Board: ‘no’ to rezoning

OEI zoning petition approved

By Kim Lewicki
highlandserin@aol.com

Wednesday night commissioners voted 3-2 to rezone a 50-ft. strip of Church Street B1 from B3, but the vote didn’t come easily.

The streetscape of Church Street has long been plagued with a 12-ft high bluff which juts out into the setback making sidewalk and parking configurations difficult – two streetscape items high on the Town Board’s list.

But Commissioner Amy Patterson wants to reduce B1 zoning in town not add it, because B1 doesn’t require setbacks or parking, she said.

“B1 was a zone we allowed to retro-fit a problem that already existed – businesses that couldn’t provide parking, I don’t think we should allow it if parking can be provided.”

Commissioner Dennis DeWolf agreed “I’d love to see shops along the sidewalk but we need to consider the potential impact to other businesses and consider the need for parking in the area.”

OEI architects devised a way to kill two birds with one stone — clean up the look of Church Street and solve the problem of rebuilding a non-conforming building on the bluff, currently in the setback.

Since the rebuilding of the non-conforming building from the foundation up caused such a stir with commissioners some months ago, OEI decided to cut the bluff back, build four shops fronted with a sidewalk on Church Street with a three-bedroom suite upstairs accessed from the Kelsey-Hutchinson Lodge property.

Free health clinic closer to a reality

By Kim Lewicki

After months of organizing and negotiating, it looks like a free health clinic could be opening at county’s health clinic on Buck Creek Road by August.

Committee members are talking with Macon County Health Dept. to work out the details. “I think it would be a good idea,” said Macon County Commissioner Alan Bryson. “If the facility can be put to good use and used more than one day a week as it is now, that would be good. That’s what it’s there for.”

The Macon County Health Clinic at Zachary Field is open one day a week offering the county’s standard health services. For starters, committee members want the new Community Care Clinic to be open at least one night a week.

With the number of uninsured,
Hospital board should do the right thing

Dear Editor,

For the past 22 years I have been a grateful patient of Dr. Mark Heffington and he has served me faithfully both in his office in Cashiers and in the Highlands-Cashiers Hospital. Whenever I’ve needed his help, he has been there for me.

Now I’m told by our community hospital officials that my physician is no longer welcome and that the hospital will, in essence, do whatever it can to drive him out. That is an outrage!

No matter how difficult the negotiations to expand the Cashiers Community Medical Center, to which I and so many others contributed, might have been, our hospital board could have found a way to work with our doctors.

Perhaps it is not too late. If others will join me in expressing their disgust at the recent actions of our hospital CEO and his board, maybe we can make a difference. We need Dr. Heffington and Dr. Wheeler in our community and in our hospital.

Issues raised should be addressed

Dear Editor,

Dr. Heffington’s courageous letter which appeared in the May 27 issue of Highlands’ Newspaper and the anguish decision which prompted it are to be congratulated.

The sorry state of affairs, which finds our Hospital Board pitted against the longest-term servant of the “best medical interests of our community,” is well summarized by Dr. Mark, and his position requires the support of his appreciative patients. I am certainly one of those who are willing to speak out.

Fifteen or so years ago I was proud to serve on the Board of Highlands-Cashiers Hospital and in addition to serve as its Chairman. At this time the focus was on fund-raising for the new hospital, and I am remiss in confessing that in my concentration on that goal, and in working toward the achievement of a CON for our nursing home beds, I was blind to the moves towards the consolidation of power which were proposed by Mr. Calloway.

Now, as Dr. Heffington has clearly explained, that concentration of power has

The grades have been tallied and the final exams taken; four years of hard work have finally paid off.

The valedictorian and salutatorian have been chosen for Highlands School and they are...Alex Osteen and Kayla McCall. Osteen is planning to attend Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem and McCall is to attend The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

McCall said she has enrolled in the six-year pharmacy program.

"I’ve always been interested in the medical field," McCall said. Her mother, Lynn, was a nurse and McCall said she saw what her mother did and wanted to help people but did not want to be that "hands on."

"My strongest subjects are math and science, but I couldn’t do all the blood and gore, so I knew I needed a combination of both subjects," she said.

McCall’s scholarships include the Heffington, the Quilter’s Guild, Retired School Personnel and A.L. Williams’ promise of $2,500 guaranteed for salutatorian. Williams promised $5,000 for valedictorian and a definite $1,000 for each graduating senior at last year’s graduation day festivities.

