Do you want your Congressional representative to live in District 11?

By Brittney Lofthouse
The logical answer to the question raised in the headline should be a resounding "yes," but residents in Western North Carolina's District 11 could potentially lose their representation in Congress, depending on the outcome

Migrant workers get mobile health clinic

By Brian O'Shea
Plateau Daily News
The Rotary Club of Cashiers Valley distributed more than $100,000 to the Vecinos Farmworker Health Program for a new and much-needed mobile clinic on Dec. 11 at Cashiers United Methodist Church.

Vecinos is a nonprofit health-care organization serving and advocating for farmworkers in western North Carolina. Vecinos aims to improve the lives of farmworkers and their families by offering mobile medical services and health education, along with advocating for farmworker rights.

Rotary also received its largest individual donation of $25,000 by Rotarian Ron Keller. Last year, Keller made a challenge gift of

Highlands School brings back alumni basketball game tradition

By Brian O'Shea
Plateau Daily News
Highlands School hosted its first alumni-basketball game in 10 years on Saturday, Dec. 28, with dozens of former students representing their class by battling it out on the court.

More than 20 Highlands School alumni showed up for Saturday's game with Blue taking on arch rival Gold and that's when things got real on the court.

Teams Blue and Gold were neck and neck throughout the first three quarters, but then Gold stepped up their game and took the win 55-42.

Highlands Athletic Director Brett Lamb said it's all to have a good time wants to make it an annual event, again.

"It's a great way to keep our alumni as a part of our program and let our current players to see some of the 'old timers,'" said Lamb. "Big thanks to Booster Club, [Chris] Duffy and all that attended. It really shows Highlander pride."

Select Bank is coming to Highlands

By Brittney Lofthouse
The Highlands Entegra Bank location will soon have a new owner.

As part of the merger agreement between Entegra Bank and First Citizens Bank, three Entegra Bank locations, including the Highlands location, had to be sold to another bank prior to the merger being approved by the Department of Justice.

The two entities announced just before the new year that Select Bank and Trust had purchased the three Entegra Bank locations and would assume operations in the next few months.

"The agreement with Select Bank represents a step forward in the merger with Entegra, said Frank Holding, chairman and chief executive officer of First Citizens Bank. "Select Bank is

On preserving what matters

While I'm optimistic about many things at the beginning of the new year, I also have concerns.

What I'm about to describe is illustrative of concerns and challenges that I think we will face on the Highlands Plateau.

A recent article in the Carolina Press reported that the US Forest Service is partnering with the Eastern Band of the Cherokee Nation seeking advice on how to manage and preserve forest species. The Cherokees have thousands of years of traditional knowledge about managing and preserving the forest, especially plant and wildlife species.

What really caught my attention was the US Forest Service's concern about managing the ramp population. Ramps are a wild onion that the Cherokee and settlers have eaten in the spring for many generations. There is a growing concern that wild ramps of the forest may become endangered. Trendy restaurants that cater to "hip foodies," are now serving wild ramps as an exotic, but popular, dish.

Highlands Mayor

Chefs are creating a growing market for this traditional, albeit lowly dish. Entrepreneurs are going into the forest and picking gallons of ramps to meet this demand. A gallon bucket can bring as much as $50.

The article points out that the Cherokee had the rule of fours when harvesting wild plants. Out of four plants they would only harvest one, and even that plant was cut to where the root was harvested in order to generate a new plant.

The forest service experts want to learn about these practices as a way of sustaining natural plant life in forest lands. Like ginseng and Galax, demand and over-harvesting of ramps could become a serious problem. Currently, licenses are required to harvest plants on forest service lands, but laws do not deter the unscrupulous.

