forbid a co-religionist from voting for any candidate who favors a woman’s right to abortion. (John Kerry, a Catholic himself, was one of the bishops’ casualties.) Even though these views represent a minority in this country, they can tilt the balance in a close election. Single-issue voting—specifically over abortion—a relatively new phenomenon in American politics, has thus sharply distorted our electoral process.

Most Americans, from all indications, favor the right of a woman to make a medical decision about abortion with the advice of her physician. When it comes to late-term abortions, there is more disagreement; the same is true when a minor is the one who is pregnant. If the woman’s life is in danger, or in a cases of incest and rape, the sentiment is overwhelmingly on the side of the woman or teenager. An equally large majority objects to using abortion as a means of birth control.

So if the popular will is to be considered, we have a significant preponderance which favors abortion, but not if it is performed frivolously and without just consideration. The trouble is that such a requirement could be easily circumvented by unethical doctors and desperate women. The government could refuse payment for a woman’s sequential abortions, but a wealthy woman could get away with several without anyone keeping track.

This disparity between the poor and the well-off thus underlines a central issue in abortion. Even during the bad old days, when destitute women were butchered by back-alley quacks, rich women could fly abroad and take care of matters in upscale clinics. If abortion is once again outlawed by a new Supreme Court, they will still be able to do so. So it is a moral issue in more ways than one.

Is a compromise possible? If the noise level on both sides were reduced, it might be. Medicaid could restrict recipients to one abortion, so that people who disapprove wouldn’t be paying repeatedly through taxation. Sex education and prevention could be more amply funded. Well-funded alternatives for adoption and foster care could be provided by state governments, with subsidies from the Feds.

BOOK REVIEW WITH KATIE BRUGGER

_Freakonomics: A Rogue Economist Explores the Hidden Side of Everything_ by Steven Levitt and Stephen Dubner 330L

I feel like I am seeing the marketing department of publishing houses lately. I recently reviewed Everything Bad is Good For You (my emphasis), and commented that I thought the title was incorrect but made a good copy. Now I come to the next book in this genre and it also is about "everything": _Freakonomics: A Rogue Economist Explains the Hidden Side of Everything_ (my emphasis again) and half-way through I’m feeling the same ripped-off feeling. The marketing director has made promises this book isn’t keeping. It’s interesting, but it’s not about everything.

This book is a collaboration between an economist, Steven Levitt, and a writer, Stephen Dubner. Levitt teaches at the University of Chicago and recently received the John Bates Clark Medal, which is awarded every two years to the best American economist under 40. A couple of years ago Dubner wrote a profile of Levitt for the _New York Times Magazine_. The two got along so well they decided to amplify the article into this book. _Freakonomics_ is basically a collection of essays summarizing the findings of Levitt’s scientific papers. The authors claimed the book’s unifying theme “has to do with thinking sensibly about how people behave in the real world. All it requires is a novel way of looking, of discerning, of measuring.” I expected to find a book that took you into a new way of looking at things to see the hidden side, but they never really deliver on this. This is not to say that I didn’t enjoy the book—there are lots of enjoyable thought-provoking ideas here.

My initial reaction as I began this book was “I wish an economist would run for President.” The way Levitt thinks is very similar in style to the thinking of one of my heroes, Princeton economist and _New York Times_ columnist Paul Krugman, and it’s the way I think the person at the head of our government should think.

What I like about this way of thinking is that it’s not a sentimental, emotional reaction to an issue but an analysis of data. In fact, they write, “Morality, it could be argued, represents the way that people would like the world to work—whereas economics represents how it actually _does_ work...It is worth remembering that Adam Smith, the founder of classical economics, was first and foremost a philosopher. He strove to be a moralist and, in doing so, became an economist. When he published _The Theory of Modern Capitalism_ in 1759, modern capitalism was just getting under way...Smith’s true subject was the friction between individual desire and societal norms.”