Bowery Road. Can you believe it? Just when you thought you could safely pick up a newspaper and not see the words “Bowery Road,” you find it staring at you as headlines in bold print. I personally had given up on writing about paving the Bowery because I thought it was a done deal. Pour the black goo already. I can’t wait to write about the first speeder who leaves the road and winds up in someone’s living room.

Anyway, the paving is on temporary hold until the historical architects from DOT (can you believe there is such a thing?) can study the environmental effects of paving the road. Shouldn’t that have been done from the get go, before all this fighting started? Are they ever going to kiss and make up? Do we care?

So there was yet another meeting. I believe number 6,265, on the Bowery Road issue. A very nice lady from DOT came out to take pictures of the cute little survey flags that line the road. She will take the pictures back to her office and study each flag closely before writing her report. These little flags will eventually wind up at the Guinness Book of Records museum, marking the longest and most boring road project in the history of paving. Entire coast to coast interstate highways have been started and completed since this project began.

Folks from the lower seven-tenths of the road who are against the paving, presented the historical architect with a leashed pet salamander they dug up from their front yard. A note attached to the end of the leash read, “Please don’t kill me.” They also presented her with pictures of a very rare and endangered species, the spotted owl, supposedly seen in the area. Actually the picture was taken in 1967 by a Highlander while visiting Arizona.

One Flew Over The Cuckoo’s Nest

Directed by Milos Forman, screenplay by Lawrence Hauben and Bo Goldman, starring Louise Fletcher, Will Sampson, Danny DeVito, Christopher Lloyd (in his first film appearance) and Jack Nicholson, in what may be his only non-creepy role ever. Based on the novel by Ken Kesey.

The Storyline: Randle P. McMurphy (Nicholson) is a man seeking a change of address, understandably, since he is in jail. He thinks 68 days in the state mental hospital might be a bit easier than doing time in the big house, and he gets his wish, for better or worse. His arrival and settling into the hospital is funny, scary, and tragic. His attempts to interact with the inmates, and his attempt to retain any semblance of individuality quickly attract the attention of Institutionalism Personified, the formidable, soft spoken and absolutely terrifying Nurse Ratched (brilliantly, flawlessly portrayed by Louise Fletcher), and attention from Nurse Ratched is hardly ever a good thing.

McMurphy first engages his fellow inmates out of boredom, but eventually comes to care about them and their plight, and being a bit of a rebel, rebellion is what he has to offer them. McMurphy is a kind of catalyst for the largely drugged and defeated patients, and basketball, poker games and fishing trips take on more significance when viewed as part of the epic struggle with the imposing Ratched. You can see the story building to a conclusion as this irresistible force acts on the immovable object, and you get the idea that it might not be pretty.

Those familiar with Kesey’s novel will understand the impossibility of turning it directly into a screen play, so the way the story is told is altered from narration into direct action. And although Kesey hated what Forman did with his story, it really did come out well, in some ways better, or at least more approachable, than the book. Nicholson, who seems born to play this role, was interestingly the third choice for the part, after Marlon Brando, Gene Hackman, and James Caan. Fletcher as Ratched, is positively brilliant, auditioned for the role for six months before finally being cast one week before filming started. The film really is a genuine classic in American cinema, and a real must see for fans of Nicholson, Kesey and Forman, all brilliant in their own fields.

More of Jack Nicholson’s best can be seen in The Shining, Wolf, Witches of Eastwick and As Good As It Gets. More of Forman’s films include Hair and Amadeus, and Man on the Moon. Fletcher can also be seen in Map of the World, Cruel Intentions, and Two Moon Junction.

Macon County’s ‘crimestoppers’ program has community support

A local group of business and civic leaders have established Macon County Crime Stoppers, a non-profit corporation, to assist local law enforcement agencies.

Crime Stoppers is based on the principal that “Someone other than the criminal has information that can solve a crime” and was created to combat the three major problems faced by law enforcement in generating that information: Fear of REPRISAL, an attitude of apathy and reluctance to get involved.

Crime Stoppers resolves these problems by offering anonymity to people who provide information about crimes and Paying rewards when the information supplied leads to an arrest.

“It will give people the opportunity to do the right thing when it comes to reporting crimes and illegal activity and they do not have to fear retaliation from suspects,” said Macon County Sheriff Robbie Holland. “One important thing to remember is people don’t like having to go to court and if you are anonymous you can’t be forced to come to court.”

Holland said the program is extremely beneficial because it allows the public to assist law enforcement agencies in an investigation -- “actually encourages the public to assist us,” he said. “We know that many times there is someone out there that knows more about a crime or illegal activity other than the suspect. We want that person to call.”