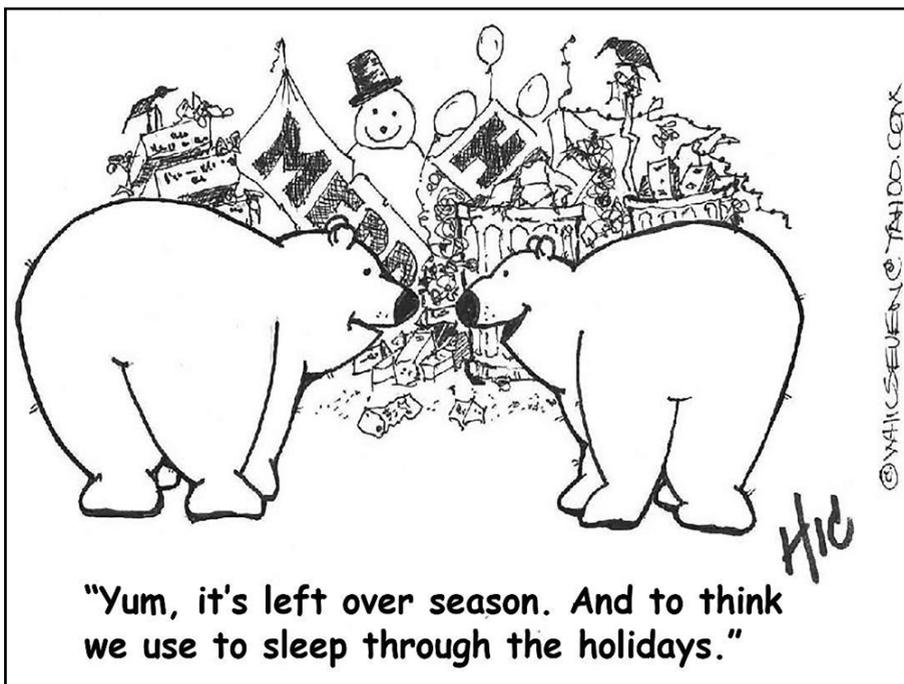

There is a lot of talk about invasive species on the plateau, like Japanese Knot Weed and Kudzu. It might just be that we humans are the biggest invasive species to the plateau. Our uncontrolled and thoughtless actions could have detrimental consequences to this unique environment. The growing problem with the wild ramp is a cautionary tale, maybe another canary in the mine situation.

I am grateful in many ways that we have a booming economy on the plateau, but this robust tourist business may put pressures on the environment and community that could have a lasting impact. How much should we build, develop, and in the lowly ramp situation, harvest?

How many short-term rental units can the community sustain before permanent neighborhoods are eroded? How many more parking spaces can the business district accommodate? And how many tourists do we have the capacity to attract? How many visitors can the town accommodate without becoming overcrowded to a tipping point? These are all questions we need to address because we all want to preserve what it is that brings people here: the lowly ramp, the beautiful landscape, and the simple mountain life.

Hope you have a happy and prosperous new year.

An Exceptional Bit of Cardboard

Dear Editor,

I recently found in my mailbox a piece of cardboard addressed to Postal Customer.

I assumed it was meant for me or my spouse. I also assumed that other Postal Customers in Highlands may have received a similar bit of mail. It is entitled "WideOpen Highlands." At first, I thought we may soon have more bars and possibly a poolhall. Nope, it flogs connection to the internet.

Now, the reason I consider this to be exceptional is that I take exception to just about everything on both sides of the cardboard. I have been involved in all things electronic since 1954 and computers in particular since about 1990. I know a little about cables and networks.

The front side is laden with assertions that are misleading and in some cases are untrue. It is very much lacking in the helpful factual information a person needs to make a decision about opting for the services offered by WideOpen Networks.

WideOpen implies that copper is old and limited. Their website states they will run a fiber cable to your building to a junction device that has four of the old/bad copper connections where you can connect more old/bad copper cables to your modem and router. But not to worry, they offer an option. For only about three thousand five hundred dollars they will install fiber cables in your house.

They make no mention of what their top speed in Highlands may be or what the prices will be. My local cable company has already run fiber cables and offers speeds up to 1 Gigabyte. They are also upfront about what the cost is.

One fact WideOpen got right is that fiber transmits data much faster than copper – 65,000 times faster. Fiber cable were first put in service by US government in 1975 (nope WideOpen did not invent fiber cable) and was put in commercial use in 1977 by a Chicago telephone company. WideOpen implies that with other cable the 'standard' is dropped calls and low quality "videoconferences". The only dropped calls I have experienced during these past 22 years have nothing to do with my very reliable local cable. They were on my cell phone. Having no opportunity or need to "videoconference", I can't say if it is low quality or not. They also state that with other cable you are often forced to "bundle". Let's figure this one out. I have been forced to "bundle" zero times in 22 years. Now this does not seem to be very often.

On the backside of this exceptional piece of cardboard they ask for a lot.

The backside seeks quite a bit of the Postal Customer's personal and financial information.

Seemingly more than is needed for WideOpen to accomplish their stated goal of where to run cable first in the Highlands area.

If I were interested in answering their "survey", I would not include what I am paying now and definitely not my phone number since phone conversations on the potential customer's end provides no written evidence of what assertions and promises their sales persons may make.

If other Highlands Postal Customers have no internet or have unreliable service with terrible/nonexistent customer service, they may want to consider WideOpen, but only after WideOpen or the town of Highlands reveals what speed each user really needs and what the actual total cost will be. WideOpen just provides a connection to the internet all other services and equipment and fees are extra.

WideOpenNetworks operates out of office number 2150 on Kraft Drive in Blacksburg Virginia which is right in the midst of many Virginia Tech buildings. I assume that there are many computer/network savvy people in Blacksburg, yet according to the Blacksburg Government website, WideOpen Networks serves only two neighborhoods with Comcast and Verizon serving the whole city. Seems puzzling to me.

As for me, right now, I am staying with my local cable company.

$25,000 to Rotary to initiate fundraising for a new mobile clinic with a goal to raise $75,000. Over the past four months, Keller and Vecinos Executive Director Marianne Martinez have visited Rotary Clubs throughout WNC to reach the goal.

"This is the most satisfying $25,000 I've ever spent," said Keller. "Since I started this, seeing this happen and come together, all the active support we've received for this is incredible."

Martinez said a new mobile clinic will allow Vecinos to serve patients like 'Roger,' who had to take an unexpected trip to Mexico from WNC. While on his way to his hometown, he was kidnapped, drugged, beaten, and robbed by a gang. He escaped to his family and made his way back to his job in WNC.