Ordinarily this way of thinking is directed only at “the economy”: things like interest rates and unemployment and consumer confidence. Levitt has turned his attention to other areas of life, using the tools of economic inquiry that he has distilled into these fundamentals:

1. incentives are the cornerstone of modern life
2. the conventional wisdom is often wrong
3. dramatic effects often have distant, even subtle causes
4. experts use their informational advantage to serve their own agenda
5. knowing what to measure and how to measure it makes a complicated world much less so

He argues that to understand someone’s behavior it is essential to understand the incentives that are driving him or her. He picks cheating to study this proposition because most of us consider ourselves to be honest. I liked this example of incentives: “Who cheats? Well, just about anyone, if the stakes are right... Consider what happened one spring evening at midnight in 1987: seven million American children suddenly disappeared. The worst kidnapping in history? Hardly. It was the night of April 15, and the IRS had just changed a rule. Instead of merely listing each dependent child, tax filers were now required to provide a Social Security number for each child. Suddenly seven million children—children who had existed only as phantom exemptions on the previous year’s 1040 forms—vanished, representing about one in 10 of all dependent children in the United States. The incentive for those cheating taxpayers was quite clear.”

In order to demonstrate his proposition about distant and subtle causes Levitt offers his most startling idea: the legalization of abortion caused the drop in crime in the 1990s. If you think about it a minute it makes sense. Most crime is committed by young men between... the ages of 16 and 25, mostly from poor families. Who were the women who had most of the abortions? Poor, single women and it is the unwanted children of these poor single women who are most likely to become criminals. Abortion was legalized in 1973, and just when the first generation of children born after Roe v. Wade came of age the crime rate began to drop. What was different? Millions of unwanted children were never born.

Of course the authors don’t just throw this idea out there—it is backed up with many studies, including some that show that in states where abortion had been legalized earlier, the crime rate began to drop proportionately earlier. Other studies analyze the many causes that have been put forward for the drop in crime: increase in police, aging of population, etc., and find flaws in all of these.

The authors are also careful to point out that this is not an argument in favor of abortion; this is merely an objective analysis of cause and effect.

Some of the other subjects that are discussed: the names white and black parents give their children and the effect this has on their lives (very entertaining); what factors are important in parenting and which aren’t; how real estate agents exploit their access to exclusive information; and why drug dealers live with their moms. If you like books that offer fresh ideas and challenge the conventional wisdom, you will enjoy Freakonomics.

would be made obligatory for anyone seeking an abortion. Where a woman’s life was in danger, or the fetus was damaged, abortion would be readily available; strict controls on the medical profession would have to be imposed to prevent duplicity in such cases. Parental notification for minors would be required. Second and third trimester abortions would only be permitted if the mother’s life was in danger, or, again, in cases of rape or incest.

Probably no one would be happy with such an arrangement. But that is the nature of compromise in a civil society. No one is supposed to be satisfied by a compromise, only less dissatisfied than by an utter defeat.

Of course all this assumes that voters are rational, and that politicians would act in benevolent ways. Both assumptions are suspect, to say the least, which is why we will probably have to suffer through this destructive and divisive debate for generations to come.

Ever notice that every picture of a Highlands house fire has a fireman standing near a chimney of a completely burned down building? This is not my opponent’s fault. By the time Chief “Popcorn” Manley gets the call and musters his volunteer troops who must come from all corners of the township, the place is usually already gone. Is it time for Highlands to have a “paid for” fire department? He got his nickname “Popcorn” from munching down on popped popcorn bags he finds in the ruins. As your mayor, I will put a stop to this… and also promote world peace.

The opponent I have the most trouble slinging mud at is my buddy, Hank Ross. Like me, he is a city slicker who must come from all corners of the town and wants to control growth by making Highlands look like downtown Atlanta. This is a very good idea. Once this place finally looks like Atlanta, no one will want to come here anymore and we will have this growth problem under control. Keep up the good work, Hank. If I get to be mayor we can control growth together… our way.