Three essential elements make up a Crime Stopper Program: the community, the media and law enforcement agencies.

Citizens are responsible for forming a Crime Stoppers non-profit corporation, whose directors establish policy; determine amount and method of reward payments, work closely with law enforcement and the media and generally oversee the program. The directors are also responsible for fund raising, and all volunteer service. Tax money is not sought.

Crime Stoppers methods, objectives, successes and phone numbers are publicized on a regular basis by the media. Unsolved crimes are given special treatment with details published in newspapers, on radio and in certain cases a re-enactment on television.

A special Crime Stoppers phone with a well-publicized number is provided to the community. Callers are assigned a special code and are never required to give their names. If, after the investigation, the information leads to an arrest, the caller is entitled to a reward.

“It will benefit local law enforcement because it will be our program here in Macon County,” said Holland. “It will give people a number they can call 24 hours a day and remain anonymous at all times.”

Here in Macon County the Macon County Crime Stoppers Board of Directors will oversee the program and approve all rewards based upon the information presented by the MCCS Coordinator.

When an anonymous call is received by Crime Stoppers, it is documented by date and time and a brief summary of the information provided by the caller. The caller is then given a secret code and asked to call back in a few days. The secret code is then used as a means of identifying which case a caller is referring to each time they call back. With the use of this secret code the caller will be able to check on the status of the investigation they provided information for. The caller’s only requirement to do so will be to remember their secret code and to collect their reward if an arrest is made.

After an arrest, the apprehension of a fugitive, or the recovery of stolen property or illegal drugs is made, the Board of Directors will vote on the reward and the amount. The Board will base their determination on what significance the information provided to MCCS by the caller assisted in the investigation. Arrangements will then be made between MCCS and the caller to pick up their reward. The caller will then be given a designated and secure location to receive their CASH reward and will continue to remain completely anonymous as always.

Macon County Crime Stoppers will be soliciting donations from businesses and individuals throughout the local community. Solicitation will be done in person and never by telephone or by mail. All donations are tax deductible. Tax money is not sought.

Highlands organizations rally for local students' civics project

Rainforests provide so much for us. We depend on nature for our every necessity. For protection, providing food, and for creating medicines – 50 percent of the oxygen we breathe is from the rainforest (actually, for Highlands, 100 percent of our oxygen is from our deciduous rainforest). But the world has not realized the importance of conserving our main source of life, and we have only 75 million acres left on the earth. This realization is very shocking and sad. This year I was able to help preserve the rainforests with the help of my Highlands School Civics Teacher Mr. Chris Green and two other students, Kelli Baer and Chase Jenkins.

In late April, Mr. Green gave his civics class an extra credit project of raising money to join the Adopt-an-Acre program. The Adopt-an-Acre program is part of the Nature’s Conservancy, an international non-profit organization whose mission is to preserve the plants, animals and natural communities which represent the diversity of life on Earth by protecting the lands and waters they need to survive. Their Acre Program provides funds for rainforest acquisition and protection. Every year, the Conservancy focuses on a certain rainforest in critical need of help and protection. This year they have chosen the East Kalimantan Province of Indonesia to protect the last of the endangered orangutan population. The cost is $75 to buy and help preserve an acre.

Mr. Green gave us the assignment of raising money to buy an acre, with the understanding that we would get extra credit for it. When I heard about this, I immediately seized the opportunity to take the project to another level. While reaching my goal of conserving the rainforest, I found that Chase and Kelli were interested, too. They were just as ambitious as I was and determined to make a change. We didn’t actually do this for extra credit, but rather to save what was left of our main source of life. Our goal was to get three acres of rainforest.

Thanks to Kim Lewicki, publisher of Highlands’ Newspaper and Mrs. Bomengen, our school principal, we were able to present our project to the Highlands Mountain Top Rotary Club and asked for their help with our project. A week later, the Mountain Top donated $75 for our cause.

To get the attention of the student body, I thought it would be a good idea if we made a tree to be displayed in the school lobby where everyone passes. We made a trunk out of construction paper, and sold paper leaves for $1 and butterflies for $5. Soon the naked trunk was filled with leaves and colorful paper butterflies with the names of all the donors. All the money we collected from the purchases of leaves and butterflies and other donations was put into an account.

To our pleasant surprise, there were a lot more butterflies than leaves, which meant we reached our goal at a faster rate! We also got support from Debbie Grossman, who allowed us to put a flyer on her bulletin board at her restaurant, Fressers, to inform customers about our project. Chase came up with the idea of distributing flyers for the elementary students to take home to show their parents. We got many generous donations from the kids and parents too!