While Roger's physical wounds healed, Martinez said his mental wounds and PTSD persisted.

"He reached out to Vecinos for confidential help, worried that one of his 5 roommates, or 74 close neighbors might overhear his story," said Martinez. "Vecinos helped him, but because of our infrastructure with the current mobile clinic, we were limited in our approach. A new mobile clinic will allow us to fully serve patients like Roger, and so many more, who need not only physical care, but much more beyond what we can see with our eyes."

Migrant farmworkers typically live in crowded rooms with limited privacy or security. Martinez said having a private, third space to seek health care is critical to farmworkers' well-being.

Their current mobile clinic is one room, open to the elements, and not completely private, which limits the physical exams and mental health interventions that can be done.

A new mobile clinic allows them to serve farmworkers in their homes, after the workday, breaking down barriers to accessing health care as well as cultural barriers to seeking mental healthcare. The new mobile clinic will incorporate three separate rooms for confidential physical and mental health screenings.

Vecinos means "neighbors" in Spanish, and that's the foundation of the program's mission, said Martinez. 98% of Vecinos patients are Spanish-speaking; all identify as Latino.

"Vecinos believes in reaching out, with open hands and hearts, and being good neighbors to the people who plant and pick our food," she said. "Farmworkers often feel like an invisible population; at Vecinos, we don't just offer health care, we aim to show appreciation for the important work that farmworkers do, offer them the support and care that all people deserve, and welcome them to our area as valuable members of our community."

known for its longstanding commitment to customer service. We'll work together to ensure a smooth transition."

Select Bancorp Inc. the holding company for Select Bank & Trust, was founded in 2000 and is headquartered in Dunn, N.C. While based in North Carolina, Select Bank & Trust also has locations in South Carolina and Virginia.

"We're excited about extending our presence to these Western North Carolina communities and look forward to welcoming our new customers and employees to our bank in the days ahead," said William L. "Bill" Hedgepeth II, president and chief executive officer of Select Bank.

Macon Bank CEO touted the sell and shared his support of the new bank and its mission.

"Select Bank shares the same values and philosophies of our two companies. We believe Select Bank will be a great fit for these customers and communities," said Roger Plemens, president and chief executive officer of Entegra Bank.

As part of the agreement, Select Bank will assume approximately $180 million in deposits and will purchase approximately $110 million in loans.

Plemens noted that employees currently serving the three branches will retain their jobs and customers will be given the opportunity to remain at the branches and transfer their accounts to Select Trust or move to a different branch location of Entegra Bank, which will soon become First Citizens.

• WORD MATTER •

Welcome to 2020: All Politics, All the Time

Bud Katz

This year, along with the presidency, a third of the U.S. Senate and all seats in the U.S. House are, at least technically, up for grabs. According to the non-partisan Cook Political Report (www.cookpolitical.com), as of this writing, North Carolina's Thom Tillis, is "likely" to be returned to the Senate. Of the 93 House races Cook sees as competitive, the three in North Carolina (Districts 2, 9, and 13) are either "likely" or "leaning" Republican. Cook sees Gov. Cooper (D) as "likely" to be reelected. Solid, likely, leaning and toss-up are the words Cook uses to describe each race.

Of course, the presidency is, as always, in play. Unless he's removed from office or abducted by aliens, Donald Trump (R) will run for a second term, and as of right now there's no bona fide front-runner among the dozen or so candidates still in play for Democrats.

Of the 538 electoral votes available, the Cook Political report maintains approximately 85 are "toss ups," meaning they could go either way. These electoral votes are in Arizona (11), Florida (29), Pennsylvania (20), Wisconsin (10), and North Carolina (15). Another 10 states with 80 electoral votes are "leaning" either D or R and could be fall into play for a variety of reasons.

For purposes of this column, this all means we North Carolinians have every reason to (a) register and (b) vote! There's more you can do, of course. You can help register voters. You can contribute to a campaign. You can work a phone bank, knock on doors, deliver yard signs, etc. Registering and voting is, literally, the least you can and should do.

Regardless of which way you "lean" or are "likely" to vote, here are a few non-partisan suggestions before casting your ballot.

First, never believe what you hear from a candidate for any position when he or she says something definitive, such as, "Vote for me and we'll have Medicare for All." He or she may support, and may even propose Medicare for All, but he or she can't promise it, unless he or she controls both houses of Congress and holds a veto-proof majority in the Senate.

Second, even though you may have registered with a party preference (D or R), you don't have to vote that way in the general election. One reason I've registered No Party Affiliation is that a party doesn't guarantee the best, or even a good candidate. It only guarantees a candidate that party's leadership believes might be able to win. And as we know, there's a lot more to elected office than just winning.

Third, elections often come down to making the best bad choice. Pay attention to not only what a candidate says about his/her opponent, but what he/she says about him/herself. It's always better to vote FOR, instead of voting AGAINST someone or something.

Elections matter. It's a small investment of your time to brush up on issues, learn which candidate speaks clearly to your concerns. And, while on the subject of your concerns, try to consider more than just your own interests. A candidate may indicate a preference for something you personally support (border walls, free health care, etc.), but may also be in the pocket of interests you don't care for (NRA, Planned Parenthood, etc.). Be thoughtful about who you're giving your vote and/or support to.