Then there is the Winkin’, Blinkin’ and Nose team of Buck Trott, Zeke Sossomon and Minister Don, what I have done, Mullen. I will let you figure out which is which but I am sure you already have Buck pegged as Winkin’.

I have not met Dr. Mullen, but after reading his resume, I am convinced he is too talented and qualified to be mayor of anything. He should go after the head hospital board job, bring Dr. Heffington back, and become the most popular guy in Highlands. Anyway, why would this nice man want to be wakened at three in the morning to listen to a noise complaint? I trashed Buck and Zeke in an earlier publication but I will be monitoring their activities very closely.

You are probably wondering why I have not mentioned Eric Pierson. Like “Popcorn,” he is hard to trash ‘cause he hasn’t done anything yet. Amazingly, both these men are “locals” but don’t stand much of a chance of getting elected. Go figure. Maybe they are not for world peace and controlling growth in Highlands.

So here’s my platform. I am for world peace and controlling growth in Highlands. Are you reading this? Are you paying attention? Zzzzzzzzzzzz....
Martha Betz recognized for raising more than $100,000 for the American Cancer Society

Martha Betz of Highlands was honored recently by the American Cancer Society for her outstanding fundraising over the past six years.

"When I first heard about this woman in Highlands who had raised so much money for the American Cancer Society, I couldn’t wait to meet her and shake her hand," said Lynn Erdman, Senior Vice President, of the South Atlantic Division of the American Cancer Society who presented the award along with Dana Hamilton, Community Manager for the American Cancer Society.

The award recognized Betz’s individual cumulative total of over $100,000 in monies raised for the American Cancer Society.

Betz first became involved with the Relay for Life in Franklin in 2000, raising $1,000. "Our family participated in the Franklin event and we were all very moved by it. We were glad when Highlands Country Club and Cashien began the Mountain Top Relay for Life the following year. That year I raised $6,600, and the following year more than tripled that amount."

Betz conducted the first two Relays single-handedly, and then volunteered for three years on the First Presbyterian Church’s “Joy Team.” Her efforts helped the team to earn recognition as one of the top three fundraising teams in the region. This year, she is heading up the Highlands Country Club’s “Tee It Up For a Cure” team.

Highlands Country Club is a corporate sponsor for that team, but as in past years Betz says she relies primarily on the generosity of members of the country club.

"Although family and friends have given over the years, I give much of the credit to the members of Highlands Country Club for their generous contributions. Many of them have lost loved ones, or are battling cancer themselves, and in addition to similar efforts in their other communities they want to be a part of a local effort here in Highlands."

"I have been amazed over the past few years at the generous outpouring of contributions and caring from the membership. Not only have they wholeheartedly supported my efforts, many have sent me notes thanking me for asking them to participate. Said Betz who has been Club Administrator for almost 17 years. "It is important to them, and they know it is important to me."

Like the more than 200 club members who have contributed this year, Betz said she knows the importance of coming together to fight cancer. "One in three people is touched by cancer in some way every year. In my own family, it was my maternal grandfather who died of brain cancer when I was a child. I have been profoundly touched by close friends and co-workers in Highlands who have lost loved ones to cancer, including my neighbor who lost his wife, Irene Sanchez last year."

This year Betz was approached by a fellow employee, Rickey Holland, to head up a team for Highlands Country Club’s "Tee It Up For a Cure" team. The memory of his sister Melody Breedlove, who lost the battle to cancer at the age of 41 last February; Holland soon rounded up a team, and he will be carrying the banner on August 26 when the Mountain Top Relay begins in Highlands. In addition to Betz and Holland, the other members of the team include Joyce Baillargeon, co-captain, Greg Crawford, General Manager of the club, Brian Stiehler, Michael McRae, John Feaster, Ken Knight, Mark Barnett and Robert Durrance.

"Many people don’t realize how important the Relay for Life is in helping to find a cure. Every known method of cancer detection – such as ultrasound, CAT scans, and mammography – was discovered by researchers who were awarded American Cancer Society research grants. Even the smallest contributions help."