From the last week in April to the third week of May, students and parents kept donating money for the rainforest. We got to our goal of three acres by the end of the second week. We decided to go higher on our next goal. Kelli suggested we try to get to seven acres of rainforest. That meant we had to raise $525!

By the second week in May we were $10 away from getting enough money for six acres. But our luck soon changed. While visiting Debbie to collect money from donors, she graciously donated $85 for the Adopt-an-Acre. Program that immediately put us at seven acres.

We were ecstatic to see we had reached our goal. Or highest goal was met, and we are thankful to all who donated — especially those who donated more than $20 – Junior Beta, Mrs. Taylor and the Highlands-Cashiers Temperance Service, Dr. Wagner, Highlands Mountain Top Rotary Club and Fressers. Thank you for showing your support for Highlands School students, and the rainforest.

led to some unfortunate decisions which are most definitely not in the "best medical interests of our community."

One of the prime rationales presented to the Cashiers community for continuing to have a hospital here, i.e., the need for constructing a new hospital as the old facility was about to be shut down, was that we could not expect to recruit and retain quality primary care physicians without offering them a proper, up-to-date facility in which to continue their patients' care when critical care became necessary.

Fast-forward 15 or so years, and suddenly the hospital doesn't even need those physicians any more! What could the Board and its Executive Committee possibly be thinking which results in decisions that virtually force the resignation of our dedicated and respected family doctor? Certainly Mr. Nussbaum's letter offers no hint of explanation. It is instead the usual brush-off received when closer inquiries are made of the hospital's executives.

Those of us who have been so fortunately and faithfully served by our community doctors should not allow the Board to accept Dr. Heffington's resignation. Surely there is a means of reaching a satisfactory compromise for the future of our community-funded Cashiers Health Care facility and all the caring health-care professionals who serve our hospital. If the effective dismissal of Dr. Heffington and Dr. Wheeler is the best our Hospital Board can do, then it's time we all speak out to seek better representation and service elsewhere. It is, after all, our hospital, too!

My conclusion is that our best medical interests are far better served by having Drs. Heffington and Wheeler on the hospital's medical staff, and able to speak out, than forced from service to all patients at that facility.

Restore Heffington's affiliation

Dear Editor,

It is hard to know all the causes of Dr. Mark Heffington's letter of resignation from the H/C Hospital and the Board's acceptance of it. It is much, much harder for us to accept it.

I served on the Hospital Board some 20 years ago at the time of the decision to build the new hospital. Dr. Heffington was the first physician we met then -- he has been our primary care physician, as well as our good friend, ever since.

Next to a spouse, there is no one more intimately involved in life than one's family physician. Mark has been beside us through all of our times and trials, both good and bad. We trust him totally and support him now.

Five years ago, we moved from our home in Cashiers to the Highlands retirement community of Chestnut Hill, in large part because of the nearness of the H/C Hospital and Dr. Heffington's association with it. It is impossible to understand the need of the hospital to sever Mark's ability to serve his patients with inpatient care.

Surely the good men and women of the Hospital Board can find a way to restore Dr. Heffington's affiliation. There may be personal frictions, but there cannot be any question of Mark's qualifications and willingness to serve his patients in the H/C Hospital.

At another time of fundraising, the hospital's reputation, not Dr. Heffington's, rests on resolution of this troubling matter. Our community deserves much more than a patronizing letter of dismissal from the Board.

Be responsible for your own actions

Dear Editor,

This is in response to the letter from Edna Foster titled-Say "no" to the cheeseburger bill which appeared in the May 27 issue of Highlands’ Newspaper.

Ms. Foster complains that the bill will prevent people from suing the food industry when they become "addicted" to the food. This is absurd. When are these people going to learn that you have to take some personal responsibility?

The first lawsuit against the fast-food industry was in 2002. A man in New York blamed his obesity and diabetes on McDonald’s. Maybe this isn’t a federal issue and maybe it should be the courts’ job to decide which lawsuits are frivolous but maybe some of us should get up and exercise and have enough control over our bodies to choose to eat or not to eat. The government shouldn’t have to be your babysitter. If you have health problems because of your eating habits, there is no one to blame but yourself.

Notice I did not say upppit) brought along their lawyer, causing folks from lower Bowery Road to do the same. Everyone is getting a little nervous here so the lawyers were there just in case someone misspoke. "Misspoke" is a political word invented by President Bill Clinton which means "I have just been caught in an out and out lie. The Pres. also redefined the word "is" and lawyers have also added that to their bag of tricks.