Fourth, just because a candidate is already in office doesn't mean he/she deserves to remain in office. Incumbents, especially on the national and state levels, have a built-in advantage when it comes to reelection. Don't vote to keep them there just because they're already there.

Finally, the elected officials who are most important in your life are actually those who are closest to you; town, city, and county boards, commissions, and councils. The state and national elections may be noisier and more interesting, but so much of what they do or don't do doesn't necessarily impact our lives.

I don't ever tell anyone who I voted for or who they should vote for. At the end of the day, the most important thing anyone can do is pay attention, do a little research on what matters to you, and vote the way and for whom YOU want, not what anyone else tells you to do. And please, don't vote based on party. Party means nothing.

It's YOUR vote. It's sacred and it's private. Use it wisely.

of the 2020 election.

While a total of 19 candidates filed for the District 11 House of Representative seat after Rep. Mark Meadows announced he would not be seeking re-election, only 10 of the 19 live within the District 11 boundaries Meadows ran in, however, the Congressional Maps were redrawn late last year.

The new Congressional Maps were drawn in attempt to address gerrymandering issues across North Carolina. As a result, District 11 gained the entirety of Asheville, which had previously been carved out.

The new District 11 includes Buncombe, Haywood, Yancey, Transylvania, Jackson, Swain, Macon, Cherokee, Clay, Graham, Henderson, Burke, Madison, Mitchel, McDowell, Polk, Avery, and portions of Rutherford counties.

Congress requires representatives to live within North Carolina but places no requirement on whether representatives have to actually live within the district they represent. This makes it perfectly legal for six candidates currently vying for the District 11 seat who live outside of the district lines to run for the seat

Based on records with the North Carolina Board of Elections, of those six, one candidate, Gina Collias lives outside District 11. Collias lists a Kings Mountain address, which would place her in the newly redrawn 5th district. Prior to the new Maps, neither Collias nor Morris Davis would have been within District 11.

Four Republicans register outside of District 11 – Wayne King (Kings Mountain) and Joseph Osborne (Hickory).

Dillon Gentry filed for office listing a Banner Elk address. The zip code on the State Board of Elections website registers as District 3, however, it appears the zip code listed is inaccurate. Banner Elk, which is near the Tennessee border, is in Congressional District 5. Albert Wiley filed for office and lists Salter Path, NC as his address, which is District 3 and is located on an island off the coast of North Carolina.

Republican candidates who do reside in District 11 included, Lynda Bennett, Matthew Burril, Madison Cawthron, Jim Davis, Daniel Driscoll, Steven Fekete, Chuck

Arched and Vance Patterson.

Green Party Candidate Tamara Zwinak lists a Macon County address with the state placing her within District 11.

Tracey Debruahl filed for office as a Libertarian candidate and according to her Asheville address, will be in District 11 according to the new maps.

Currently, Democrat candidates include, Gina Collias, Morris Davis, Michael O'Shea, Phillip Price, and Steve Woodsmall.

Republicans are Chuck Arched, Lynda Bennett, Matthew Burril, Madison Cawthron, Jim Davis, Daniel Driscoll, Steven Fekete, Dillon Gentry, Wayne King, Joseph Osborne, and Vance Patterson.

Representing the Green Party is Tamara Zwinak.

Representing the Libertarian Party is Tracey Debruahl.

Of the 19 candidates running for office, five will appear on the ballot in March for the Democratic Primary.

The primary is March 3, 2020.

The deadline to register and/or for party changes for the primary is Feb. 7, 2020.

Live via Satellite, the MET Opera's production of Wozzeck is Sat. Jan. 11

The Highlands Performing Arts Center will screen, Live via Satellite, the MET Opera's production of Wozzeck by Berg on Saturday, January 11 at 12:55pm.

Berg's 20th-century shocker stars baritone Peter Mattei in the title role, with Music Director Yannick Nézet-Séguin on the podium and soprano Elza van den Heever as the long-suffering Marie. Groundbreaking visual artist and director William Kentridge unveils a bold new staging set in an apocalyptic wasteland.

Based on an unfinished play by Georg Büchner, this tale of marital betrayal, social rejection, and cruel militarism in a bleak German village foretells of devastation on both local and global scales.

There will be a pre-opera discussion beginning at 12:30pm. Run time is 2 hours.

Tickets are available online: www.highlandspac.org or www.highlandspacperformingarts.com or at the door. Highlands Performing Arts Center, 507 Chestnut Street, Highlands NC

To read or not to read

Do people still read books? It depends on whom you ask. A Wall Street Journal Article posed the question differently: "Does the Book Have a Future?" I discovered that we've been bemoaning the death of reading for at least a century. The author of the article regularly reviews books for the WSJ and begins by referencing an essay from 1902, "The Lost Art of Reading," in which, you guessed it, the essayist expresses concern that people don't read as they once did.

In surfing the internet, an activity often blamed for the supposed death of reading, I discovered that 74% of adults have read at least one book in the last twelve months. Book is defined as "book in any form."