"Martha has done a phenomenal job in raising so much money for the American Cancer Society," said Mayor Buck Trotter, who is co-chair of the local Relay. "All of us involved in the Mountain Top Relay for Life appreciate her efforts, and we are very pleased that she has been recognized by the American Cancer Society officials for her outstanding efforts. Our goal this year is $191,000, and with folks like Martha and the members of Highlands Country Club, and the other Relay teams, I am confident that we are going to meet that goal."

To date Betz and her team have raised over $23,000 for this year’s Relay. The contributions ranged from $25 to over $1,000, with every member of the Club’s Board of Governors making a donation. Although she has worked tirelessly on her fundraising again this year, this will be the first year she will not be on the track the night of the Relay. However, Betz has made arrangements to have a 9-hole miniature golf course set up at the Relay as an added fundraiser. Her teammates will be taking over the reins while she and her husband Richard return their daughter Katy to the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where she is a sophomore.

Betz hopes that this year’s Relay for Life will be even more successful than those in the past. "It is crucial that we all persevere in efforts like these. I’m convinced that one day we will cross the finish line in the battle against cancer."

"The metaphor is an apt one for Betz, who is training to run her first marathon in December."

Elegant ‘Buffet Bravissimo’ planned for Aug. 21 Bel Canto

Following the Bel Canto Recital on Sunday, August 21 at 4 p.m., ticket holders will enjoy a gala wine reception and buffet at Highlands Falls Country Club.

Only a few tickets remain for the festive event benefiting the music program at Highlands School and the permanent art collection of the Bascom-Louise Gallery.

Complementing the beautiful singing of Stella Zambalis, soprano and Kelly Anderson, baritone, at the 13th annual recital in the Martin-Lipscomb Performing Arts Center, will be the culinary art of Bruce McIntosh, a much-admired chef at Highlands Falls for 14 years.

Designated a certified executive chef by the American Culinary Federation, McIntosh is one of the few in this area holding the honor. A native of Chico, Calif., he is a graduate in culinary art from Asheville-Buncombe Applied Technical College.

‘Driving Miss Daisy’ opens Aug. 25

Almost everyone — especially Southerners — know a “Miss Daisy.” She might be an aging mother...a grandmother...a great aunt. Or perhaps a grand dame who lives in a spacious old Victorian house down the street.

She comes from an age when English was taught and spoken by a set of unwavering standards. In fact, she was an English teacher. English, not Language Arts. Stationery was engraved. Dinner at a friend’s home required a “bread-and-butter note” the next day, thanking the hostess.

Playwright and Atlanta native Alfred Uhry saw all these characteristics and qualities in his own mother, and he wove them into the Pulitzer Prize winning play, “Driving Miss Daisy,” which is the fourth and final Highlands Playhouse 2005 summer presentation.

Appearing as Miss Daisy Wertham is veteran stage and TV actress Chris Weatherhead, a Newport Beach, Calif., native who now calls Folly Beach, SC, home. Opposite her, as Hoke, a worldly wise but uneducated black chauffeur, is Charles Venning, a Charleston native, who didn’t begin acting until age 60. Miss Daisy’s son, Boolie, will be played by Atlanta actor, Randall Taylor.

The year is 1948, and the setting is the Atlanta — Druid Hills, to be specific — home of an upper class Jewish matron. The Civil Rights Movement is an event of the future, and Women’s Liberation...well, who ever heard of such? She’s widowed, retired from teaching and she’s just survived her latest car wreck — her fault, but not necessarily in her estimation. In an effort to prevent future mishaps, Boolie — without consulting mother — hires her a chauffeur, a good-hearted, unemployed and illiterate African-American gentleman, to drive her places.

Hoke’s dignified good nature breaks down the crusty exterior of the ornery old lady, and somewhere along the way a bond stronger than just a friendship is forged.