Anyway, you know what happens when two or more lawyers gather at the same spot? That's right, double trouble with money flowing out of folks' pockets and into theirs. That's exactly what happened because someone suggested another collection basket be passed around. Looks to me like the only people who really benefited from this meeting were the lawyers.

Once the study of the little flags is complete, a report and the pictures of the flags will be sent to the cone heads in Raleigh who will read the report and further study the flags. Once that's complete, a decision will be made. This, of course, is all meaningless because, in the interim, phone calls are being made from both sides of the issue, trying to influence the decision of the folks who are charged with studying little survey flags. The side with the most clout wins. So if you have a friend who has a cousin who knows a guy who is married to a DOT executive, make the call.

Only a few folks were expected to show up for the meeting, but the word got out and even people who didn't live on Bowery Road came to the meeting so they could put in their two cents worth (not literally). They were about to be told to butt out and go home when one of the lawyers saw that one of the outsiders had a bulging wallet and suggested he be allowed speak. This is democracy in action, folks, so watch this play out.

I personally knew about the meeting but did not attend. I just look dumb but "I is" much smarter than you might think. I didn't want to be the first Highlander to be tied down and stoned to death on Bowery Road.

even though he had to take three English classes his senior year to make up for it.

"Most of school wasn't too hard, except for this past year," he said. "But I'm definitely ready for a break."

Osteen and his mother, Janet, are traveling to Iowa to visit his grandfather, who will then accompany Osteen to Canada.

McCall will be staying in town and working at Nick's Restaurant and taking a trip to Florida before she starts school in late August.

"I'm a little nervous about starting over," she said. "I'm a little shy when I meet new people, but I'm really excited."

It was a close call between the two straight A students and Osteen said it couldn't have been more than a tenth of a point that separated them. Osteen and McCall both said that getting straight A's in everything was more of the goal than becoming valedictorian or salutatorian.

"It was always in the back of my head, but it was not an intentional decision," said McCall. "It's not what I was set on."

In order for a student to be eligible for valedictorian or salutatorian he/she must have been enrolled on or before the first day of the junior year. Only grades earned in an accredited high school will be used in computation to determine awards. Calculations will be based on course averages for four complete years of high school. The weighted grade point average from the North Carolina High School Standardized Transcript will be used to rank students based on all courses the students have completed or in which they are enrolled. The following minimum standards must be met: 4 units in English including Introduction to Literature, World Literature, American Literature and British Literature; 3 units in Social Studies including ELP, World Studies and U.S. History; 3 units in Math including Algebra I, Geometry, Algebra II or one advanced level Math if Algebra I was taken in eighth grade; 3 units in Science including Biology, Chemistry, Physics or other advanced science; 1 unit of Health and P.E. and 2 units of a Foreign Language. Students must have a minimum average of 90 in the above named courses and a minimum average of 92 overall. Grades are averaged at the end of the third 9 weeks of the senior year. The student with the highest GPA is the valedictorian and the second highest is salutatorian.

Osteen said he is currently writing his speech for the graduation ceremony set for next Saturday at 7 p.m. at the Highlands Rec Park.

"I'm definitely going to keep it short," he said.

Because the building and the bluff is in the Church Street setback, a sidewalk couldn’t be constructed on the south side of the street without jutting into the driveway, nor would there be room for parking spaces along the sidewalk.

With the bluff cut back and the strip rezoned B1 50 feet in from the corner of Fourth, the streetscape will be "straightened out" which will allow for a sidewalk and four or five more parking places in front of the shops.

"We want to put everything on street level and the back wall of the new building will act as a retaining wall," said OEI’s CEO Mario Gomes.

"Re-zoning of the strip solves three problems," said Zoning Administrator Larry Gantenbein. "It cleans up the streetscape, solves the setback problem and creates more parking."

Commissioners Patterson and DeWolf voted against the rezoning request. Commissioner Herb James said what is there now. OEI engineer Bronce Pesterfield said it's a way to make a conforming situation rather than a nonconforming one.

OEI spokesman, George Mathis, said OEI has also agreed to put four more parking spaces in front of the generator farther down the street.

All parking on Church Street is currently two-hour parking.

The birth of Highlands’ SOAR

Editor’s Note: This is a multi-part series on the Special Operations Warrior Foundation, its origins and the Special Operations Adventure Race. Two races – an adventure race and a spirit race – are set in Highlands for June 25, 2005.