Those who worry about our reading habits seem more concerned that the internet has lessened our "capacity to focus on lengthy works of literature."

As a former English teacher, I'm happy if folks read books, period. I read literary fiction, to be sure, but I'm addicted to mysteries and have spent many more of my available reading hours on books by John Sandford, Robert B. Parker, Michael Connelly and the like than those by Iain Pears, Elizabeth Kostova, and Ian McEwan.

Can you recall the days when we worried that children watched too much TV instead of going out to play? Or perhaps instead of reading. Today, we worry we spend too much time in front of our phones, tablets, computers or TVs. What will the worry be in the future?

What I don't know is how many folks are avid readers, as I describe myself. I read at least two books a week as opposed to one a year. I also read excerpts from the WSJ every day and daily news alerts that somehow show up on my tablet. Don't ask me how.

How did I become an avid reader? How did I become a person who wants to shoot herself if she's sitting in a doctor's office without a book? Blame it on my parents. My mother read to me when I was a child. She took me to the library even though we lived in NYC and had to ride the bus to get there. Santa brought me books. If my father didn't have a book to read, he'd pull a volume of the encyclopedia from our bookcase. They taught me well, and yet they worried about my being a bookworm.

What are you missing if you don't read books? Is it detrimental to spend more time reading newspapers and magazines than reading books? Either habit can build vocabulary. Either habit can expose you to new ideas or expand your horizons. Is reading "The Hobbit" better for you than reading a newspaper? One is fantasy, and some would argue the other sometimes borders on it. One may distract you from the grind of daily life, and the other may depress you no end.

Given the option to read or not to read, what would you choose? If the answer is to read, what would you read? Books, newspapers, magazines? Fiction or nonfiction? I will always choose to read and to read books. "So many books, so little time." That's me.

The health insurance issue during retirement

One of the challenges people face when they crossover from working to not working is obtaining affordable health insurance. Unfortunately, people who retire or become self-employed prior to age 65 may be in for a rude awakening.

Because of my profession, I spend an inordinate amount of time following the markets and politics. While I am a political junkie (those closest to me would attest), I'm most interested in legislation that would directly or indirectly affect mine and my client's financial situations. Part of my job is to keep them abreast of any changes that would cause us to rethink the strategies we've implemented.

I've been particularly interested in health care legislation for two reasons; 1) as a now 57-year-old self-employed individual with pre-existing conditions, the cost of health insurance is one of my largest monthly expenses (and that doesn't include out of pocket). And 2), because many of my clients retired in their mid to late 50's, I need to provide them guidance. Unfortunately, other than employer-based health insurance, I've found few alternatives.

This issue seems to be everywhere. Every Democrat candidate is promising a fix, some are measured and more realistic, others are not. All will require more government involvement and even higher deficits. At the same time, I am reminded the GOP crashed and burned on the promise "repeal and replace." They controlled both chambers of Congress and the Whitehouse and still couldn't get it done. Meanwhile, medical expenses are the leading cause of bankruptcy in the U.S.

What really bothers me is that after 18 years of searching for solutions, I still don't know how as a nation we fix it (or at least fix it without destroying quality health care). Emergency rooms are not doctor's offices and when people don't seek care because of the cost, it eventually costs more. Most people don't think a VA Hospital type of system is the solution, and our government's ability to be