Ms. Weatherhead is a classically trained actress, so playing a role that has been played before is no great concern. Most of the great Shakespearean roles have been played by the greatest actresses. She knows how to make it her own.

He already knows Hoke and draws from personal experiences and tales he heard and read to breathe life into him. “Hoke knows how to play the game,” Venning said. “He knows what he has to do in order to get done what he needs to get done.”

Venning and Weatherhead have already achieved a comfort with each other; he is a student in her acting classes in Charleston. She praises his acting ability and technique, and he, in turn, praises her teaching ability — not unlike Miss Daisy and Hoke.

Drawing for ‘School Events Pass’ at Sept. 15 PTO Meeting

Susie Schiffli

PTO President

On behalf of the Highlands School PTO, I would like to extend to you an invitation to join PTO for the upcoming 2005-06 school year.

This year, instead of a $5 fee for PTO membership, we are inviting parents, teachers, and community members to join without charge. Instead, you can make a donation which is critical to our annual budget and will help fund the following projects: Student Projects, Teacher Appreciation, New School Equipment, Classroom Materials and Resources, Senior Class/Faculty Caps and Gowns, Special School Events like a Guest Author/Storyteller, New Century Scholars, and The Town of Highlands Scholarship Fund.

The general meetings will begin with dinner at 5:30 for a nominal charge followed by a meeting at 6 p.m. Each meeting will have a student presentation, a brief business report, educational presentation, an “Ask the Principal” time, and a drawing for a $50 savings bond. Baby-sitting will be provided at each meeting (donations will be accepted as a Junior Class fundraiser).

The first fundraising campaign is Aug. 29 - gift wrap by Genevieve’s. Their products are of the same quality as the Sally Foster products and offer a different line to sell in our area. Annette Jenkins and Stephanie McCall are the co-chairs for this fundraiser.

There is a new sign on the school’s facade visible when you drive by the school. Upcoming events will be posted. This year’s PTO meetings are set for: Sept. 15, Oct. 20, Nov. 17, Jan. 19, Feb. 16, March 16, April 27 and May 18.

Hope to see you there!

Showhouse: Visitors can own their own mountain beauty

Fresh-cut flowers. Window boxes. Popular and unusual bark planters. For those familiar with Scotlyn's Yard on highway 107 south in Cashiers, a smaller version of their vast landscape choices is in store at this year's Cashiers Designer Showhouse, the historic Homestead at Lonesome Valley, a much-loved mountain farmhouse tucked away on highway 64 east just 2 ½ miles from the Cashiers Crossroads. Overlooking a magnificent view of Laurel Knob and seemingly endless meadows, the home and grounds are a natural setting to showcase Scotlyn's Yard, filled and overflowing with garden treasures for homeowners, gardeners and lucky gift recipients.

"We'll have something for everybody, gardeners and non-gardeners alike," said Erin Watson, who with her husband Dustin, is one of the key principles of Scotlyn’s Yard. "We'll replenish our supply throughout the Showhouse dates so every day there will be something new and the plants and flowers will always be fresh." Garden books showcasing native flowers of North Carolina, garden accessories, watering cans, decorative pots, fresh flowers, custom planters and window boxes are among the many items that will be for sale to Showhouse attendees. Small floral arrangements – instant gifts or centerpieces – of Queen Anne’s lace, wildflowers, larkspur, galax, soldago, hypericum and sunflowers as well as hanging baskets, bird’s eye ferns, peace lilies and ivy will fill the Scotlyn’s Yard Showhouse shop and also be for sale. Part of the sale proceeds will help Showhouse beneficiaries the Cashiers Historical Society and grant recipient Cashiers Community Center.

Scotlyn's Yard began 26 years ago as a hobby for Erin Watson's parents Scott and Lynn Dillard and now much larger, continues as a family business today. Located on Highway 107 south, a short drive from the Cashiers Crossroads, Scotlyn's Yard features native and Tennessee fieldstone, large and small indoor and outdoor plants, a well-informed and helpful staff and fresh flowers throughout its 2 1/2 acres.