By Erin Brown
highlandserin@aol.com

In 2002 Special Operations Warrior Foundation was in charge of providing education for 330 children, this year the number has jumped to 500. The organization is dedicated to providing college educations to the children of fallen special operators.

"With everything going on it will continue to grow," Lieutenant Colonel David Horwitz said. "We try to do our best but it still happens." The foundation began 25 years ago with an aborted mission, dubbed Operation Eagle Claw, aimed at rescuing 53 American hostages who were held by Iranian terrorists at the U.S. Embassy compound in Tehran, Iran.

The mission was terminated at the last minute due to mechanical problems with one of the crew's helicopters, and eight special operations members died when another helicopter collided with an EC-130 transport plane at the mission's desert rendezvous point.

Born out of tragedy and heartache, the foundation was set in motion that night in the desert, when a group of survivors pledged to care for the children of their fallen comrades. Since then the foundation has awarded grants to about 530 children of more than 440 special operations personnel who have given their lives to ensure the freedom of America.

Horwitz, whose parents Bill and Nancy reside in Highlands, has witnessed the travesties of war firsthand and took a bold and proactive step in helping his fellow servicemen.

"Our maximum life insurance policies pay out at $250,000 and that just doesn’t cover the families’ expenses." Most military wives have young children and are immediately thrown into the single working parent lifestyle, not to mention the devastation of being a widow, $250,000 doesn’t cover the everyday expenditure, he said.

Horwitz said most servicemen have supplemental policies which they pay out of pocket and it would probably take an "Act of Congress" to provide a higher pay out.

"It’s my personal belief that it should be upped," he said. "The military just can’t afford it for everybody."

Horwitz spoke with Highlands Mayor Buck Trott about having a fundraiser for the foundation in Highlands and the Mayor suggested an adventure race. Horwitz loved the idea and the Special Operations Adventure Race, SOAR, began. The Special Operations Adventure Race, sponsored by the foundation, is held annually to raise money for the fund. The dates for the auction are June 23 and June 25 for the adventure and spirit race. This year there will be two races – a spirit race and an adventure race. This year marks the third year for SOAR, which comes to the Highlands/Cashiers area every summer, but it is also marks the silver anniversary of the foundation's inception.

Horwitz, is the head of the Command Squadron for Special Tactics at Hurlburt Air Force Base in Tampa, Fla. He trains, equips and mans airmen in three different categories. First are battlefield airmen, who are combat air traffic controllers and call air strikes for Special Forces; combat search and rescue, who are para-rescuers trained in rescuing men lost in the battlefield.

Para-rescuers tried to recover Neal Roberts who had fallen out of a helicopter over the Afghani Mountains and eventually succumbed to his wounds.

The third group Horwitz trains is combat weathermen who forward locations and produce weather locations to prevent helicopters from taking off in inclement weather.

After 9-11 Horwitz felt an even greater responsibility to the children of his contemporaries and looking into the eyes of his two children he vowed to do whatever he could.

"We are a tightly knit group and we take care of our own," he said. "We have recently lost people within this month and our job is taking care of those families."

Horwitz said the SOWF benefits everybody and is a way to compensate people who are consistently put themselves in harms way to guarantee liberty.

Donations can be sent to P.O. Box 923, Highlands, NC, 28741. For more information, call Bill Horwitz at 526-0224.

Highlands Historical Society recipient of Barratt artifacts

Judy Hempe Johansson found Highlands’ Newspaper on-line the spring of 2004 and began an email relationship with Publisher Kim Lewicki. The relationship developed into a friendship and a visit to Highlands May 22, 2005. Realizing people in Highlands might appreciate her mementos of the past, Judy sought out an organization which might benefit from her family’s artifacts. Lewicki and Hempe agreed the Highlands Historical Society should be the recipient especially with the opening of the historic village this summer.

By Kim Lewicki

When Judy Hempe Johansson began going through boxes Watson Barratt left in her family’s care when he died in 1962, memories came flooding back – memories of a treasured by-gone era in Highlands, N.C.

The families knew each other in New York City where Judy’s father was a commercial interior decorator – decorating night clubs, restaurants and theater sets.

“That’s where my father, Fred Hempe and Watson Barratt met around 1946 or 1947,” said Judy. “at a theater in New York City, very likely Radio City Music Hall.”

Watson Barratt who married Louise Bascom was an acclaimed set designer and producer in New York City, London, Paris and elsewhere. Judy said her father and Watson joined forces at the St. Louis Municipal Opera from the late 1940s through the 1950s where Watson was director.

“And it was about that time they began working on the Bascom-Louise Inn,” she said.