Why I love Willie Nelson and Loving the Willies Among Us

By Milton Ready

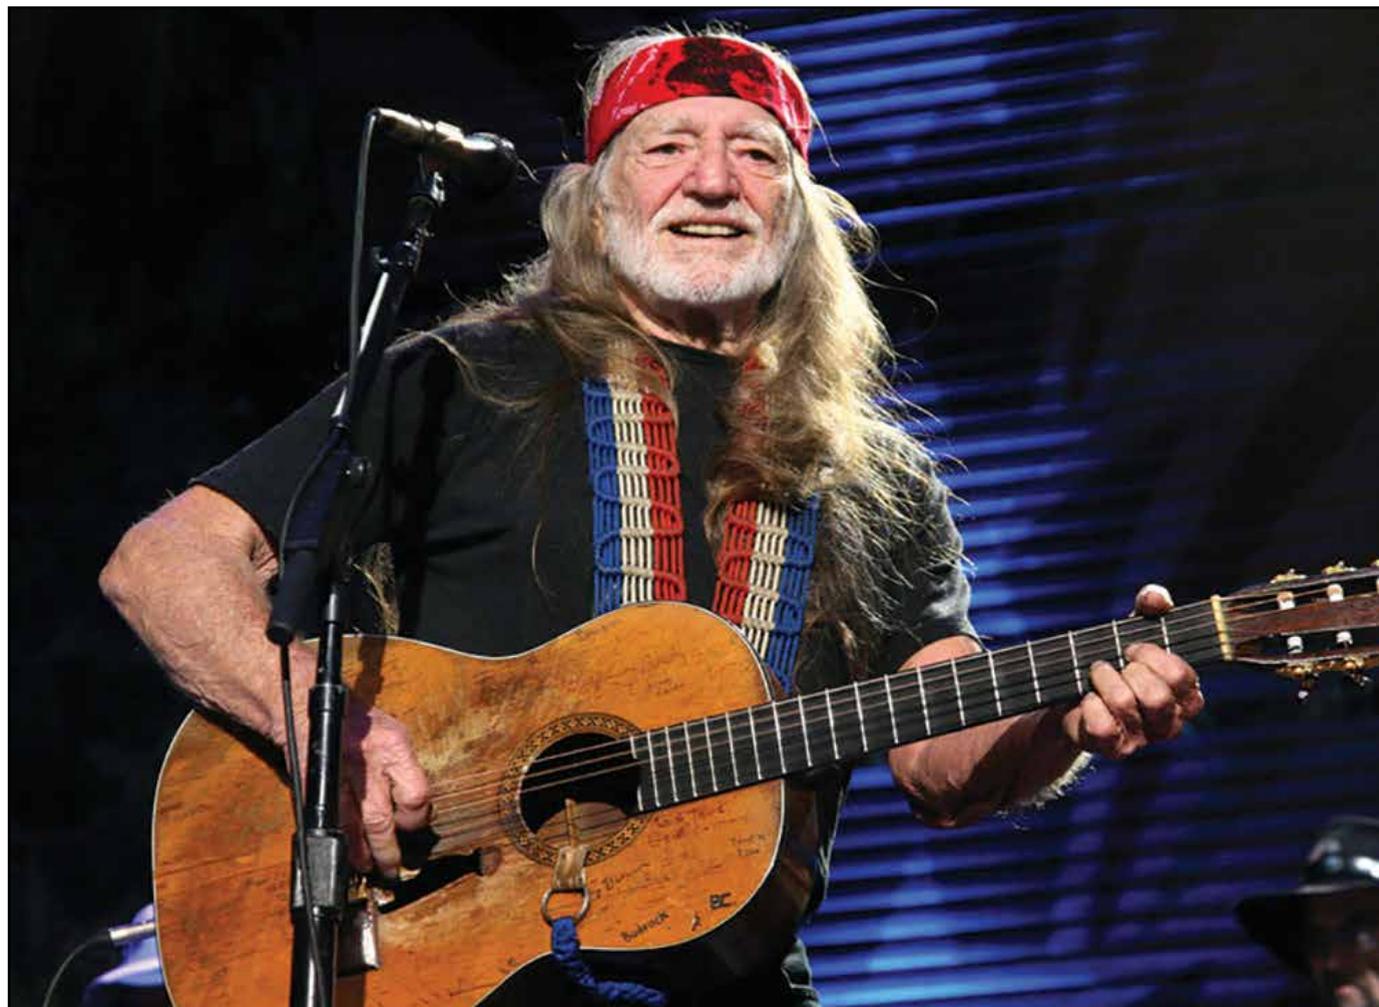

First, Willie's ugly. While this might seem offensive, even socially incorrect to many, I'm not sure Willie knows or that it matters to him. In Willie's case, what you see is what you get, no funeral parlor tans, no combed over hair, no Botox, no stylist, and assuredly not a dresser. In a Kardashian reality world dominated by Foxy news anchors and scruffy Brad Pitt look-alikes, Willie comes across as a timeless back cover for Easy Riders or Billy Bob Thornton's better-looking relative.

Willie's also ageless. In fact, he's like Brad Pitt's body double in The Curious Life of Benjamin Button only he was born old and stayed that way. Willie once hitchhiked cross-country to Portland, Oregon, but, unlike Brad Pitt in Thelma and Louise, no one picked him up. A kind-hearted trucker finally bought him a meal and a ticket to Portland. Along the way, Willie began a lifetime habit of sleeping at rest stops and in ditches, surely part of the inspiration for his song and life, On the Road Again.

Like many of us, Willie's worked every job imaginable and some worse to make ends meet. He once trimmed both trees in west Texas, got beat up at a local roadhouse where he worked as a bouncer and also picked a tune or two, sang, and danced with too many floozy ladies for quarters, sold auto parts he cannibalized from junkyards, made saddles with uneven stirrups, worked in Texas but not Louisiana oilfields, hawked vacuum cleaners he couldn't work and Bibles he did read, sold some of his best hits like Hello Walls and Crazy for a song, about $25 in his day, and became one of the most successful outlaws of all time although he little cared.

Willie possesses one of the best everyday, homespun voices imaginable, one that allows him to sing duets with everyone from Dolly Parton to Ray Charles. He made all sound better except me when I tried as a voiceover. He once belted out a duet with Rosalynn Carter in the White House and, afterward, studied Bible verses with her husband, President Jimmy Carter. A playful yet probably invented story had Willie offering the President a joint if he would explain what Revelations meant.

Years ago I briefly met Willie Nelson in Pasadena, Texas, introduced by my cousin, Smokey Stover, a disk jockey and country and western singer who led an equally immoderate life. Cousin Smokey called Willie an "Injun," curious to me since Willie had red hair, a few freckles, and knew only two words of "Injun," Kemo Sabe. In the end, Cousin Smokey never left Pasadena for greater fame while Willie made it all the way to the Austin city limits with his Indian headband. He still wears it.