Additions to their inventory include many varieties of small and large trees as well as landscaping, mulch, fertilizer and rabbit and deer-resistant supplies. Plants are grown and cared for in the nursery’s fully heated greenhouses. Extensive landscaping services from those who know mountain weather best also are available.

"We’re really looking forward to the Showhouse,” Erin Watson said. "Lonesome Valley is surrounded by so much natural beauty. We enjoy having a way for Showhouse visitors to take some of that beauty home."

The 2005 Cashiers Designer Showhouse kicks off with "Diamonds and Denim," the Patron Party Friday, August 19 on the grounds of Lonesome Valley. Patron Party attendees get an advance preview of the house and shops. The Showhouse will be open Saturday, August 20 – Sunday, Sept. 4, 10 a.m.– 4 p.m. daily and 1–4 p.m. on Sundays. Tickets can be purchased by calling 828-743-7710. McKee Properties, Macon Bank and Summit Building are notable as corporate sponsors.

The eighth annual Cashiers Designer Showhouse is presented by the Cashiers Historical Society, benefiting the Zachary-Tolbert House restoration fund, and 2005 grant recipient Cashiers Community Council.

HCP's ‘Dearly Departed’ runs for next two weekends

This is one of the funniest plays ever! The Highlands Community Players’ production of Dearly Departed opens Thursday, August 18, at the Highlands Conference Center (next to the ball park), with curtain at 8 p.m.

The Players are celebrating their 10th anniversary season by reviving a play from their very first season—the play that most often requested by audiences who saw it in 1996.

It’s an outrageous, hilarious comedy set in the rural South with a cast of colorful characters.

The Turpin family of Timson, Ga., is trying to get organized for their father’s funeral. Widow Raynellie is having trouble deciding on a casket; elder son Ray-Bud is perturbed over rising costs. Younger son Junior is trying to placate a suspicious wife and deal with their two undisciplined children. Little sister Delightful is drowning her grief with undisciplined eating. Aunt Marguerite is criticizing everything, most of all her lazy son Royce. Add to this a passel of other eccentric characters and you have a situation fraught with comic possibilities.

Waller, class of 2005 who is pursuing a degree in fashion design, and Remington Veteto, class of 2005, who has his sights on the Savannah School of Art Design.

An artist as well as a teacher of art, Taylor said going through the process of entering her own work in juried shows—sometimes being rejected, sometimes being accepted, sometimes winning awards—means she understands the process which makes her a better teacher.

“I show my students my work and explain my experiences so they understand what an artist goes through to be an artist,” she said. “Then I teach them the basics and what they do with the basics and how they create their artwork is totally up to them.”

Taylor says as an artist she works in oil painting neo-surrealism but can only do two or three pieces a year. Since she teaches, she doesn’t have enough time to build up the body of work it takes to have a show in a gallery. “So, I enter in juried shows,” she said. “Sometimes I’m rejected, sometimes I win an award, sometimes I sell — I would love to sell more of my work!”

Taylor’s husband is Highlands own potter who has shown at the Bascom-Louise Gallery on several occasions. He is also the head of the art department at Piedmont College where he teaches sculpture and ceramics and oversees art education majors.

Pam Lequire of Macon Middle School was chosen as the Macon County Teacher of the Year, by an independent panel and she will represent Macon County in a regional competition.

For her efforts, Lequire received a laptop computer, and $300 in cash gifts from Macon Bank, Nantahala Bank, and Dr. Rodney Shotwell, superintendent of Macon County Schools.

Nine teachers were picked as “Teacher of the Year” — one from each school in the county that participated. Nantahala School was not represented.

The fun begins on opening night, Thursday, Aug. 18, with a complimentary catered reception for audience, cast and crew after the performance. The performances continue Friday and Saturday, Aug. 19 and 20 at 8 p.m. and on Sunday, Aug. 21 at 2:30 p.m. The play will also be presented Friday and Saturday, Aug. 26 and 27, at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Aug. 28, at 2:30 p.m. The play is rated PG 13.