After Louise Bascom Barratt died, Watson was left in charge of the Bascom family’s holdings in Highlands which included the Tricemont Terrace Inn. Though that had been its name for 14 years, In 1951 Watson renamed it the Bascom-Louise after his wife. (He also named the endowed branch of the Hudson Library – the Bascom-Louise Gallery after Louise).

Louise Bascom was a well-known writer and it was through her articles in Harper’s Weekly, Good Housekeeping and Ladies Home Journal that Watson became attracted to her. (See “Heart of the Blue Ridge, Highlands, North Carolina,” by Ran Shaffner).

After they married, Watson illustrated many of her articles as was the practice in the industry prior to photography.

After Louise died, Watson made Highlands his home for more than just the summers. He involved himself in the formation of the Bascom-Louise

On May 22, Judy and her sister Janet presented Wiley Sloan and Ran Shaffner of the Highlands Historical Society with a variety of historical mementos. Also pictured is Highlands’ Newspaper publisher Kim Lewicki who put the two groups together. The Old Edwards Inn & Spa donated a room at the Kelsey-Hutchinson Lodge Sunday night, so the sisters could at least be “on the site” of the old Bascom Louise site.

“Going through all this memorabilia has transported me back to Highlands, the Bascom Louise, and Chetolah (Barratt’s home on Satulah). Thanks for helping me drift back in time,” said Judy.

Items presented to the Historical Society include photographs of Mrs. Louise Bascom Barratt in her NY apartment, a pen-and-ink sketch of Mr. Watson Barratt, an original advertising pamphlet from the Bascom Louise Inn, numerous glass negatives of the Inn, (see Highlands’ Newspaper Oct. 15 and Oct. 22) a leather-bound Barratt family photo album, a stereographer and numerous photos of the Barratt apartment in NY, etc. Mrs. Johanssen is also giving the society movies of Hillbilly days in Highlands. “My mother sewed dresses Hillbilly Day for the teenage maids at the inn. She dressed in my father’s old pants, I shirt and big hat and dirtied her face,” said Judy. “I was embarassed she looked like that and was grouchy all day.”

The Hempe family inherited many of the items from the Barratt apartment including rugs, paintings, and books. Judith and Janet were like “grandchildren” to Watson and Louise who had no children of their own. They recall the Barratt’s magnificent apartment that overlooked Central Park West — a large duplex, with the interior walls of the dining room done in black and red lacquer with gold. The living room had large two-story windows and a hand-painted mural covered the stairway wall.

An oil painting done by Barratt was donated by Judith to the Society of Illustrators in Manhattan, an organization that Barratt did much work for helping them to get original funding. Judith has several of Barratt’s original sketches for set designs in her home.

““We used to take the hotel guests on rock hunting trips to Cowee Valley looking for rubies and garnets,” said Judy.

Without any heirs, Watson left his personal belongings to the Hempe family. Judy has some of Watson’s illustrations and oil paintings hanging in her home in Florida, but others she’s donated to the Society of Illustrators in New York City and still others have been sold at Sotheby’s.

Dear Editor,

Mark Heffington has long been known as an excellent diagnostician. His resignation letter demonstrates once again his superior skills in this regard. His letter says it all.

Although the Highlands-Cashiers Hospital owns the Cashiers Medical Center facility, it was the Cashiers community’s admiration of Doctor Heffington that enabled the money to be raised from the community for that facility. The Mountain Area Family Medicine practice has grown to become an important and integral part of the community. Doctors Heffington and Wheeler have provided extraordinary medical service, at some sacrifice, to a wide range of patients – summer, winter, wealthy, unemployed, and working.

And now our Hospital Board is dismissing the Chief of the Medical Service. And now our Hospital Board wants to build another medical facility in Cashiers.

Perhaps what is required is a management audit as well as a forensic financial audit of our hospital.

Knowing of my long association with the hospital and my great admiration for Doctor Heffington, several people have said to me words to the effect that those things identified in Doctor Heffington’s letter have needed to be said for a long time.

Life is a reflection of you

A son and his father were walking on the mountains.

Suddenly, his son falls, hurts himself and screams: “AAAhhhhhhhhhh!!!”

To his surprise, he hears the voice repeating, somewhere in the mountain: “AAAhhhhhhhhhh!!!”

Curious, he yells: “Who are you?”

He receives the answer: “Who are you?”

Angered at the response, he screams: “Coward!”

He receives the answer: “Coward!”

He looks to his father and asks: “What’s going on?”

The father smiles and says: “My son, pay attention.”

And then he screams to the mountain: “I admire you!”