Today Willie spends his time on his hardscrabble Texas ranch or else at his self-sustaining community in Hawaii with fellow Texans and neighbors Kris Kristofferson, Woody Harrelson, and Owen Wilson. They have great block parties. Willie still plucks his guitar, Trigger, rides his favorite horse called Giddy up, and drives his old VW convertible, Buggy, the one you see in commercials, on his own biodiesel fuel. Like his brand of "Willie's Reserve," it has a secret power ingredient.

Like many of us, Willie's had trouble with tax collectors, the IRS, relationships, children, and figuring out life and women, all the stuff of country and western tunes.

If he has an ego, he likely left it in a ditch somewhere on the road, probably around Austin. If critics pan his acting ability, he simply appears in more favorite if forgettable movies like Honeysuckle Rose or The Red Headed Stranger or in sitcoms like The Dukes of Hazzard. Willie's also been in a lot of late-night shows, always early for him, particularly with Stephen Colbert and David Letterman. When he retired, I think Letterman tried to adopt Willie's gritty, bearded, homeless look. Willie wears it better.

Why all this about Willie Nelson? You will find Willie's wherever you live, some equally ageless, adventurous and charitable, even teaching Sunday-school and sometimes as better-looking counterparts only their lives might be less in Technicolor and more in sepia tones. We should love and treasure all the eccentric old Willies among us.

Haywood Community College joins WCU for university direct-entry admission program

Western Carolina University and Haywood Community College made a significant step toward a more seamless transition for students seeking additional higher education opportunities through the establishment of a direct-entry admission program.

WCU Chancellor Kelli R. Brown and HCC president Barbara Parker signed a memorandum of understanding establishing the Catamount Navigator Program during a ceremony Thursday, Dec. 19, in the board room of H.F. Robinson Administration Building on the WCU campus.

The agreement builds upon the existing North Carolina Comprehensive Articulation Agreement governing the transfer of credits between the North Carolina Community College System and the University of North Carolina System. In addition, the NC Promise tuition plan, which reduces the cost of in-state tuition to $500 per semester at WCU and two other UNC System institutions, has resulted in a significant increase in the number of students transferring to WCU from community colleges and other four-year schools.

"We want to encourage and help students who graduate from our community college partners and are looking to further their education as Catamounts," said Brown. "This memorandum of understanding with Haywood Community College is another step toward a more seamless process for that to happen, and it further strengthens our regional connections."

The signing follows similar WCU agreements with Asheville-Buncombe Technical Community College, Southwestern Community College and Blue Ridge Community College made earlier this year.

"We appreciate everything that Western Carolina University has done and is doing for our students. This is a milestone in our longstanding and beneficial partnership," said Parker, a Haywood County native who will retire at the end of this year. HCC's incoming president, Shelley White, also attended the ceremony.

Haywood Community College, located in nearby Clyde, was founded in 1965 and is known for its professional crafts and natural resources curriculum. The fish and wildlife management associate degree, accredited by the North American Wildlife Technology Association, is the only one offered statewide. HCC offers two-year college transfer degrees with options available in associate degree in arts, associate degree in science and associate degree in engineering.

To participate in the Catamount Nav-igator Program, qualifying students must meet several conditions, including:

- Be a currently enrolled student at HCC in a degree-seeking capacity.
- Submit WCU application for admission and records by the university deadline.
- Submit application fee or waiver and fulfill all commitment action steps.
- Be in good standing at the community college and other institutions attended.
- Demonstrate good citizenship and conduct.
- Earn and maintain a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.50 at HCC and a minimum GPA of 2.20 in the most recently completed academic term.
- Earn an associate degree from HCC in a college transfer program or in an applied program for which an articulation agreement exists.
- Enroll at WCU within one academic year (within the next two regular terms or fall/spring semesters) of completion of the associate degree.

Although the program guarantees admission to WCU for those graduates who meet the requirements, it does not guarantee admission into a specific degree program. Some programs of study at WCU have their own programmatic admission criteria, standards, policies, processes and deadlines.

For more information about how to transfer to WCU, visit the website transfer.wcu.edu. For more information about applying to HCC, visit www.haywood.edu/admissions.

good stewards our tax dollars is dubious at best. At the same time, we also know there is no such thing as "free" healthcare and doctors and hospitals are often forced to overcharge insurance companies (i.e. us) to make up for a lack of Medicare reimbursements. But most people I know don't hate their Medicare either.

As an advisor since 1999, I've been both employed and self-employed, so I've lived this. During the years I've been self-employed, obtaining reasonably priced health insurance has been a massive struggle. While I'm fortunate to be able to afford the cost, the fact that my premiums and deductibles are larger than most middle-class mortgages, is a tough pill to swallow (pun intended).

Unless you qualify for a subsidy, the Affordable Care Act has made private insurance anything but affordable. In all fairness though, it has provided people like me "access" to private health insurance. But private insurance premiums have skyrocketed and for many having access to something you can't afford doesn't help.