This is the 4th and final play for 2004-2005 season. Ticket holders will be able to use their tickets for any performance of Dearly Departed.

Individual adult tickets are $15; student tickets are $8, and tickets for groups of 15 or more are $12.

The Players’ box office is now open Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Seating in the Conference Center is limited to 100. There will be seven performances, but you are urged to make your reservations early for the day you would like to attend. For reservations, call 828-526-8084.

What does come automatically are two town ordinances which currently stipulate application in an ETJ zone – subdivision and sedimentation control. "Those two would apply because that’s the way you’ve written them, but nothing else would unless you wanted it to. You can pick and choose," he said.

Willet said areas existing subdivisions would be grandfathered as is and wouldn’t have to comply to the town’s subdivision or sedimentation control ordinances once ETJ’d.

Chairman of the planning board John Cleaveland urged commissioners to move ahead on the issue – to decide if they are going to consider it prior to November’s election. "With a new board, you don’t know which thing this will go. This board should commit to it."

Cleaveland said if the town is looking for a meeting where everyone is going to agree, it’s not going to happen. "What they need to know is with ETJ they can’t vote in town elections and they’re not taxed," he said.

After the Oct. 12 public hearing, the board will decide whether to declare ETJ one mile past the town limit, excluding USFS land.

{'Finding a New Life in Venice'}

In 1987, hankering for a place in the country and not finding it in New Hampshire, Sally Gable spied an ad in the New York Times Sunday Magazine about the availability of a villa outside Venice built by 16th-century Renaissance architect Andrea Palladio. In 2005 Sally and her husband Carl published an account of their new home, entitled Palladian Days: Finding a New Life in a Venetian Country House, which they will autograph at Cyranos's Bookshop this Saturday, Aug. 20, from 1-3 p.m.

It took two years of negotiations for Sally and Carl to acquire the 425-year-old Villa Cornaro, named for the Carminos, one of the most powerful families in Italian history. Indeed, the palace is considered one of the 10 most influential buildings in the world. Of the 18 authenticated Palladian structures in existence, it is rather unique, with both recessed and projecting double porticos, 104 frescoes and abundant statuary, and 44 shutters (all of which have to be opened and closed daily)—not to mention scorpions, pigeons, a leaky roof, a primitive kitchen, and some nesting bats.

Sally not only cherishes their new home but treats it with a deep sense of responsibility. She has ferreted out the history of this monument, trying to understand its small mysteries: from why there are no frescoes in some of the rooms to why tunnels lead hundreds of feet to the lake.

Frances Mayes, author of Under the Tuscan Sun, calls Palladian Days “a high-toned social and architectural history of a grand house, warmed by un-self-conscious love” and concludes, “Palladio would be thrilled!”

John Berendt, author of Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil, describes the book as lifting the notion of “buying a summer house to dazzling and delightful new heights. Sally and Carl Gable’s fascinating account reads like a fast-paced, marvelously satisfying adventure story.”

Sally herself says that just to think of buying a second home—not necessarily in the mountains or by a lake or on the beach—but in Venetian Italy and living in it was like “being asked to become a princess and live in a fairy tale.” She worked hard to make it a livable home while preserving its historical integrity. She made friends in Piombino Dese and found many in her community who could help her care for the house. She writes about adjusting to life in her new surroundings, cultural differences and language barriers, and even her favorite Italian recipes.

Sally and Carl divide their time between Atlanta and their Italian villa. Sally, a church music director by training, has served on the boards of Radcliffe College, the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, and other educational and musical organizations. Carl, a lawyer and businessman and author of a book on Venetian glass, has served on the boards of the Spoleto Festival USA, the Atlanta Opera, the Michael C. Carlos Museum of Emory University, and the Center for Palladian Studies in America.

Arica is a long way from here

By Rachel Power

Highlands Rotary Exchange Student Student Story! The trip to Arica has been an adventure all by itself! I have been on an airplane for at least 20 hours in the first week of August.