The voice answers: “I admire you!”

Again the man screams: “You are a champion!”

The voice answers: “You are a champion!”

The boy is surprised, but does not understand.

Then the father explains: “People call this ECHO, but really this is LIFE.

It gives you back everything you say or do. Our life is simply a reflection of our actions. If you want more love in the world, create love.

Our life is simply a reflection of our actions. If you want more in your life, improve your competence.

If you want more competence in your team, improve your competence.

This relationship applies to everything, in all aspects of life;

Life will give you back everything you have given to it.

Your life is not a coincidence, it’s a reflection of you!

detached house and a historical home on the site.

Prior to Wednesday night’s meeting Simmerson was shuffled from the appearance commission, the planning board, town board, planning board and back to the town board again all the while complying to the suggestions and wishes of each board.

Driven by the rezoning request, Zoning Administrator Larry Gantenbein drafted an amendment to deal with a vegetative buffer around multi-family plots but it was tabled until the board can decide on the width of the buffer -- 20 feet or 40 feet -- and whether the buffer should and not just the setback encircle the perimeter of multi-family lots.

Meanwhile, the board denied the rezoning request.

“I don’t think the community needs more population, that specific area doesn’t need anymore,” said Commissioner Amy Patterson. “I look at what’s best for the community the neighborhood and then the piece of property.”

Commissioner Hank Ross disagreed saying the next developer could put five commercial buildings with five entrances to those businesses off U.S. 64 and then four more residences behind it leading to even more traffic on that road.

“There will be absolutely no buffer and the entire hill will be plowed down,” he said. “Do we need five more cheesy shops along Highway 64.”

Ross said it was a risk and Patterson said she felt it was a risk putting 18 houses there too.

“I’m not a proponent of multi-family, I’d rather see it all single family, but that’s not what’s before us,” he said. “What’s before us is someone who’s willing to take it out of the commercial zone.”

Commissioner Dennis DeWolf said it was very unfortunate the property was split zoned because it makes it very difficult to make a decision regarding which zone to change it too.

“I fear you better watch what you wish for,” said Randy Power, a member of the audience. “Obviously the owners are in serious negotiations and are in a mode of selling that property and they’re going to sell it to somebody. I’ve spoken with them and they are going to sell out. If we run this fellow off who seems to be as good as we can hope for, the next guy could destroy the neighborhood. Don’t run this guy off.”

The board talked about putting a moratorium on multi-family building but didn’t because they already approved it in B3 zones.

Though the Simmerson’s rezoning request was denied, the Town Board has asked the planning board to consider rezoning the parcel all R-2.

The next Town Board meeting is scheduled for June 15.

working-poor residents growing, a need for free primary health care has been identified, they said. Several doctors in the area have offered their services for free.

The vision of the free clinic is that everyone deserves to have basic health care. Its mission is to provide free health care services to the medically underserved who live or work in the Highlands-Cashiers area.

The idea was spearheaded by Dr. Mark Heffington who established a Mobile Health Clinic for migrant workers in the Cashiers area a couple of years ago. The mobile unit, equipped with basic medical supplies a nurse and a doctor, visits migrant worker camps and farms regularly.

The Community Care Clinic organizing committee includes Jim Graham, the Highlands Hospital Administrator; Dr. Mark Heffington, Kathy McGaha with Healthy Carolinians of Macon County, Dr. Don Mullen of Highlands First Presbyterian Church and Ginger Slaughter. At last week’s meeting a board of directors was named — Jean Whitby, Griffin Bell, John Greene, and Mitchell Watson and one person from the Cashiers Dental Clinic Group who is yet unnamed.

Plans to house the clinic on the campus of the Highlands-Cashiers Hospital fell through, but it looks like the next best venue might come through – at the Macon County Health Dept. clinic.

“We wanted the clinic to be close to the hospital campus and this looks like the perfect fit,” said Slaughter.

Graham said it’s likely grant money can fund start-up costs to support the clinic for two years and a flow of grant money and fundraising could keep it going thereafter. The hospital board has agreed to give the clinic $50,000 worth of services – lab work, X-rays, and tests – at least for the first year.

“They’ve also agreed to give us $5,000 which we will use to set up the office with a computer and software,” said founding member, Ginger Slaughter.

“I think a free health clinic would provide a much needed service to our area,” said McGaha. “An individual who does not have health insurance, and cannot afford to pay for these services, will have an option for primary care.”

The group is a 5013c status so it can tap state and federal grant money and receive funds from any foundation or individual who wishes to donate.