My current COBRA coverage ends this May and I'm girding myself for what's coming. As an example, the individual Florida Blue policy I purchased in 2014, (the first year I was able with pre-existing conditions under the ACA), the premium was $1666/month for me and my wife. This was an "all co-pay" plan meaning after paying a co-pay everything was covered 100%. It seemed expensive at the time but looking back it was a great policy and if nothing else, it made the expense of health care predictable. That same policy in 2020 is $4300/month.

Another example is my son and his wife. He has returned to school and she is a second-grade teacher. Health insurance for her is paid for by the county, but if she added him and their 9-month-old, her premium would increase to 50% of her take home pay.

Older entrepreneurs are (and probably should be) reluctant to start a business because what if they get sick? How much could be added to our GDP and tax revenue if a person could start a business without worrying about being ruined by medical bills, and as a business owner, every dollar I spend on my health insurance is a dollar I could use to pay an employee. It also makes hiring difficult because the benefit packages small businesses can offer can't compete because of the cost.

If your employer is willing and able to pay a portion of your premiums, you're probably ok, but the lack of economic security and mobility for the working poor and self-employed has a chilling effect on our overall economy.

I'm a free market guy and I believe in honest capitalism, but in my opinion the system, as it stands right now, is unsustainable. One solution I'm starting to like is giving people like me the option of buying into Medicare. Don't raise my taxes, just let me simply buy in prior to age 65. Despite my pre-existing conditions, I'm probably healthier than most people on Medicare and would help "bend the cost curve" so to speak. I'm not sure that's the solution, but if the government offered that to me right now, along with a supplement and the right price, I'd be all over it.

New Pastor of Family Ministries at First Baptist Church Highlands

First Baptist Church in Highlands is excited about the O'Neill family joining them in their labors for reaching out to our community and making a difference in people's lives.

Scott's role at First Baptist Church as Pastor of Family Ministries is to develop a strong devotional life and discipleship for the congregation. His ministry will focus on strengthening the individual families and singles in their walk with the Lord. But it will also emphasize the organic nature of the church as a family, building strong relationships from cradle to end of life and our mutual responsibility of care and encouragement within the Body as a whole.

Unlike other traditional approaches of segmented ministry to generational groups within the church, his work will promote an organic understanding and intergenerational spirit of mutual support and ministry to each other as a family.

Scott O'Neill was born and raised in the Philadelphia, PA area in 1969. In the first 30 years of his life he will tell you that he never heard the Gospel. Not until he moved to central Illinois did he first encounter the Truth of the Gospel.

He would receive the gift of salvation in February of 2012, trusting the Lord Jesus Christ alone for his salvation and joyfully gave his life to Him.

Scott worked with Caterpillar, Inc., Peoria, Ill. in Project Management, training, & implementation of the CAT Global Minestar Mining Technology.

Affirmed in his call to preach Christ during this time, Scott was led to pursue seminary studies at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary with graduation this Fall with a M.A. in Theology.

Scott is married to Christy, his wife of 15 years, and is blessed with three beautiful children. Finn is 12, Lottie is 10 (adopted from China), and Sam is 4 (adopted from Arizona).

Christy is a gifted Sunday School teacher and passionate about building relationships founded in Christ. She is also a public accountant.

The O'Neill's share a common heart for adoption as they continue to serve the Lord.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA General Court of Justice Forty Third Prosecutorial District

ASHLEY HORNSBY WELCH
District Attorney

On Monday, December 30, 2019, the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte published a list of several clergy the diocese found to have been “credibly accused” of child sexual abuse since the diocese’s creation in 1972. Of these clergy members, two worked in the 43rd Prosecutorial District in the 1970s and 1980s.

According to the diocese, Adelbert “Del” Holmes was “credibly accused” of committing child molestation against three minors in Murphy, North Carolina, in 1976 while he was a clergy member.

The Catholic church became aware of the allegations against Holmes in 1988. Holmes was removed from the ministry in 1991. He died in 2013. Holmes was a clergy member at the St. William Catholic Church in Murphy and the Immaculate Conception Catholic Mission in Hayesville. There is no recorded documentation that the Catholic church notified local law enforcement nor the District Attorney’s Office of these allegations when the church was notified in 1988.

Unfortunately, the lack of notification by the Catholic church to law enforcement authorities during that time period is not surprising. Holmes died in 2013, and his death prevents the District Attorney’s Office from being able to prosecute him for crimes he is alleged to have committed in 1976.

Clergy member Al Behm was “credibly accused” of child sexual offenses in Kentucky during the 1970s. Behm went on to serve as the first campus minister at Western Carolina University in the 1980s. According to the diocese, Behm has not been accused of committing crimes while at Western Carolina. Behm left the ministry in 1993.

There is not a statute of limitations for felonies in North Carolina. If you have been a victim of child sexual abuse, wish to make a report, and explore the possibility of prosecution, please contact your local law enforcement agency.

Last year, the District Attorney’s Office successfully prosecuted a former Episcopal priest for crimes he committed on children in Waynesville over 20 years ago.

“If you have been a victim of child sexual abuse, we are committed to seeking justice for you. North Carolina does not have a statute of limitations on these atrocious crimes which means we are able to prosecute individuals when there is probable cause even decades after the crime.”

– District Attorney