First I flew to Washington D.C. for my visa and passport at the Chilean Consulate, then I came back home. Then the next day I flew from Atlanta to Miami, then waited for four hours with other Chilen exchanges until 35 of us loaded onto a plane that flew for eight hours to Santiago, Chile. I slept for most of the way, but luckily I was awake in time to see us land in Santiago. We were all able to see the sun rise above the Andes mountains. I didn’t realize the mountains were there because of the clouds that engulfed them, but as we got closer to the ground, I could tell that they were the Andes Mountains. They are totally different from Highlands mountains and they were so breathtaking! Out the windows on the other side of the plane you could see the beach coastline, which was odd, but just as beautiful.

After landing, a few Youth Exchange Organizers found us and took us to Valle Almenas, a town that is an hour away from Santiago. Only 25 of us were there because the other 10 were picked up by their host families to go to their final destination or to go to Santiago. The trip to Valle Almenas (Alemanas Valley) was gorgeous! There were some hills that were covered with vineyards, almond trees or orange groves. If they were not covered by trees, they were populated with a herd of cows, sheep or horses. Behind the hills were the Andes Mountains, the same ones we saw coming down.

Since the seasons are flipped, it is winter time over here. In Santiago and Valle Almenas, the weather was between 30-40 degrees the whole time. Sadly, I was too busy focusing on Arica’s warm weather while packing, and forgot that I was staying near Santiago for a couple of days! But I had a hoodie to keep me warm, and a friend lent me her scarf. Most of the exchanges were from the United States, but there was a pair of Canadians, Germans, Danish girls and two from Finland. We also had a Swedish girl with us. While traveling, they shared their Finnish and Swedish chocolate and licorice from Denmark!

Everyone was equally excited about going to our host families and being in our cities or towns. It turned out that two there girls were going to my same city and my same school. One girl, Sonja from Finland, is staying with the sister of my host mother so we are ‘cousins’ for the year. The other girl, Eva is from Denmark. She is staying in the same vicinity.

Before heading to Arica, we went to Alemanas and stayed in cabins, which are cabanas in Spanish. We ate together and when we didn’t have to go to an orientation, we walked around, hiked up a hill that led to more beautiful hills and a gorgeous view of the Andes and played soccer.

The orientations were about keeping safe and rules we had to follow. We also have to let them know how our trips are going and they told us what to do if we are sexually harassed. I guess that’s a huge problem here. There were a few tarantulas outside the cabins.

On Saturday, 15 other people and I left for the airport for our destinations to Antofagasta, Arica, and La Serena. Sonja, Eva and I went on our plane that first stopped in Iquique, the city before Arica then we took a 22 minute ride to Arica. The landscape was all desert! The sand was a light red and was beautiful in the setting sun. We flew over the coast of Chile for most of the time and it was so pretty! When we landed into Arica, we literally squealed with excitement! It didn’t take us long to find our families. My host mother, sister and father picked me up and took me to their house. I now live in a condominium that overlooks the city of Arica. They showed me around the house, then we went to Sonja’s house to eat. We had pizza and a very delicious bread with walnuts and other stuff on top that my host grandma made. The entire family asked me so many questions — how the parties are in the U.S., what my schedule is for school and about everything! I could only answer a third of the questions. But it was fun and very exciting for me.

Today, which is Monday, I went to go get my uniform for school and look to the school. I will hopefully be joining a girls’ soccer team! But they won’t allow me to play rugby, or learn it because it is too dangerous for me. Too much like football, without the protection!

I am enjoying my stay for now. My host brother is going to take me to the school again and introduce me to his friends. So far this trip has been great, and I can’t wait to experience more! Oh yeah, it turns out that school is from 8-6 p.m. Wow! But we get an hour for lunch, which we have at home. And we have 10 classes a day! When I come back to Highlands, school will seem very short for me! ¡Adios para ahora!
